A claim by a company against its directors for misfeasance is a chose in action and can be sold under this section 6. As to the Court's jurisdiction to sanction the reconstruction of a company by sale of its assets to a new company or to another company, see the cases noted below 7.

Where the official liquidator sells a decree standing in the name of the directors by auction, and the liquidator assigns the decree to the purchaser with the sanction of the Court, the principle of O. 21, r. 90 C. P. C. do not apply and the Court cannot set aside the sale 8.

Company's documents.

Cl. (d). Documents executed under this clause are the company's documents, and a covenant in a lease to a company against assignment is broken by an assignment by the liquidator 9.

Where a fixed deposit receipt issued by a bank which has since gone into liquidation is in the name of several persons and is not payable to "either or survivor," the liquidator is not bound to pay the dividend to any one or more of the joint holders of the receipt without obtaining a discharge from all the holders 10.

Contracts.

When a liquidator appointed by the Court performs a contract of the company without disclaimer or purports to make a new contract on its behalf, there is no presumption that he does so in his personal capacity, even though he does not describe himself as liquidator; and his position in this respect is not altered by the new s. 230A which gives him the right to disclaim any contract which he thinks onerous 1. "In my view," observed Lawrence J., "the position of a liquidator appointed by the Court is not the same as that of a receiver appointed by the Court. A liquidator is the agent of the company 2, a receiver is not 3. It is true, both are appointed and can be dismissed by the Court and both control the assets of the company and may have to carry out the contracts of the company; but the liquidator acts for and in the interests of the company, whereas the receiver and manager acts in the interests of the debenture-holders and not for the company" 4.

Although liquidation proceedings may be expected to come to an end at any time, it does not excuse the liquidator from fixing the period of employment in the case of an employee, and where no term is fixed, an employee on a monthly salary is entitled to notice when his services are to be terminated 5.

Disclaimer.

Where a liquidator makes an application for leave to disclaim an onerous lease, the Court may properly balance the advantages and disadvantages of a disclaimer to be gained by the liquidator in relation to the assets, and by the persons affected by the disclaimer. Where lessors who are entitled to appear would suffer substantial injury if the disclaimer were allowed, the Court will, in the exercise of its discretion, disallow it 6.

Set off.

Cl. (e). "The debt due to the liquidator is", observed Jessel, M. R., "distributable among the creditors, and the debt due to the individual from the company would only rank with the view of obtaining a dividend for the creditor for the amount due. The two debts are not applicable to the same purpose, and could not properly be made subject of set off" 7. In the case of insolvency of a contributory who is also a creditor, the debt may however be set off against calls under s. 161. But until the insolvency there is no right of set off 8. A bankruptcy notice must be in the name of the company and not of the liquidator 9.

Where a creditor is a member of a partnership firm, a debt alleged to be due by the latter to the company cannot be set off against the separate debt due by the company to the partner 10.

Where the set off claimed is not legally recoverable being time barred and the parties do not fill the same character in respect of the set off as they do in respect of the suit, set off will not be granted 11.

Negotiable instruments.

Cl. (f). As to the Court's sanction to the liquidator accepting or negotiating bills, see the cases noted below 1. The power given to liquidators to endorse promissory notes, being a power given by the statute, cannot be delegated in the absence of a statutory provision for such delegation. Consequently, an endorsement of a promissory note by the agents appointed by the liquidators conveys no title in law to the assignees. The assignment being void ab initio, no subsequent ratification by the liquidator can validate it 2.

After dissolution of the company the liquidator has no power to indorse a promissory note 3.

Meaning of "assets."

Cl. (g). The assets include all contributions which the liquidator is entitled to get from the members past or present, as well as all assets which have been misappropriated as against creditors 4. The realized assets of a company divided among the shareholders in pursuance of a resolution are assets within the meaning of this clause 5.

In England it has been held that in the winding up of an insurance company the deposit made with the Government forms assets of the company available for distribution among all its creditors generally, and is not primarily applicable to the satisfaction of the claims of the policy-holders 6. But this is not so in India; see s. 8, Insurance Act IV of 1938.

Where in response to an advertisement for a sale of a company's property, a person offered either to take a mortgage or to purchase the property on certain terms, he will not be allowed to act otherwise than in the way promised, first, as the liquidator has acted in the mannar suggested and has thereby changed his position; secondly, the offer having been accepted should be regarded as a valid and binding contract 7.

Letters of administration.

Cl. (h). The official liquidator need not take out letters of administration to the estate of a deceased shareholder before settling the list of contributories 8.

Compromise.

Cl. (i). The liquidator cannot consider a mere matter of pity or mercy. He must make out a case that the compromise will be beneficial to the company, for example, that there is a contested claim and if the compromise is entered into, the payment would be very much sooner than if the claim was contested, or on similar grounds. The Court has no jurisdiction to compel an unwilling liquidator to compromise a debt due to the company in liquidation 9. In Pearson's case 10 the Court of appeal has held that the Court has no more power to compel the liquidator to accept a compromise than to compel an ordinary suitor to take less than what is due to him. The only power is in the liquidator with the sanction of the Court. There is no power in the Court to order a compromise, whether the liquidator recommends it or not.

Distribution of assets.

The contributions and assets with other properties of the company form a common fund to be applied in the manner directed by the Act 1 after satisfying the claims of its secured creditors who are not bound to avail themselves of the winding up proceedings, but may pursue their own remedies 2. The liquidator has, with the sanction of the Court, power to distribute shares of other companies forming part of the liquidating company's assets instead of selling them 3.

Before any distribution of surplus among the contributories the liquidator ought to take every means to satisfy himself that all creditors are paid, not only by advertizing, but by writing to those creditors of whose existence he knows, and by asking them if they have any claims against the company 4. A liquidator who has failed to see that the assets are applied in paying debts is liable to a creditor who has suffered damages 4. This rule would apply even before dissolution when the default is the result of neglect of duty, even though not wilful 5. In the undernoted case the Judicial Committee observed : "But that it should be regarded as a normal course of liquidation justifiable without explanation ; that a liquidator should pay the creditors merely a dividend on their debts, when surplus assets large in amount remain in hand, and should then allow the contributories without definition of their interests therein to take possession for themselves of these surplus assets seems to the Board a serious matter, and it is necessary, their Lordships think, to call attention to its impropriety" 6. "The duties and responsibilities of the liquidator are as serious in the liquidation of a private company as of any other" 6.

It is the duty of the liquidators to decide what is properly due from the company to various claimants, and the liquidators are entitled to go behind decrees which they consider were not properly obtained 7.

Subject to the rights of the secured creditors and certain other creditors who are to be paid in priority, the assets in a winding up are subject to a trust for the benefit of all the creditors and must be distributed on a footing of equality. The assets include all contributions which the liquidator is entitled to obtain from members or persons who have been members within a certain time before the winding up commenced, and all assets which have been misapplied and misappropriated as against the creditors and which a creditor has a right to have recouped 8.

Creditor's remedy.

When the company is dissolved the statutory remedy of the creditors is gone, but the duty of the liquidator remains, and a contributory or creditor has a remedy at common law for injury caused to him by a breach of the liquidator's statutory duty 9.

The liquidator is not however liable for loss occasioned by the felonious acts of servants if properly selected 10.

Payment by the liquidator of statute-barred debts is improper and the money must be returned 1.

"In a winding up", observed Sir W. Page-Wood V. C., "the liquidator acts not merely for creditors, but for contributories and for the companies also. At the same time Legislature stopped short of saying that a winding up should be a bankruptcy. The liquidator does not act more for the creditors than he does for the company" 2. The liquidator is only the company's agent appointed by the Court and there is no parallel between his position and that of the trustee of a bankrupt or of the sheriff as to property taken in execution, for the purpose of dealing with the company's property. The cases in bankruptcy in which it has been held that a trustee in a bankruptcy can assign free from the bankrupt's covenant against assignment without licence depend on the circumstance that the bankrupt's leasehold interest vests in his trustee by operation of law, so that he is not an assign of the bankrupt and consequently not bound by the covenant. These cases therefore have no application to a liquidator, because the company's leasehold interest remains vested in the company after a winding up order and the liquidator acts on behalf of the company in assigning it 3.

Liquidator's position.

The official liquidator is also an agent of the Court for the purpose of liquidation. A decree obtained by the company before liquidation does not vest in the liquidator and he cannot take any proceedings in execution in his own name. Where such a decree is transferred to another Court for execution before liquidation, it can be executed by the transferee Court after liquidation on the application of the liquidator in the name of the company 4.

His duty.

The voluntary liquidator is bound to get all contracts for the allotment of shares otherwise than for cash filed with the registrar; for such a liquidator is also an officer of the company 5. The official liquidator should not become partisan in a dispute between two sets of contributories concerning the propriety of an order from which alone his authority proceeds. His only duty on an appeal against such an order is to take a position of complete impartiality and in the interests of the whole body of his constituent contributories, to be ready to inform the Court of any facts and circumstances in relation to the company's affairs about which he might be asked 6. In this case their Lordships of the Judicial Committee severely condemned the partisan activities of the official liquidator. In such cases the liquidator should be assisted by a vakil equally dissociated from either side 7. Their Lordships strongly deprecated ex parte orders giving the official liquidator leave to oppose the appeal which enabled him, free of expense to the petitioners in relief to their responsibilities and already at a cost far in excess of any possible interest of theirs in the assets, to fight their battle with non-success and at what must be the inordinate expense to their opponents. "It is to be hoped", observed their Lordships 8, "that orders like that of 14th November, 1928 will not in future be lightly made in the course of an Indian winding up."

The official liquidator representing a company is in no different position from any one else against whom a stranger or a third party makes a claim. His only duty is to consider, and if he thiks it an admissible claim, to admit, and if he thinks it an inadmissible claim to reject it; and accordingly he is not bound to call on the claimant to appear before him 1.

Lending company's money.

"It is highly improper for any liquidator," observed Lord Romilly, "to employ any of the company's money in his hands in any loan whatever. Of course, if he does, and if any profit is made out of it, that profit will belong to the owners of the money. It must never however be forgotten that no money can be lent on loan without some risk even for a short time. If therefore the persons to whom the loans are made should fail, the loss would fall with the greatest severity on the creditors and contributories of the company" 2.

This omnibus clause (i) does not however authorize the official liquidator to make a reference to private arbitration of the dues of the company 3.

Applicability of the section.

This section is, by virtue of s. 276, applicable to an unregistered company wound up under s. 271. So in the bankruptcy of a contributory of an unregistered company the liquidator may prove for the estimated amount of future calls 4.

Discretion of official liquidator.

180. The Court may provide by any order that the official liquidator may exercise any of the above powers without the sanction or intervention of the Court, and, where an official liquidator is provisionally appointed, may limit and restrict his powers by the order appointing him.

See notes to the previous section.

Provision for legal assistance to official liquidator.

181. The official liquidator may, with the sanction of the Court, appoint an advocate, attorney or pleader entitled to appear before the Court to assist him in the performance of his duties: Provided that, where the official liquidator is an attorney, he shall not appoint his partner, unless the latter consents to act without remuneration.

Employment of solicitor.

In liquidation ordinarily the appointment of the petitioning creditor's solicitors as solicitors for the liquidator is favoured especially where they are acquainted for sometime with the proceedings 5. In complicated cases the liquidator should be advised by a vakil dissociated from either side 6. Although the liquidator may employ a solicitor with the sanction of the Court, he is not justified in obtaining ex parte sanction. He is bound to have regard to the directions mentioned in s. 183 7, i.e., he should take the opinion of the creditors and contributories. The sanction to institute or defend legal proceedings does not dispense with the necessity of obtaining express sanction to the employment of a particular solicitor 1. The interests of the creditors are involved in the selection by the liquidator of a firm of solicitors who were not previously concerned in the proceedings. Such selection is always a matter of some importance and the Court accedes to an invitation to re-consider its ex parte decision on significant facts being brought to its notice 2. As to the form of authority, see re Vavasour 3.

If the liquidator employs a solicitor, the former is not personally liable to him 4. The solicitor has a lien on any funds recovered through his instrumentality 5, and may obtain a charging order in respect of them 6. But the solicitor has no lien on documents coming into his possession after commencement of the winding up in respect of a debt existing before the winding up 7.

Liquidator to keep books containing proceedings of meetings and to submit account of his receipts to Court.

182. (1) The official liquidator of a company which is being wound up by the Court shall keep, in manner prescribed, proper books in which he shall cause to be made entries or minutes of proceedings at meetings, and of such other matters as may be prescribed, and any creditor or contributory may, subject to the control of the Court, personally or by his agent inspect any such books.

(2) Every official liquidator shall, at such times as may be prescribed but not less than twice in each year during his tenure of office, present to the Court an account of his receipts and payments as such liquidator.

(3) The account shall be in the prescribed form, shall be made in duplicate, and shall be verified by a declaration in the prescribed form.

(4) The Court shall cause the account to be audited in such manner as it thinks fit and for the purpose of the audit the liquidator shall furnish the Court with such vouchers and information as the Court may require, and the Court may at any time require the production of and inspect any books or accounts kept by the liquidator.

(5) When the account has been audited, one copy thereof shall be filed and kept by the Court, and the other copy shall be delivered to the registrar for filing, and each copy shall be open to the inspection of any creditor, or of any person interested.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words in italics have been added to sub-s. (1).

Where a person made a deposit to a company as security for the performance of a contract, but stipulated that in the event of the company raising a loan secured by a debenture or mortgage, the sum deposited was to be forthwith invested in Government securities and to be ear-marked in some manner satisfactory to the depositor, it was held that this did not create a fiduciary relation and no preference could be claimed by the depositor in respect of the assets of the company in the hands of its liquidator 1.

Sub-s. (5). This sub-section does not apply to a case in which the act or decision of the official liquidator has been performed or made in pursuance of the Court's express sanction 2.

The petitioning creditors are persons interested in the appointment of the solicitors for the official liquidator and ought to be deemed to be persons aggrieved by the act of the official liquidator under this sub-section. They can therefore apply for reviewing ex parte order appointing a particular firm as attorneys 3.

Ordinary Powers of Court.

Settlement of list of contributories and application of assets.

184. (1) As soon as may be after making a winding up order, the Court shall settle a list of contributories, with power to rectify the register of members in all cases where rectification is required in pursuance of this act, and shall cause the assets of the company to be collected and applied in discharge of its liabilities.

(2) In settling the list of contributories, the Court shall distinguish between persons who are contributories in their own right and persons who are contributories as being representatives of or liable for the debts of others.

S.86 C.P.C.

S. 86 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply to proceedings under this section. It cannot be said that when a list of contributories is to be settled under this section, the Court is starting any proceedings analogous to that of a civil suit brought by a private person against a sovereign Prince or ruling Chief. It is not therefore necessary that before the list is settled the consent of the Governor General under s. 86 C. P. C. should be obtained 4.

Court's power discretionary.

This section incorporates s. 38. On an application under this section the Court has power to decide any question relating to the title of the aggrieved person to have his name entered in or omitted from the register of members and generally to decide any question necessary or expedient to be decided for the rectification of the register. The exercise of the jurisdiction is discretionary having regard to the person who is the applicant and to all the facts and circumstances of the case 5.

As to who are liable to be settled on the list of contributories, see ss. 156 to 161 and notes thereto. The liquidator can settle the list of contributories, but he cannot rectify the register of members without leave of the Court 1. With the special leave of the Court he can rectify the register either at the time of the original settlement of the list 2, or subsequently 3, and the power conferred by the section is not limited to rectification for the purpose of settling the list of contributories 4. Where a certain bank was appointed liquidator and notice signed by the manager of the bank was sent to a person stating that his name was included in the list of contributories, it was held that the notice was valid 5. As to rectification of the register, see s. 38 and notes thereto.

Powers of the Court & liquidator.

When limitation is specifically provided for in the Rules for filing objections to a notice, the specific provision must prevail and not the general provision in the Limitation Act 5.

Limitation.

After completion of the preliminary list of contributories the official liquidator will give notice to the persons entered on the list of the day appointed by the Court for hearing objections 6. The Court on the day appointed will hear the objections, even if the Rules framed by the High Court under s. 246 require that the objector should first get his name entered in a book before the hearing of the objections 7.

List of contributories.

There is nothing in the Court of Wards Act which conflicts with the Companies Act in the matter of allowing an application for the varying of the list of contributories by placing upon it the name of the Collector in lieu of the name of a person whose estate has been taken over by the Court of Wards 8.

The liability of a registered shareholder to contribute is a prima facie liability only, it being open to him to show that although his name was on the register, he did not agree to become a member, nor was he cognizant of the registration of his name 9. But if the person whose name is duly entered on the register as a member on the date of commencement of the winding up seeks to have his name removed on the ground that although he agreed to become a member the agreement is voidable at his option, it is necessary that he should, before the winding up commenced, have definitely and effectively repudiated the agreement 9 and followed up his repudiation by active measures to have his name removed from the register 10, except where there is some agreement which exonerates the member from the necessity of taking such steps 11. The same principles apply whether the winding up is compulsory or voluntary or under supervision of the Court 12.

Prima facie liability.

Notice of forfeiture.

A mere notice that if the shareholder does not pay the call in respect of allotment by a certain date the shares allotted would be forfeited without further notice, does not effect forfeiture without a resolution actually forfeiting the shares. Such a shareholder cannot object to being included in the list of contributories[1]. See notes to reg. 24 post.

The liability of the legal representatives of deceased shareholders to contribute is limited to the extent of the assets, if any, coming into their hands[2].

Certificate—where no estoppel by.

Where a person knows that the shares in respect of which he remains on the register were not paid for or paid up, he cannot rely on the share certificate stating they were fully paid up as an estoppel; so he must remain on the list of contributories[3].

Substitution of names.

Where a person with the intention of deceiving the company takes shares in the name of a fictitious person or of some person without his authority, the liquidator can place his name on the list of contributories, and the Court will rectify the register and if necessary the list of contributories[4]. But rectification by substituting the name of a beneficiary for that of his registered trustee cannot be obtained[5]. The liquidator can substitute a transferor for the transferee where the latter is an infant at the time the winding up commences[5]. The liquidator cannot however substitute the name of a husband for that of his wife, although she has no separate estate and the shares were given to her by him[6].

A father purchasing shares in the name of his minor son is personally liable for the shares, and the list of contributories can be altered by substituting the father's name for that of the son[7].

Shareholder's duty and right.

The shareholder who seeks to be discharged from liability must have repudiated the contract and have got his name off the register subject to the qualification that if he has, before the commencement of the winding up, taken proceedings to have his name removed that will be sufficient[8]. A person cannot be settled on the list of contributories if before the commencement of the winding up he has not only repudiated the shares, but has also asserted his right to repudiate them in an action by the company to enforce calls upon him[9]. But the right of rescission which is ordinarily available against the company cannot be enforced against its creditors who are the persons vitally interested in the winding up[10].

In a winding up proceeding the shareholder is not entitled to have his name struck off the list of contributories on the ground that he was induced to purchase the shares by the false reports and balance-sheet issued by the company[11]. Where the contributory fails to show that his name was entered in the register fraudulently or without sufficient cause, an order for rectification of the share register by deleting a certain number of shares standing against the name of the applicant ought not to be passed 1.

Irregular allotment when invalid and when not.

The allotment of shares by an irregularly constituted board is invalid. But if the articles validate such an act by a de facto director in a bona fide manner the Court will uphold his act. Where the applicant for shares did not decline to accept the shares allotted to him, he could not raise an objection against his being put on the list of contributories when the company went into liquidation 2.

Where no notice of allotment of shares is served upon those to whom shares are allotted, they cannot be placed upon the list of contributories 2.

Conditional allotment.

Where shares applied for were allotted on condition that a branch company would be started which failed to materialize, the allottee could not be regarded as a member but a creditor, and he was not liable as a contributory 3.

Where the application for shares is conditional on the applicant being appointed a director or an officer of the company and the condition was not fulfilled, the applicant cannot be treated as a shareholder 4.

When shareholder liable.

If before a contract to take shares is rescinded, a winding up is commenced or the company ceases to be a going concern, the applicant can no longer be relieved, but will be liable to be a contributory 5.

Where shares have been forfeited by the managing director in such a way that the proceeding is ultra vires, the shareholder may be placed on the list of contributories inspite of such forfeiture 6.

A resolution passed by a company authorizing the money of those shareholders to be returned who had not paid their allotment money and were not willing to remain as members, is ultra vires and cannot operate to relieve such shareholders of their liability as contributories 7.

Right of set off.

A debtor who is not a member is entitled to plead in an action by the official liquidator by way of set off that an ascertained sum of money is due to him from the company 8. Though a debt due by a company is not presently payable, it can be set off against moneys owing to the company in liquidation. If a debtor of a company takes an assignment of a debt due by the company before it goes into liquidation, a set off of the one against the other can be allowed in liquidation proceedings and it would not amount to a fraudulent preference 9.

Where action for call commenced. If the liquidator has already commenced an action for calls, this does not preclude him from discontinuing it and settling the defendant on the list; but the costs of the action will be deducted from the amount recovered 1.

Payment of uncalled capital. Where the directors knowing that the company is insolvent make payment of an amount representing the uncalled capital due by them for shares, such payment will be treated as payment towards capital and not as a loan to the company 2.

Liability of subscriber to memorandum. A subscriber to the memorandum of association remains a member until the company, authorized to do so by its articles, accepts a surrender of the shares for valid reasons, or the subscriber himself pays for the shares and validly transfers them to somebody else 3. The present of paid up shares by a third party does not satisfy the obligation of a subscriber to the memorandum of association to take shares 4. The issue of a certificate does not estop the company so long as the certificate does not pass to a bona fide purchaser for value 4. Where there are left shares available for allotment, the fact that none had been allotted to the subscriber made no difference and the liquidator was entitled to hold him to the contract which he had made with the company when he signed the memorandum 5.

Shares purchased in minor's name. Where a father has purchased shares with his own money for his minor sons by signing the application form on behalf of the sons, the father must be treated as the owner of the shares and must be placed on the list of contributories 6. The same principle applies where the father has purchased by transfer shares by signing the minor sons' names on the transfer form as transferees through himself 6.

Costs. Where an unsuccessful application by an official liquidator to place certain shareholders on the list of contributories is bona fide made, the Court would order the costs of each side to be a first charge on the assets 5. But the cost of a contest by a person disputing his liability as a contributory and failing must, except under very exceptional circumstances, be paid by such contributory 7.

Test suit. If a shareholder commences a litigation to have his name removed and there is an agreement between the company and other repudiating shareholders that all the cases shall stand or fall by the result of that litigation, then if that case is decided in favour of the litigant shareholder, the others will be relieved 8.

Procedure. The power given to the Court under this section will not be exercised by it of its own motion but on application and considering all the circumstances 9. After the winding up order and before the list of contributories has been settled a contributory and the company can move for rectification under this section and s. 38 1. As between a vendor and a purchaser of shares, after the commencement of the winding up, order for rectification will not be made except on strong grounds 2.

Where the rectification is applied for in liquidation by the company, the application ought to be in the name of the company and not of the liquidator 3.

Resettling the list.

Where the register is rectified after the list of contributories has been settled the Court may resettle the list (note 7, last page) and the register may be rectified as to date so as to give effect to an act done before rectification by the person who by rectification comes on to A list, or so as to affect the B list of contributories 4.

Joinder of parties.

Where a contributory contests his liability on the ground of a transfer or otherwise, he ought to bring before the Court the person who according to him is liable 5. But if the transferee cannot be found 6, or there is no legal personal representative of the transferee 7, or where the transferee is an infant 8, an order for rectification will be made.

Liability upon transfer of shares.

When shares are transferred to an infant the transferor remains liable as a contributory 9. "A man who executes a transfer of shares remains liable unless and until there is on the list a transferee who is legally liable to the company" 9. Thus where the transferee is an infant, and the company is ignorant of the fact, the official liquidator may refuse to accept him as a shareholder although after coming of age he may be willing to confirm the transfer 9.

A transfer of shares by a director, who is aware that the financial position of the company is hopeless, to a person of straw for the sole purpose of avoiding liability on the shares is not invalid provided the transfer is absolute and unqualified 11. On the winding up of the company the liquidator is not entitled in such a case to rectification of the register and of the list of contributories by deleting the name of the transferee and inserting the transferor's name 10.

Where a person has been given shares or shares have been transferred to him as qualification for his directorship, such a transfer makes the transferee a member of the company and if such a person holds out that he is a shareholder, he is estopped from denying that he is a member, where the company goes into liquidation, on the ground that the transfer was a mere colourable transaction. He cannot object to his name being included in the list of contributories 11.

Where the liquidator seeks to place a person on the list of contributories and the latter objects on the ground of his having transferred his shares, it is incumbent on him to show that at some time or other there was on the register a transferee of his who could be made liable at law for the shares 12.

Res Judicata.

Where a suit by a voluntary liquidator against a person for the recovery of a sum of money said to be due by him to the company by reason of his being a shareholder is dismissed for default, an application by the official liquidator for placing the same person on the list of contributories is barred by O. 9, r. 9, C.P.C. 1. A question which has been settled by the liquidating Court cannot be re-opened by a regular suit, for the legislature never intended that matters should be decided twice over 2. An order passed by the Court bringing the name of a person on the list of contributories, if not appealed against, becomes final and the question as to his liability as contributory cannot be re-opened 3.

Laches.

If owing to the default of the company a transfer has not been registered before the winding up, the Court will not rectify the register on the application of the official liquidator 4. If fully paid shares are purported to be allotted by an improperly constituted board, and the allottees are aware of the irregularity, their names can be removed from the register on the application of the company 5. The company may lose its right by laches to have the register rectified 5.

The official liquidator is not however precluded by delay from placing a subscriber to the memorandum of association on the list of contributories 6.

Fully paid up shares.

Where shares have been issued as fully paid up without complying with the provisions of the Act, the shareholder will be placed on the list of contributories; but a purchaser of the shares without notice of the irregularity will not be so placed, nor another purchaser from him although this latter knew of this irregularity 7.

Power to require delivery of property.

185. The Court may, at any time after making a winding up order, require any contributory for the time being settled on the list of contributories and any trustee, receiver, banker, agent, or officer of the company to pay, deliver, surrender or transfer forthwith, or within such time as the Court directs, to the official liquidator any money, property or documents in his hands to which the company is prima facie entitled.

Scope.

This section is concerned mainly with property and money which can be shown, without any doubt, to be actually in the hands of the party against whom the order is to be made, at the time of the application 8. This section does not contemplate an elaborate enquiry, but discretion must be left to the Court to decide whether any particular claim can or cannot be conveniently dealt with under this section 9. This section does not give the Court any power to pass orders against persons other than those mentioned therein 10.

Applicability of section.

This section is applicable only to contributories, officers of the company and other persons mentioned therein The company's solicitor is such a person 1, but not an accountant to whom the books have been made over for preparing a balance-sheet 2 ; nor a creditor who has obtained a garnishee order is a "trustee" within the meaning of this section 3.

A banker holding adversely to the company is not within the section 4. Generally the section does not apply if a dispute is raised, there being nothing in the section empowering the Court to determine the question 1.

Court's power.

Under this section the Court has summary power to take steps to preserve pendente lite the property which prima facie appears to belong to the company ; and apart from the Companies Act the Court has ample power ex debito justitiæ to pass interim orders for protection and preservation of the subject matter in litigation under ss. 94 and 151 and Orders 39 and 40 of the Code of Civil Procedure 5. Where the managing agents of a company admitted to be in possession of money belonging to the company, but claimed a lien over it, the Court asked them under this section to deposit the amount in Court until the adjudication of their claim 6. Where the chairman of a bank took money from the bank in a way which amounted to the taking of the money wholly illegally and without any authority and converted this money for his own use by purchasing property in his own name, it was held that the chairman being a trustee of all the moneys of the bank, the liquidator was prima facie entitled to be given possession of the property under this section 7. The Court will not however make an ex parte order for delivery of documents by the manager of a company to the official liquidator 8.

"Agent."

An agent who is in possession of properties belonging to a company under an agreement by which he was to advance money for working expenses has, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a lien on such properties under s. 221 of the Indian Contract Act, and this section does not authorize the Court to deprive the agent of his possession of the security 9. An auditor is not an officer of the company within the meaning of this section 10. But a director who contracted to sell property to the company may be ordered to deliver possession thereof 11. Where in an application by the official liquidator under this section against the managing agent the latter took exception to the application on the ground that at the time of liquidation he was no longer a managing agent, it was held that the real test was whether the money came into his hands as managing agent. If it was so, he was liable to refund the money although he had ceased to be the managing agent at the time of liquidation 12.

Receiver. If a receiver for the debenture-holders is appointed, he may be ordered to hand over to the liquidator such books and documents as relate to the management and business of the company and are not necessary to support the title of the debenture-holders 1.

In a voluntary winding up the liquidator can apply to the Court to exercise the above powers 2.

Where section is not applicable. The section should not be strained to bring within its purview persons who are not within its express words 3, or even the persons named in the section if there is a bona fide dispute as to the liquidator's rights. In such a case proceedings should be taken by action in the ordinary way 4. See notes to s. 188.

Power to order payment of debts by contributory. 186. (1) The Court may, at any time after making a winding up order, make an order on any contributory for the time being settled on the list of contributories to pay, in manner directed by the order, any money due from him or from the estate of the person whom he represents to the company exclusive of any money payable by him or the estate by virtue of any call in pursuance of this Act.

(2) The Court in making such an order may, in the case of an unlimited company, allow to the contributory by way of set-off any money due to him or to the estate which he represents from the company on any independent dealing or contract with the company, but not any money due to him as a member of the company in respect of any dividend or profit; and may, in the case of a limited company, make to any director whose liability is unlimited or to his estate the like allowance:

Provided that, in the case of any company, whether limited or unlimited, when all the creditors are paid in full, any money due on any account whatever to a contributory from the company may be allowed to him by way of set-off against any subsequent call.

Object of the section. The object of this section and similar sections is to avoid a double process, and to do complete justice in the winding up. It is only in rare instances, as where some of the parties concerned are not amenable to the jurisdiction in the winding up, that an action should be brought instead of making use of the jurisdiction given by the section 5.

Scope of the section. This section, (1) "is concerned", as observed by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, "only with moneys due from a contributory, other than money payable by virtue of a call in pursuance of the Act. A debtor who is not a contributory is untouched by it. Moneys due from him are recoverable only by suit in the company's name; (2) it is a section which creates a special procedure for obtaining payment of moneys ; it is not a section which purports to create a foundation upon which to base a claim for payment. It creates no new rights; (3) the power of the Court to order payment is discretionary. It may refuse to act under this section, leaving the liquidator to sue in the name of the company, and it will readily take that course in any ease in which it is made apparent that the respondent under this procedure, if continued, would be deprived of some defence or answer open to him in a suit for the same moneys" 1.

Statutory liability.

As soon as the list of contributories is settled, the liability of the contributory is founded on a different footing from the one on which it rested till then. Before the order for contribution is passed the liability is a contractual one, and subsequent to that order it is a new liability which may be described as a statutory liability 2.

Set off.

There are two provisions in this section for allowing set off. The one is contained in the proviso and is operative only as between contributories after all the debts are paid ; this is applicable to both limited and unlimited companies. The other is confined to unlimited companies and seemingly allows a set off of debts due from the company to the contributory (as distinguished from moneys due to him as a member) against that which under this section the Court can order him to pay, that is, debts due from the contributory and calls made before the winding up 3.

New machinery but not new liability.

Sub-section (1) does nothing more than create a new machinery to recover debts due by a contributory. It does not create new liabilities or confer new rights. It merely provides a summary procedure for enforcing existing legal liabilities. It cannot override the provisions of s. 86 of the Code of Civil Procedure by making an order under this section 4. The words "at any time" in sub-sec. (1) does not authorize the Court to order payment of a statute-barred debt ; they mean at any time in the course of the liquidation proceedings 5. The words "any money due from him or from the estate of the person whom he represents to the company" must be confined to money due and recoverable in a suit by the company and they do not include any moneys which at the date of the application under this section could not have been so recovered 6.

Regular suit may be brought.

A contributory can be required not only to meet calls but also to pay any debt which he owes to the company. But the Court is not bound to proceed under this section for recovery of a debt due from a contributory, and may, if so advised, direct the liquidator to file a regular suit for the purpose 7.

Meaning of "money due to the company."

A debt due on a promissory note by a contributory is "money due from him to the company"[1] within this section, and the Court has, upon a summary application, the power to direct the contributory to pay the money[2]. The Court. however has no jurisdiction to recover by summary process the money due from a debtor who is not a contributory[3]. An opinion expressed by the liquidation Judge in such a case with regard to set off does not operate as res judicata[3].

S. 43, Contract Act.

In order to make a contributory liable under this section for payment of debts other than calls, debts must be due from the contributory himself. Where the debts are due from a firm of which the contributory is a member, the payment of those debts cannot be enforced under this section, the provisions of s. 43 of the Indian Contract Act having no application to such a case[4].

Third party can not take advantage of the section.

A person to whom the liquidator has transferred a payment order made under this section against a contributory is entitled to invoke the summary jurisdiction of the Court under s. 199 for recovering the money[5]. But generally speaking, a third party cannot take advantage of the provisions of the section[6]; for it is no part of the Court's duty to help third persons who have purchased debts due to the company. So the Court cannot make a payment order under this section in respect of a debt which has been sold to a third person[7]. In a recent case in England Maugham J. however allowed an application of the Commissioners of Income Tax under the corresponding section (s. 165) of the English Act of 1908 asking for an order upon a contributory, who had received money from the liquidator on a distribution of surplus assets with notice that the liquidator had not provided for the super-tax payable by the company, to refund that amount to the credit of the liquidator so that the super-tax might be paid. This decision was upheld by the Court of Appeal[8].

Payment order—whether decree.

A payment order under this section is equivalent to a decree by reason of s. 199 post and enforceable as such and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to the execution of decrees are applicable to the execution of such orders. Consequently the holder of a decree is entitled under the law to claim rateable distribution against the official liquidator as the holder of a payment order under this section[9]. But a payment order under this section made ex parte has been held to be not a decree and Art. 164, Sch. 1 of the Limitation Act has no application for setting it aside. Art. 181 refers to all applications for the making of which the Code of Civil Procedure gives authority[10].

See notes to s. 199, post.

A decree which is a nullity may be disregarded without any proceeding being taken to set it aside. So a payment order which is a nullity may be disregarded by a Court whose assistance is sought for its execution—Gobinda Singh v. Union Bank of India, supra.

Set off—unlimited company. In the case of an unlimited company the Court may allow a contributory a set off in respect of debts due to him from the company; but no set off will be allowed of a debt due from the company against calls made upon him in the winding up 1.

Limited company. In the case of a limited company a set off will not be allowed to a contributory against calls due from him in respect of any debt due to him from the company 2. He must pay his calls in full and then prove his debt 3, even if there is a special agreement that there shall be a set off 4. Where the contributory is a bankrupt, his trustee is however entitled to a set off against a demand for calls made by the liquidator 5. But where an insolvent company is a contributory and creditor of another insolvent company, no set off will be allowed 6.

Both. In the case of creditors of a limited or unlimited company the bankruptcy rules as to set off apply under which all claims provable in the winding up may be subject of set off, provided there is a mutuality 7 and that each claim result in a liability to pay money and not to return goods 8.

Court's discretion. The Court has a discretion in allowing set off, and if the claim against the company requires investigation, it may allow payment of calls to be enforced without waiting until the cross-claim has been investigated 9.

Voluntary winding up. S. 216 enables the Court to make an order under this section in a voluntary winding up. In an action by a voluntary liquidator to enforce a call the defendant cannot counter-claim for debt or damages 10. And if to the company's action commenced before the winding up the defendant has pleaded a set off, and before judgment the company goes into liquidation, the set off cannot be allowed 11.

Winding up under supervision. In an action against a member brought by the liquidator under supervision order, a debt due to the defendant previous to the voluntary resolution cannot be set off against a debt incurred after the resolution 12.

In any question of set off the two demands must be of such a character that the general principles of set off may apply 13.

Supplemental list. The Court will not settle a supplemental list of contributories in respect of the holders of fully paid shares simply to bring them within this section and give jurisdiction to enforce payment of debts due from them to the company 14.

For further cases see notes to the next section.

Though the making of an order of contribution under this section is not controlled by any rule of limitation, the enforcement of such an order is not equally so uncontrolled.

It is subject to the general law of limitation applicable to execution applications 1. An application by the liquidator filed within three years from the date of the winding up order, if otherwise properly made, under and within the provisions of this section, is not one which must be dismissed under s. 3 of the Limitation Act, as it is either an application made within time, or it is an application made for which no period of limitation is prescribed 2. In the last cited case at p. 66 their Lordship also observed : "The learned Judges in the present case took the erroneous view that once the winding up commenced there could be no further application of the rule of limitation in regard to any debt due to the company and not then already time barred. Their Lordships know of no justification for this view. In this respect there is no analogy between the position of a debtor to and creditor of a company in liquidation."

Limitation.

Power of Court to make calls.

187. (1) The Court may, at any time after making a winding up order, and either before or after it has ascertained the sufficiency of the assets of the company, make calls on and order payment thereof by all or any of the contributories for the time being settled on the list of the contributories to the extent of their liability, for payment of any money which the Court considers necessary to satisfy the debts and liabilities of the company, and the costs, charges and expenses of winding up, and for the adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves.

(2) In making the call the Court may take into consideration the probability that some of the contributories may partly or wholly fail to pay the call.

Jurisdiction.

This section does not confer any higher jurisdiction on the Court to enforce the remedy which was not open to the company before the liquidation proceedings against a person who is not amenable to the jurisdiction. No order under this section can therefore be made against a sovereign Prince or a ruling Chief at all, and no question of any consent of the Governor General in Council can arise because such case does not fall in any of the three classes mentioned in sub-s. (2) of s. 86 C. P. Code, and no such jurisdiction exists in a British Court, unless the case can be brought within the scope of s. 86, C. P. C. 3.

Similarly where the defendant who is a shareholder in a company registered in an Indian State and is a resident of British India, does not appear before the State liquidation Court and does not submit to its jurisdiction, a call order, made against him by the liquidation Court, in the absence of an express agreement in the articles of association that the dispute with the shareholders should be settled by the State Court, is without jurisdiction and cannot be enforced in British India 4. It is necessary that the liquidator suing the defendant in British India should prove all necessary facts to establish his liability. It is also necessary that the call order for the particular amount was necessary and just. The mere fact that the call order was made does not amount to such proof 4.

Cesser of directors' power.

After the winding up order the directors' power to make call ipso facto comes to an end. So where uncalled capital has been charged by the company in favour of debenture-holders, the Court has no jurisdiction, after the winding up order, to order either a receiver appointed in an action to enforce the debentures or the liquidator to make call in the winding up. The receiver in the action may however be empowered to take proceedings in the name of the liquidator for getting in the call 1.

Meaning of debts and liabilities.

The call may be made before or after ascertaining what claims against the company will be established as debts, and the words "debts and liabilities" mean estimated debts and liabilities 2. The list of contributories however must be settled first 3. In sanctioning a call the Court may allow payment by instalments 4.

When a company goes into liquidation and an official liquidator is appointed, the contributories are only liable to pay up the balance of their share money then uncalled as and when the Court is satisfied that the financial condition of the company is such that a call is necessary to discharge the liabilities of the company. The shareholder is not liable to pay one farthing of the uncalled share money until the Court has made such an order and the call then becomes a claim on the contributory 5.

Calls are independent of contract.

Enforceable summarily by motion.

Shareholders are liable to pay calls made in the winding up, although by the contract under which they took the shares the calls were only payable by instalments and the date of payment has not arrived 6. Provisions in the articles as to payment of interest on calls or as to the time and amount of payment do not apply to calls made by the liquidator 7. He can also enforce calls made by the directors before commencement of the winding up 8, for the section is not confined to original calls but includes unpaid calls made before the winding up as well as those made after the winding up. They are enforceable by a summary action on the motion of the official liquidator 9. As to the enforcement of an order against property situated within the jurisdiction of a District Court, see notes to s. 200.

Although as a matter of practice, when the High Court makes an order to enforce calls, it directs the contributory to pay to the Imperial Bank, that is purely a precautionary measure, and, if it becomes necessary in order to facilitate enforcement of the payment, the High Court by its Rules has power to make an order on the contributories to pay to the official liquidator direct 10. In the last cited case where a contributory paid the amount due from him to the then official liquidator in obedience to his requisition before an order was made by the Court under this section, Sir George Rankin C. J. held that in the absence of evidence that the then official liquidator misapplied the money, the contributory should not be asked to pay the money over again.

No right of set off.

In a winding up although a shareholder who is a creditor of the company can prove in competition with the outside creditors, he cannot set off a debt owing to him by the company against a call 1, whether made before or after the commencement of the winding up 2, although in the former case there has been an agreement to do so 3. Where however a company in liquidation is both a creditor and a shareholder of another company in liquidation it cannot, even when insolvent, set off against calls made by the liquidator of the latter company a debt owing to it by that company 4, or take any dividend until it has paid up all calls due 5. In a common law action by liquidator for a call made before liquidation the defendant has no right of set off 6.

An agreement between a director and the company that any money which the former may pay under a guarantee of the company's overdraft at the bank shall be treated as payment made in advance of future calls, though such an agreement is within the company's powers and validly made, it will not enable the director to set off amounts so paid against a subsequent call made by the liquidator in a compulsory winding up 7.

Fully paid up shares.

Where a director has received in breach of trust a present of paid up shares from the company's vendors, he may be made liable for misfeasance, but he cannot be made liable as a contributory for unpaid shares 8.

Assignment of debts payable by company.

After the commencement of winding up a shareholder can assign a debt due to him by the company subject only to a right of set off by the company of all calls which may be made subsequent to the assignment and previous to the payment of the debt 9. But where the winding up was after the assignment, he is entitled to a dividend on the debt notwithstanding the non-payment by his assignor of calls due from him 10.

Remedy of members on the register.

Persons who are on the register at the commencement of the winding up are not entitled to resist the making of a call on the ground that they assert a right to have their names removed from the list; their remedy is to apply for suspension of the operation of the call 11.

Time of making call.

The Court will not wait until claims have been established before making a call, nor will it postpone calling up the full amount unpaid on the shares, or make such amount payable by instalments, where there is no reasonable doubt that the full amount will be required for paying the creditors 12.

On a summons for call 13 or other proceeding under the winding up order 14, the Effect of a winding up order. propriety or validity of the winding up order cannot be called in question 1. Winding up order is not however a judgment in rem and a stranger, e. g.., a purchaser from the liquidator, may dispute its validity 2.

Right of a shareholder. Where a shareholder has paid all calls which have become due, he is entitled to a dividend on the amount of any debt owing to him from the company pari passu with order creditors 3. A shareholder whose shares have been improperly forfeited and sold may prove for damages in competition with the creditors 4.

Deceased contributory. An order for payment of money against a contributory is valid when it is obtained in his life time. His estate can be made liable only when those who represent the estate are brought on the record before an effective order is made 5.

Costs. A contributory who petitions for and obtains a winding up order is entitled to the cost of his petition before payment of any call 6.

The debt due from a shareholder does not become recoverable until he is registered as a shareholder 7.

Voluntary windingup. The section does not apply to the case of a company which is being voluntarily wound up 8. But this section read with s. 216 enables the Court to make an order against a contributory for payment of calls in such a company.

Call order made in England is a foreign judgment. The Courts in India treat a call order made by the Court of Chancery in England upon a contributory of a company registered in England as a foreign judgment and will not allow the liability of a defendant sued upon such an order to be disputed, unless it be shown that the Court had no jurisdiction to make the order, or that the defendant had no notice of it or that it is not in its nature a final order 9.

Contract. The right to sue for calls does not arise from the failure to register the contract but from the fact of taking shares, and the liability thence arising to pay up the shares in cash can only be taken away by a duly registered contract and not by an agreement to register one 10.

A call is recoverable though barred. A call is recoverable although barred under art. 112 of the Limitation Act 11, for liquidation gives the official liquidator a cause of action 12. Just as a claim if brought by the company might be barred by limitation but not if brought by the official liquidator, so a claim which might be held to be barred by the Civil Procedure Code if brought by the company, can be brought by the official liquidator under the provisions of the Companies Act 12.

Power to order payment into bank.

188. The Court may order any contributory, purchaser or other person from whom money is due to the company to pay the same into * * * the account of the official liquidator in any scheduled bank as defined in clause (e) of section 2 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 instead of to the official liquidator, and any such order may be enforced in the same manner as if it had directed payment to the official liquidator.

Amendment.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words "the Bank of Bengal, the Bank of Madras or the Bank of Bombay, as the case may be, or any branch thereof respectively to" have been omitted after the words "the same into." By the same Act the words in italics have been inserted.

For a list of the scheduled banks see pp. 286-87 ante.

"Purchaser."

The word "purchaser" does not mean any person who has purchased any goods from the liquidator or from the company; the word must he taken to refer to the word contributory, which immediately precedes it and means the purchaser of the interest of a contributory 2.

"Other persons" &c.

The words "or other persons from whom money is due" have a reference to a person from whom money is due under s. 185 3. There is no provision in this Act which enables the Court directing the winding up to recover or authorize the recovery of moneys in the hands of the person other than those expressly mentioned in s. 185 by summary process. Such orders if made are without jurisdiction and cannot be enforced. The only course open to the official liquidator in such cases is to institute regular suits 4. Persons who enter into contract with the liquidator during the course of liquidation do not come under s. 185, consequently an order directing them to pay the liquidator cannot be enforced under s. 185, nor can such an order be enforced under this section 5.

Enforcement of order—jurisdiction.

The words "any such order may be enforced in the same manner as if it had directed payment to the official liquidator" do not give jurisdiction to enforce an order against persons other than contributories or persons mentioned in s. 185. The most natural construction to place on these words is that if an order can be enforced which is an order directing payment to the official liquidator, the same order can be enforced if it directs payment to a bank. The company Judge has jurisdiction for the purpose of carrying out the liquidation, that is, the realization of the assets of the company and the payment of the creditors &c., but judicial decisions of matters which may arise with third parties owing to the transactions entered into by the liquidator is foreign to his jurisdiction 5.

Regulation of account with Court.

189. All moneys, bills, hundis, notes and other securities paid and delivered into the Bank where the liquidator of the company may have his account, in the event of a company being wound up by the Court, shall be subject in all respects to the orders of the Court.

Amendment.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the words "the Bank of Bengal, the Bank of Madras or the Bank of Bombay or any branch thereof respectively" the words in italics have been substituted.

Order on contributory conclusive evidence.

190. (1) An order made by the Court on a contributory shall (subject to any right of appeal) be conclusive evidence that the money, if any, thereby appearing to be due or ordered to be paid is due.

(2) All other pertinent matters stated in the order shall be taken to be truly stated as against all persons, and in all proceedings whatsoever.

Power to exclude creditors not proving in time.

191. The Court may fix a time or times within which creditors are to prove their debts or claims, or to be excluded from the benefit of any distribution made before those debts are proved.

Creditors proving after appointed time.

Whenever there are funds in Court or otherwise available, a creditor, although the time appointed for bringing in his claim has long elapsed, is invariably allowed to prove subject to terms as to costs and as regards dividends already paid 1. Where a creditor fails to bring in his claim by the date announced by the official liquidator, he is not precluded from coming in at a later stage, the only penalty in such case is that the claimant will be excluded from the benefit of any distribution made before the debt is proved 2.

Limitation.

The statute of limitation ceases to run against a creditor on a winding up order being made, and he is allowed to prove at any time before the company is disolved, but so as not to interfere with dividends already paid 3; but a proof in respect of claims statute-barred before the order is not allowed 4.

Damages for breach of contract.

Proof may be made for damages for breach of contract such as to buy goods, to purchase a business, to repair a shop, to give fully paid shares in satisfaction of a debt, or to employ a person as a servant of the company; and the claims may include damages sustained under a continuing breach of contract after the winding up commenced 5.

Director's claim.

The Courts do not look with favour on agreements between directors for their own advantage, and certainly not those which would severely prejudice other creditors in the event of liquidation. Where therefore a director claims a big sum of money on the strength of a promise made by a co-director, it is a case in which formalities cannot be dispensed with, and if they have not been observed, the claim would not be allowed 1.

Policy-holder may prove.

A policy-holder who is insured against risk under the Employer's Liability Act or the Workmen's Compensation Act may prove in the liquidation of the insurance company, (1) for ascertained amounts due at the date of the winding up order, (2) for liabilities in the shape of weekly payments which had emerged before the date of the winding up order, and (3) for the value of the policy as a contract of indemnity in respect of the risk of fresh liabilities emerging after the date of the winding up order and during the unexpired period of the policy, such valuation to take place as at the date of the winding up order, not on the basis of an estimate of the contingencies, but upon the basis of a partial return of premium. He is not entitled to prove in addition in respect of liabilities which may have emerged under the policy between the date of the winding up order and the date of proving. The policy-holder in such a case is not entitled to prove by way of damages for the difference between the estimated cost of re-insuring the same risks for the same period in another company and the amount of premiums he would have paid under the policy 2.

All debts may be proved.

Debts which may de proved include all debts payable on a contingency and all claims against the company, present or future, certain or contingent, ascertained or otherwise 3. As to the measure of damages see the cases noted below 4.

Costs.

The costs of proving a debt are added to the amount of the debt. But if the creditor commences an action for the debt before the winding up and the liquidator continues to defend the action and fails, the costs are paid first out of the assets 5. The taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs against the company must be dealt with in the winding up 6, even if the work was done before the winding up 7.

Set off.

Where there have been mutual dealings between a creditor and the company the debts may be set off and the creditor can only prove or be made liable for balance 8. As to set off by a liquidator against an insolvent estate see the case noted below 9, and as to set off between two companies in liquidation see National Live Stock Insurance Co. 10.

What debts can or cannot be proved.

Every liability of a company, however difficult of valuation, is provable in the winding up, unless declared by the Court as incapable of being fairly estimated 11. Claim under contracts made on behalf of a company before its registration or before it is entitled to commence business cannot be proved for, unless the contracts have been adopted by the company 12.

Adjustment of rights of contributories.

192. The Court shall adjust the rights of the contributories among themselves, and distribute any surplus among the persons entitled thereto.

Principle of distribution.

In adjusting the rights of the contributories and distributing the surplus, the liability of the ordinary shreholders for the unpaid balance of their shares must not be disregarded; and after discharging all debts and liabilities and repaying to the ordinary and preference shareholders the capital paid on their shares, the assets ought to be divided among the shareholders, in the absence of any other provision in the memorandum or the articles, not in proportion to the amounts paid on the shares, but in proportion to the shares held[1].

It cannot be said that the creditors have been paid in full until they have got interest on their outstanding debts. So the preference shareholders cannot get anything before the said interest is paid. But the Court is not bound to give the creditors their contractual rate of interest[2].

Where the members of a company in liquidation have been assessed to surtax in respect of their incomes from the company in the name of the company, and the liquidator has paid the surtax, he is bound in distributing any surplus among the members, to bring into account the surtax so paid by him against the amounts receivable by the shareholders in respect of the income on which the surtax was assessed. The surtax cannot be treated as a liability of the company payable before the ascertainment of the amount available for distribution[3].

On whom calls may be made.

The Court may make calls on any of the contributories for the purpose of adjusting rights of the contributories among themselves[4]. The holders of fully paid shares are contributories[5]. Calls may be made on the holders of partly paid shares for the purpose of equalizing the rights between them and the fully paid shareholders[6].

Participation in dividend.

A shareholder cannot participate in the distribution until he has paid all calls due[1]. The right of a liquidator to require payment of money due from a contributory before he is allowed to participate in a dividend only applies where both amounts are due at the commencement of the winding up[7].

Set off.

Whether a company is limited or unlimited, when all the creditors have been paid in full, any money due on any account whatsoever to a contributory from the company may be allowed to him by way of set off against any subsequent call. When the creditors have been paid in full, any surplus is to be distributed amongst the contributories according to their rights inter se as adjusted by the Court[8].

Provision in memo. and articles.

If the memorandum and articles of association contain no provision as to how surplus assets are to be divided, then subject to the terms on which any capital has been issued, the surplus assets are divided and losses are borne in proportion to the nominal amounts of the shares and not to the sums paid up[9]. Where however some shareholders have paid up more than others, the Court will adjust the amounts until all have paid up in the same proportion, and the surplus thus arrived at will then be distributed in proportion to the nominal amounts 1. The rights may be adjusted by making larger returns to those who have paid larger amounts 1, or by making calls 2.

A provision in the articles as to how dividends are to be distributed while the company is a going concern does not per se govern or affect the distribution of surplus assets in the winding up 1. Where in the articles of association it was provided that the surplus assets were to be applied in the first place in repaying the holders of preference shares the amount paid thereon and the residue belonged to the holders of ordinary shares, it was held that the arrears of preference dividend could not be treated as 'debts' and therefore to be paid out of the assets of the company before the surplus assets were ascertained 3.

Sometimes it may be necessary to make a call upon those who have paid less in order to repay those who have paid more for equalization 4. If the articles state that the loss is to be borne in proportion to the amount paid, the liquidator should make such calls as will make all the shares paid up to the same extent, and the assets will then be divisible proportionately to the number of shares 5. But an article providing that the loss is to be borne by the members in proportion to the capital paid up, or which ought to have been paid up, at the commencement of the winding up, on the shares held by them respectively, excludes the principle laid down in ex parte Maude 6, and in such a case the liquidator cannot make calls for the purpose of equalization 7. Each case however depends on the words used, and decided cases are of little help in interpreting a different set of words 8.

If the shares are of different amounts, and the surplus is divisible without regard to the amount of shares, the presumption, in the absence of express words, is that this means the surplus after repaying capital as well as debts 9.

Dividend for insolvent contributory.

It is a well established principle that where a person is entitled to participate in a fund, he is also bound to make a contribution in aid of that fund. He cannot be allowed to participate unless and until he has fulfilled his duty to contribute 10. But where the debtor has died insolvent before commencement of the winding up, the amount to be contributed by representatives as a term of sharing in the distribution is the proper dividend on and not the full amount of the debt 10.

Right of fully paid shareholders.

If after payment of the debts there are surplus assets, the fully paid shareholders are, except where the articles provide otherwise 11, entitled to receive the difference between the amount paid on their shares and that paid on the other shares 12. For the purpose of distribution of surplus assets they ought to be placed on the list of contributories 13.

Where payment is made in advance of calls.

Where inequality in the amounts paid up arises from the shareholders having made payments in advance of calls, each shareholder, for the purpose of equalizing, is entitled to be repaid the amount advanced with interest at the agreed rate up to the date of payment, before any payment is made in respect of the other shares ranking pari passu with his shares, in repayment of capital 1.

Surplus after repayment of capital: how divisible.

Where after repayment to the shareholders of all fully paid up capital, there is still a surplus remaining for distribution, then subject to the articles of association and the terms of issue 2, the surplus so far as it represents capital, is divisible in proportion to the nominal amount of shares, whether they are preference or ordinary shares and whether at the winding up they are partly or fully paid up 3. The surplus so far as it represents undivided profits is in some cases divisible among the shareholders as if it were profit available for dividend 4, but in other cases it must be treated as capital 5. Unless the articles so provide, the holders of shares issued at a premium are not in a winding up entitled to have the premium repaid 6. Because shareholders are entitled to a preferential dividend it does not follow that they are entitled to preference in payment of the capital 7.

"So long as there are assets undistributed in the liquidation, it remains open to the Court to correct any mistakes or injustice due to falsified estimates or other unforeseen incidents arising in a prolonged and difficult administration" 8.

Preference dividend in winding up.

Where the articles contain no express provision as to payment of arrears of the preference dividend in a winding up, then if on the true construction of the articles, the right of the preference shareholders to receive preference dividend whilst the company is a going concern is conditional upon such dividend being declared, they have no right to receive any arrears or deficiency of such dividend in a winding up, even though the distributable assets include or in part represent accumulated profits 9. If however the articles are so framed that profits earned belong to the members irrespective of dividends being declared, the distributable assets in a winding up, so far as representing accumulated profits, will be divisible among the members according to their rights in profits, and the preference shareholders will first be entitled to payment thereout of any deficiency of their preference dividend, and the balance will belong to the ordinary shareholders 10. For other instances see the cases noted below 11.

Where the memorandum or the articles provide that the preference shareholders are entitled to payment of capital in priority to all other shares in the distribution of surplus assets, they are entitled to share them pari passu with the ordinary shareholders 1. In the last cited case at p. 155 Lord Hanworth, M. R. observed: "We start therefore the consideration of this question with the two principles in our minds that the corporators have entered into a contract by which they become partners, and that when there are surplus assets left over they are to be dealt with as between the members on the basis of equality, whatever were the original or limited rights of the preference shareholders earlier."

In the absence of express provision to the contrary in the articles, preference shareholders are entitled to share with the ordinary shareholders pari passu in the distribution of the surplus assets. The mere fact of this priority as to cumulative dividend and return of capital will not disentitle them to such participation in the surplus assets 2.

Meaning of "surplus assets."

The words "surplus assets" mean, where there is a loss, "assets remaining after due equalization of the capital accounts" 3 or sums payable by the shareholders who have not paid in full 4. But where the general assets are sufficient to enable debts &c., to be paid and the capital accounts to be equalized without any call, there is no capital called or treated as called for the purpose of satisfying equities; in such a case, the only capital paid is that paid before the winding up 5.

Apart from any question of equalizing capital accounts, the expression "surplus assets" may mean "assets remaining after payment of debts and costs" or it may mean "assets remaining after payment of debts and costs and return of all paid up capital" 6.

Where the memorandum of association of a company provided that the preference shareholders should be entitled in a winding up to such a share of the surplus assets as would provide for the holders of preference shares an amount per share equal to one-half of the amount per share provided for the holders of ordinary shares, but so that the total sum so provided for the holders of the preference shares would not exceed five shillings per share, the preference shareholders being entitled to no further participation in the profits or assets, it was held that the expression "surplus assets" meant what was left after the payment of debts and the repayment of the whole of the preference and ordinary capital 7.

Distribution in specie.

It is common to introduce provisions in the memorandum and articles of association for division of surplus assets in specie. For the effect of such a provision see the case noted below 8.

Profits earned after commencement of the winding up are divisible as capital 9.

Discount.

Any discount on shares unlawfully issued at a discount is treated as capital unpaid, which may be so regarded in adjusting accounts, or may be called up to adjust the rights of contributories 10.

For distribution an order of the Court is necessary; but in a voluntary liquidation the liquidator adjusts the rights of the contributories without reference to the Court [1].

If too much has been paid to a shareholder he may be ordered to refund the amount [2].

193. The Court may, in the event of the assets being insufficient to satisfy the liabilities, make an order as to the payment out of the assets of the costs, charges and expenses incurred in the winding up in such order of priority as the Court thinks just.

Power to order costs.

Priority of costs, charges, &c.

It was held by the House of Lords in 1872 that although in a compulsory winding up there was no statutory provision, as in the case of a voluntary winding up [3], that all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred in the winding up, including the liquidator's remuneration, be payable out of the assets in priority to all other claims, the same principle would be applied [4].

Distribution.

After the costs, charges and expenses have been paid, the assets are to be applied in payment of the company's debts and liabilities to the creditors. When the creditors have been paid in full, any surplus is to be distributed amongst the contributories according to their rights inter se as adjusted by the Court [5].

Remuneration.

As regards the liquidator's remuneration the rule is, that first the costs of the petition for winding up, next the costs of the winding up, and then the remuneration of the liquidator are to be paid [6]. In the case noted below [7] the Court in its discretion allowed the voluntary liquidator to retain the remuneration received by him before the date of the notice of the assessment of income-tax. The remuneration of a receiver and manager appointed in a debenture-holder's action is paid in priority to the debt incurred by him with the Court's sanction [8].

Costs in litigation.

Where in a litigation an order has been made that costs shall be paid out of the assets of the company or by the liquidator with leave to retain them out of the assets, the amount is payable forthwith without waiting to see if the funds will be sufficient to pay all costs incurred in the winding up, and if the liquidator pays such costs he may rrepay himself at once [9].

The costs ordered to be paid out of the assets come before the general costs of the winding up [10]. If the liquidator continues proceedings commenced before the winding up order, the whole costs including those incurred before the order are costs of the winding up [11].

Solicitor's costs. As to the priority of solicitor's costs and other costs generally see Buckley, 10th ed. pp. 407-8. The costs are however generally in the Court's discretion, and if unfounded charges are made or the petitioner's conduct is unsatisfactory or his debt small, an order may be made without costs 1.

Dissolution of company. 194. (1) When the affairs of a company have been completely wound up, the Court shall make an order that the company be dissolved from the date of the order, and the company shall be dissolved accordingly.

(2) The order shall be reported within fifteen days of the making thereof by the official liquidator to the registrar, who shall make in his books a minute of the dissolution of the company.

(3) If the official liquidator makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which he is in default.

Effect of dissolution. Dissolution puts an end to the existence of a company 2. "A company which has been dissolved," observed Viscount Cave, "no longer exists as a separate entity capable of holding property or of being sued in any Court" 3. It prevents any proceeding being taken against promoters, directors or officers of the company in respect of any misfeasance or breach of trust 4, or a creditor proving a debt against the company 5.

Liquidator's liability. When a company is dissolved the statutory duty of the liquidator towards the creditors and contributories is gone ; but if he has committed a breach of his duty to any creditor by distributing the assets without complying with the requirements of the Act, he is liable in damages to the creditor 6.

Effect of dissolution upon pending proceedings, &c. A judgment obtained against a company after its dissolution is invalid, and the solicitor acting for the company is liable personally to pay the costs of the action from the date of the dissolution and consequent revocation of his authority 7. After dissolution, however, the Court has jurisdiction to make an order upon an application made but not heard before the dissolution 8.

Bona vacantia. Where a company is dissolved, its personal property including its right against a bankrupt's estate in respect of debt vests in the Crown as bona vacantia 9. As to whether a debt to a company is extinguished by its dissolution see the last noted case. But estates and interests in land do not necessarily vest in the Crown. In such cases the reversion is accelerated 10. It has however been held in a recent case that the doctrine of bona vacantia extends to leaseholds and that where they are mortgaged the equity of redemption passes to the Crown upon dissolution of the company [1]. The principle under which the Crown takes bona vacantia is that the King is the owner of every thing which has no other owner [2].

Special order.

To relieve the directors and others from personal liability incurred by carrying on business after the company has been dissolved, the Court may make a special order, and it will not be made in a flagrant case [3].

Solicitor's authority is determind.

A solicitor's authority to represent the company is determined by its dissolution [4] and if he continues to act or purports to act for a company not in fact incorporated [5], he will be liable to the other party for costs.

No misfeasance proceedings after dissolution.

After dissolution no proceedings can be taken under s. 235 for misfeasance [6]. But a creditor has remedy in damages against the liquidator, if with knowledge of the debt he has wilfully or negligently distributed the assets without providing for such debt [7].

Liquidator can perform formal acts after dissolution.

Although when a company has been dissolved it ceases to exist for all purposes and its officers including the liquidators are functus officio [8], yet even after dissolution the liquidator can complete a formal act like giving a transfer in writing for a decree which has been already transferred by him while he was still a liquidator [9]; for a decree is not an actionable claim within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act, and therefore an assignment of a decree need not be in writing, though for the purposes of execution O. 21, r. 16, C. P. C., requires the transfer to be in writing.

As to the dissolution of a company under voluntary liquidation see. ss. 208E and 209H and notes.

in his custody or power relating to the company ; but, where he claims any lien on documents produced by him, the production shall be without prejudice to that lien, and the Court shall have jurisdiction in the winding up to determine all questions relating to that lien.

(4) If any person so summoned, after being tendered a reasonable sum for his expenses, refuses to come before the Court at the time appointed, not having a lawful impediment (made known to the Court at the time of its sitting, and allowed by it), the Court may cause him to be apprehended and brought before the Court for examination.

Object of the section.

This section was enacted to enable the Court in charge of liquidation proceedings to examine the persons mentioned therein to ascertain inter alia their conduct with regard to the management of the company and to find out the financial condition and the assets. In these proceedings there is no contest between two parties and therefore the proviso to s. 132 of the Evidence Act does not confer any special privilege on the persons so examined [1]. "The proceeding is a private examination which the Court sanctions in order that the liquidator may obtain the necessary information to enable him to proceed in the winding up, and for many reasons it is most undesirable that the opposing party in the litigation contemplated by the liquidator should be allowed to be present at a proceeding which is a proceeding for the purpose of informing the officer of the Court and the Court what course ought to be pursued" [2].

Powers of Court.

The powers of the Court under this section are very wide, and it is not necessary that the Court must first determine that the person called upon to furnish the information does actually possess that information. If the Court has reason to think, or even an allegation is made that a certain person is in possession of information which would be useful for the purposes of the winding up, the Court can call upon him to appear in Court and can examine him [3].

Examination by Court.

An order for examination under this section may be obtained by the liquidator or by a contributory. The Court can however of its own motion direct such an examination to be held [4]. S. 215 (now s. 216) enables the Court to pass orders under this section in a voluntary winding up [5] ; but such orders will be made only under exceptional circumstances [5].

Court's discretion.

The examination is, as a rule, entrusted to the liquidator, but the Court may commit the whole or some part of the examination to a creditor or contributory [6]. The Court can give the conduct of the examination to a petitioning creditor where the liquidator refuses to act or has not the means to act. The Court has discretion to allow a creditor to attend even where the official liquidator has the conduct of the examination. But such a discretion ought not to be exercised except in very extreme cases [7].

If the Judge has made an order for an examination, the Court of appeal will not generally interfere with his discretion[1], unless the order appears to be oppressive[2].

It is in the discretion of the Court conducting the winding up to determine whether it will exercise the powers vested in it by this section, but the discretion must be exercised judicially and not without consideration[3]. The order cannot be obtained as of right[4].

If a party is entitled to take part in or to conduct an examination, the ordinary rule must prevail that he is entitled to do so with the help of counsel[5]. But it is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Court whether the services of counsel should be allowed to an official liquidator[5].

Jurisdiction.

The Court has jurisdiction to order the examination to be held in open Court, but the jurisdiction should be exercised in very exceptional circumstances. For instance, a person not charged with fraud should not be examined in open Court[6]. As a rule the examination will be held in private and creditors and contributories will not be entitled to attend, unless they have obtained leave of the Court[7].

It must be just and beneficial.

Before granting an application under this section the Court ought to be satisfied that the inquiry is just and beneficial for the purposes of the winding up and not merely intended to harass and annoy the directors and managers[8], or for the purpose of advancing the individual interest of a single contributory[9].

What questions will be answered by the witness.

The witness must answer questions even if they relate to matters of hearsay[10], but he need not answer questions as to matters which might incriminate him or as to matters involving professional confidence[11]. The only ground on which a witness summoned to attend for examination can contest the validity of the summons is want of jurisdiction to issue it or to pass the order[12].

Inspection & making use of deposition.

The official liquidator is not entitled in a petition filed by him in Court, to make use of facts elicited in course of examination of persons held under this section copies whereof has been obtained by him under Rule 174 (now Rule 198) of Chap. XXXI of the Original Side Rules of the Calcutta High Court. The depositions so obtained are to be regarded as private documents 1. A deponenr who is a defendant in a suit brought by the official liquidator is, however, entitled to obtain a copy of his own deposition, upon his counsel undertaking on his behalf to prevent communication of his deposition to his co-defendants or their solicitors or counsel 1.

A witness may not inspect and take copies of the deposition of his examination under this section, unless he has obtained the leave of the Court 2. In the undernoted case 3 Mr. Justice Buckland held that in the interests of criminal justice the Court should allow a public officer charged with the investigation of criminal offences, such as a Deputy Commissioner of Police, to inspect the depositions of a person, who is believed to be involved in a criminal offence, under this section and to inform himself of any thing that may come to light on such inspection ; he cannot however take copies of the desposition but only notes, and in doing so he cannot reproduce verbatim any portion of the deposition, however brief.

Production of document.

The witness should be examined first and it would depend upon the result of the examination whether a further order for the production of any and what relevant documents ought properly to be made 4.

Delivery of document.

Delivery of a document without prejudice to an alleged right of lien does not involve its admission and does not in any way prejudice it if it exists 9. If delivery is necessary for the purposes of a voluntary winding up, the liquidator is entitled to the delivery 5. Where there is no good right of lien properly so called, there may be a right of retention on the ground of implied contract 5.

Liquidator's powers.

A liquidator while so acting is an officer of the Court charged with the duty of investigating the affairs of the company and the acts of its past managing agents and directors, and he is entitled to be given all reasonable information as to past transactions. Any creditor who refuses does so at his own peril and in the ultimate resort can be summoned under this section, and if necessary, arrested 6. But the liquidator cannot use a summons under this section to obtain relief against a stranger, for instance, by seeking to enforce a claim against an alleged debtor to the company or asking for rescission of the contract 7.

Where order is made.

Orders have been made to compel information from—the managing clerk of a bank with which a contributory had an account ; the broker by whom a transfer was made in a case in which the transferee was an infant ; the sister and nephew of a contributory who had been served with a balance order ; the mother-in-law of a contributory ; a creditor of the company who claimed commission for service rendered and work done as agent of the company ; brokers who entered into contracts with the company 8. But a mere creditor cannot be examined 9.

The persons examined under this section will not be allowed their costs 10.

Appeal. Under s. 202 an appeal lies from an order under this section [1]. But the Calcutta High Court (C. C. Ghose & Buckland, JJ.) held that an order under this section directing the directors to appear before the Court for examination is not a judgment within cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and therefore not appealable [2].

Power to order public examination of promoters, directors, etc.

196. (1) When an order has been made for winding up a company by the Court, and the official liquidator has applied to the Court stating that in his opinion a fraud has been committed by any person in the promotion or formation of the company or by any director or other officer of the company, in relation to the company since its formation, the Court may, after consideration of the application, direct that any person who has taken any part in the promotion or formation of the company, or has been a director, manager or other officer of the company shall attend before the Court on a day appointed by the Court for that purpose, and be publicly examined as to the promotion or formation or the conduct of the business of the company, or as to his conduct and dealings as director, manager or other officer thereof.

(2) The official liquidator shall take part in the examination, and for that purpose may, if specially authorised by the Court in that behalf, employ such legal assistance as may be sanctioned by the Court.

(3) Any creditor or contributory may also take part in the examination either personally or by any person entitled to appear before the Court.

(4) The Court may put such questions to the person examined as the Court thinks fit.

(5) The person examined shall be examined on oath, and shall answer all such questions as the Court may put or allow to be put to him.

(6) A person ordered to be examined under this section may at his own cost employ any person entitled to appear before the Court, who shall be at liberty to put to him such questions as the Court may deem just for the purpose of enabling him to explain or qualify any answers given by him: Provided that if he is, in the opinion of the Court, exculpated from any charges made or suggested against him, the Court may allow him such costs as in its discretion it may think fit.

(7) Notes of the examination shall be taken down in writing, and shall be read over to or by, and signed by, the person examined, and may thereafter be used in evidence against him in civil proceedings, and shall be open to the inspection of any creditor or contributory at all reasonable times.

(8) The Court may, if it thinks fit, adjourn the examination from time to time.

(9) An examination under this section may, if the Court so directs, and subject to any rules in this behalf, be held before any District Judge or before any officer of the High Court, being an official referee, master, registrar or deputy registrar, and the powers of the Court under this section as to the conduct of the examination, but not as to costs, may be exercised by the person before whom the examination is held.

Distinction between this section and the previous one.

The two sections have quite different scopes. S. 195 is intended to be used for the purposes of promoting the liquidation proceedings, while s. 196 is primarily intended to investigate the conduct of those who have been charged with its affairs 1. It appears that under the previous section the Court can of its own motion for the purpose of obtaining information summon and examine the persons mentioned therein. But under the present section, before the Court takes any action, the official liquidator must make an application to the Court stating that in his opinion a fraud has been committed by any person in the promotion or formation of the company or by a director or officer after its formation 2.

When the examination is ordered.

A public examination can be ordered only when, (i) the company is being wound up by the Court, (ii) the official liquidator has applied to the Court, (iii) the application alleges fraud or the facts stated in it show clearly that in the opinion of the official liquidator there has been fraud on the part of the persons to be examined 2. The official liquidator must make the application whenever he arrives at a judicial conclusion that such facts are in proof that it becomes his duty to make the application 3.

Application and its contents.

The application should set out such facts as the basis of his opinion as will warrant the Court to order the examination 4. Fraud on strangers will not however be taken into account 5. The power to direct a public examination of the persons does not apply to any one of those persons against whom a prima facie case of fraud has not been disclosed by the report of the official receiver 6. The Court before it passes an order for public examination must be satisfied that some facts are given in the application which entitle the Court to find that there is a prima facie case of fraud against the particular persons named. The wording of the section does not justify the Court on a general allegation of fraud in the management of the company, in making an order for public examination of "any person" not directly implicated in the application. But there is no necessity to specify the charge of fraud with the same particularity as would be necessary in a criminal charge. What should be the contents of an application under this section depends on the facts of the particular case 1. In the last cited case it has been held that the English decisions on the point of an investigation by a liquidator into the conduct of the officers of the company before liquidation are not binding upon Indian Courts, on the ground that the language of this section differs from the language of the corresponding section (s. 175) of the English Act of 1908. But is the difference substantial ?

Order may be made ex parte.

The official liquidator may apply ex parte for an order for public examination 2. The person against whom the order is made can move to have the order discharged 1, provided that he applies within a reasonable time 3.

Costs.

The Court cannot order the official liquidator personally to pay costs, as he is merely discharging a statutory duty 4. The official liquidator will only be ordered to pay costs out of the company in the event of exculpation of the person accused 5.

Inspection of notes.

It is only a creditor or contributory or some party to the proceedings which are pending who would be entitled to inspect the notes of examination under this section 6. An order refusing inspection and copies of statements is appealable under S. 202 6.

S. 132, Evidence Act.

This section was not intended to override the provisions of the Evidence Act, and the intention of the legislature in using the words "in civil proceedings" in sub-s. 7 was to make the statement admissible in civil proceedings and subject to s. 132 of the Evidence Act in criminal proceedings. In an examination under this section there being no contest between two parties the proviso to s. 132 of the Evidence Act does not confer special privileges on the persons so examined 7.

Application in voluntary liquidation.

Under s. 215 (now s. 216) a voluntary liquidator is entitled to ask the Court for an order for the examination of persons who are connected with the company with regard to its formation or management and the Court has power to make such an order 8. But where the provisions of s. 203 are not strictly complied with, the company is not in voluntary liquidation and the Court has no power to order the directors to be examined under this section 9.

The pendency of an action by the liquidating company against an examinee or a third party may be a ground for postponing the examination 10.

Appeal.

An order directing that a person should be examined under this section is not a judgment within cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, hence no appeal lies against the order 11.

Power to arrest absconding contributory.

197. The Court, at any time either before or after making a winding up order on proof of probable cause for believing that a contributory is about to quit British India or otherwise to abscond, or to remove or conceal any of his property, for the purpose of evading payment of calls or of avoiding examination respecting the affairs of the company, may cause the contributory to be arrested and his books and papers and moveable property to be seized, and him and them to be safely kept until such time as the Court may order.

Under this section the Court may order the contributory to be arrested and his property to be seized, or it may order the one without the other 1. Upon evidence that a contributory is about to sell his goods and chattels for the purpose of evading payment of a call, the Court may make an order for the seizure of the goods, but may decline to order his arrest upon a mere hearsay statement of his intention to leave the country 2.

Saving of other proceedings.

198. Any powers by this Act conferred on the Court shall be in addition to, and not in restriction of, any existing powers of instituting proceedings against any contributory or debtor of the company, or the estate of any contributory or debtor, for the recovery of any call or other sums.

Enforcement of and Appeal from Orders.

Power to enforce orders.

199. All orders made by a Court under this Act may be enforced in the same manner in which decrees of such Court made in any suit pending therein may be enforced.

Application of Civ. Pro. Code.

An order for payment under s. 186 must be regarded as a decree and enforced as such. This means that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to execution of decrees are applicable to the execution of such orders 3. Where such an order is sought to be enforced through a Court other than the one which passed it, s. 201 of the Act removes the necessity for complying with the procedure laid down in s. 39 and Or. XXI, rr. 4 and 5, C. P. C. and dispenses with the requirements of rule 6 of that Order and empowers the Court to act on a certified copy of the order alone 4. An assignee or transferee of the order however cannot make an application for enforcement of the order without recourse to the procedure laid down by O. XXI, r. 16, C. P. C. which requires that an application by a transferee of a decree for execution after substitution of his name can be entertained only by the Court which passed the decree 3.

Limitation.

Under this section all orders made by a liquidation Court may be enforced in the same manner in which decrees of such Courts made in any suit pending therein may be enforced. Consequently a call order passed by a liquidation

Order made in any Court to be enforced by other Courts.

200. Any order made by a Court for or in the course of the winding up of a company shall be enforced in any place in British India other than that in which such Court is situate, by the Court that would have had jurisdiction in respect of such company if the registered office of the company had been situate at such other place, and in the same manner in all respects as if such order had been made by the Court that is hereby required to enforce the same.

This section applies to a case where an order made by the High Court of one province is to be enforced in another province; it can only be enforced by the High Court of that other province [2].

Procedure.

A decree of one High Court in liquidation proceedings cannot be sent direct for execution to a District Court under another High Court. SS. 199 and 200 must be read so as to be consistent with each other [3].

Effect of ss. 199 & 200.

The conjoint effect of s. 199 and this section is that the order that is filed should be treated in the same manner as a decree passed by the High Court in which it is filed and transferred for execution to the respective District Courts concerned, and it is not competent for the High Court to authorize the official liquidator to apply to the District Court concerned for enforcing under s. 164 an order, e. g., for payment [4], under s. 187 [5].

Mode of dealing with orders to be enforced by other Courts.

201. Where any order made by one Court is to be enforced by another Court, a certified copy of the order so made shall be produced to the proper officer of the Court required to enforce the same, and the production of such certified copy shall be sufficient evidence of such order having been made; and thereupon the last-mentioned Court shall take the requisite steps in the matter for enforcing the order, in the same manner as if it were the order of the Court enforcing the same.

Transfer of decree.

Where an order made by one Court is sought to be enforced through another Court, this section removes the necessity for complying with the procedure laid down in s. 39 and Or. XXI, rr. 4 and 5, C. P. C. [6]. See notes to s. 199.

[6] Tharya Ram v. Popat Ram (supra).

An order for winding up was made by the Punjab Chief Court and under s. 164 subsequent proceedings were taken in the Court of the District Judge of Lahore against contributories residing in districts within the jurisdiction of the Allahabad High Court. On an application to the latter Court by the official liquidator to enforce these orders it was held that the High Court had jurisdiction to enforce the orders by proceeding in execution before itself or to authorize the official liquidator to apply to the various District Courts in respect of each of the persons against whom orders for contribution had been passed 1.

Appeals from orders.

202. Re-hearings of and appeals from, any order or decision made or given in the matter of the winding up of a company by the Court may be had in the same manner and subject to the same conditions in and subject to which appeals may be had from any order or decision of the same Court in cases within its ordinary jurisdiction.

Provisions of the previous Act.

Compare s. 141 of Act X of 1866 and s. 169 of Act VI of 1882 where the right of appeal was given "subject to this restriction that no such re-hearing or appeal shall be heard unless notice of the same is given within three weeks after any order complained of has been made in manner in which notices of appeal are ordinarily given under the Code of Civil Procedure, unless such time is extended by the Court of Appeal."

Where a private offer to the official liquidator to purchase certain machinery belonging to the company which was its sole property was sanctioned by the District Judge under s. 144 (c) of the Act of 1882 (corresponding to s. 179 of the present Act) without notice to the creditors or contributories and without satisfying himself that no better offer would be forthcoming if due publicity was given and on the application by the contributories revoked his order, it was held that whether or not the District Judge had a power of review either under s. 169 of that Act or under his inherent power the High Court could permit the contributories and creditors to file an appeal under s. 169 against the original order granting sanction, and excuse delay in filing the appeal 2.

Previous Act applicable—where.

Those sections have been re-enacted omitting the restriction noted above. But where the liquidation of a company began before the present Act came into force, all the proceedings in the winding up including the course of appeal would be governed by the old law as was provided by s. 284 of the present Act before its amendment by Act II of 1938 (see the old s. 284 printed under the amended s. 284 post). In such a case an appeal was barred by time if notice of appeal was not served on the respondent within three weeks according to the provisions of s. 169 of the old Act 3. But if an appeal was presented within the prescribed period, the appellate Court could extend the time for service of notice 4.

Appeal.

This section is wide enough to cover appeals against any order made in the matter of winding up provided such an order finally decides a dispute between the parties or deprives the appellant of a substantial or important right and is not a mere formal or interlocutory order 1. The last part of this section which lays down that appeal will be had "in the same manner &c." merely regulates the procedure to be followed in the presentation and hearing of such appeals 2. Thus where the High Court holds that an application under s. 235 is maintainable, the order is appealable under the Letters Patent 2. Where the managing agents' objections to their being examined under s. 195 and to the official liquidator conducting the examination through counsel were disallowed, an appeal against the order was competent 1. The wording of this section is wide enough also to include an order under s. 237 directing the official liquidator to prosecute certain persons mentioned in that section for criminal offences 3. See notes under s. 153 ante.

Appeals lie against all orders made in the matter of winding up, provided such an order finally decides a dispute between the parties or deprives the appellant of a substantial and important right and is not a mere formal or interlocutory order 4. But the Allahabad High Court held in 1916 that a right of appeal under this section is co-extensive with the right of appeal conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure 5. This case has been considered by the above Full Bench of the Lahore High Court.

Petition for re-hearing.

It was held under s. 169 of Act VI of 1882 that the rehearing of an order made in the winding up could only take place before a Court of Appeal, but an order which had been obtained ex parte or which was in truth a nullity might be discharged by the Court which made it 6. S. 169 had no application to petitions for setting aside ex parte decrees 6. A Judge has inherent power to recall an order passed, without notice and without hearing parties, to correct any serious injustice done to them 7.

Review.

This section was not intended to refer to a case in which a Judge upon the discovery of fresh matter considered it expedient to pass a fresh order to review an order passed by him 8. Where an objection being filed for the compulsory winding up of a company, the Court ordered that the winding up petition be taken off the file on the company furnishing security to the satisfaction of the registrar and the registrar being satisfied with the security accepted it, it was held that the order could not be reviewed 9.

Who can appeal.

An appeal is a stage in and part of the proceedings in a suit and therefore no person can appeal unless he is a party to the suit. A person who had not complied with the Rules framed by the High Court and had not entered his name in the book kept for the purpose and had not in fact attended the proceedings, has no locus standie to appeal [1]. In the last cited case the application was not even treated as a petition for revision.

An appeal against a winding up order may be taken by a creditor or a contributory who has appeared [2] in the winding up Court or by the company itself. Where after the winding up order the majority of contributories declare themselves at a meeting held for the purpose in favour of appealing against the order in the name of the company, an appeal so instituted in the company's name is competent, but this is all mere form. The appeal in such cases is really that of the contributories who are behind it and they may truly be regarded as the appellants [3].

If the company is the only appellant, security for costs of the appeal must be given [4], not out of the company's funds, but from an outside source, namely, by the directors or shareholders who are at the back of the appeal, and the security must be substantial [5]. Application for security must, except under special circumstances, be made before the appeal is in the paper for hearing [6]. The directors may appeal in the name of the company from the winding up order [4]. With the Court's leave the liquidator may appeal [7], but not an outsider [8]. Unless a person shows that he has got an interest which is adversely affected by the decree of the lower Court, or has an interest in the subject matter which is under litigation, he has no right to appeal [9].

Contributories or creditors who have not appeared below cannot appeal without leave [10]. Other interested persons have no right of appeal, but may be heard as amicus curie [11]. As to the costs of various parties see the case noted below [12].

Winding up appeals should be expedited; see the caustic remarks of their Lordships in the case of note [3].

Parties to appeal.

The official liquidator is not a necessary party to an appeal against a compulsory winding up order. He cannot be said to be "interested" in the result of the appeal, because after the compulsory winding up order the property of the company does not vest in him, but remains vested in the company. It is however desirable that, as a general rule, he should be made a party to such appeal in order to prevent possible collusion amongst interested parties and to ensure that all the necessary facts are laid before the Court and that proceedings are conducted according to law [13].

Effect of appeal.

An appeal does not stay the proceedings except so far as the Judge of the Court of Appeal orders. Where a winding up order is discharged on appeal, all proceedings taken under it are also discharged 1.

From which orders an appeal lies.

An appeal lies from an order refusing to wind up a company 2, or from an order made for examination of directors, or where the order impugned is vexatious or oppressive so far as the appellant is concerned, and where it is not necessary or beneficial for the purposes of the winding up 3.

An order directing a preferential payment to be made to a creditor is one which relates to and is an incident of the winding up, and the right of appeal is an incident of the winding up 4. But the appointment of any person as an official liquidator is so entirely a matter for the discretion of the Judge dealing with the winding up, that an appellate Court will not review his decision except under very special circumstances or unless it can be shown that the Judge had acted on a wrong principle 5.

This section applies only to orders made in the matter of winding up and has no application to an order fixing the remuneration of an employee of liquidator ; such an order therefore is not appealable 6.

An order passed in a proceeding under s. 200 is an order made in the winding up 7. But an order passed under cl. (6) of s. 247 refusing to restore a company to the register is not an order made in the matter of winding up and hence it is not appealable. Where the order is based on an erroneous view of the law it is however open to revision 8. There was also no appeal under this section from an order made on an application under s. 153 by a company which was not in the course of being wound up 9. But now right of appeal has been given by the new sub-s. (7) of s. 153. An order refusing inspection and copies of statement under s. 196 is appealable 10.

An order depriving a creditor, who has a claim which he long ago put in the form of a proof of debt against a company and which the liquidators are willing to admit, is an order which deprives him of a substantial and important right and it cannot be held that such an order is not appealable by reason that it is not a judgment under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent 11.

An appeal is competent from an order passed in winding up proceedings under supervision of Court 12.

An order of the District Judge as liquidation Judge dismissing certain objections to the attachment of property is not appealable under this section, as the order is under O. 21, R. 56, C. P. C. 13.

"If the order is passed by a District Court", says the judgment of a recent full Court of the Lahore High Court, "the appeal would lie to the High Court and the period of limitation would be 90 days from the date of the order as prescribed by Art. 156, Limitation Act; if however the winding up is proceeding before a Single Bench of the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, the forum of appeal would be a Bench of two or more Judges of the High Court under cl. 10, Letters Patent, and the limitation for such appeals is 20 days as laid down in Art. 151, Limitation Act. But if the matter is being dealt with by a Bench of two or more Judges of the High Court, no appeal would lie from the order of such a Bench to any Court in India, but the aggrieved party may appeal to His Majesty in Council in the manner and subject to the conditions laid down in s. 109, Civil Procedure Code or cl. 29, Letters Patent, and in such a case the application for leave to appeal must be made within 90 days of the order (Art. 179)" 1.

Limitation.

Appeals from orders passed by the High Court in exercise of its original jurisdiction being governed by Art. 151, Limitation Act, which is under s. 3 of that Act subject to s. 12 of the same Act, the appellant is entitled, as of right, to deduct the time requisite for obtaining copies. Consequently s. 12 Limitation Act governs an appeal preferred under the present section from an order of a single Judge of the High Court exercising original jurisdiction where the forum of appeal (as distinct from the right of appeal) is provided by the Letters Patent, and therefore the appellant is entitled to exclude the "time requisite" for obtaining a copy of the judgment appealed against, even though under the rules and orders of the High Court no copy of the judgment is required to be filed with the memorandum of appeal 2.

Deduction of time for copies.

The Court under the Act being a Court of civil jurisdiction is governed by the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as made applicable by s. 141 of the Code and should in dealing with ex parte orders proceed under O. 9, r. 13 mutatis mutandis 3.

C. P. C. applies.

Where an application is made to discharge an order made in chambers, the analogy of this section will be followed 4.

Voluntary winding up.

203. A company may be wound up voluntarily—

Circumstances in which company may be wound up voluntarily.

(1) when the period (if any) fixed for the duration of the company by the articles expires, or the event (if any) occurs, on the occurrence of which the articles provide that the company is to be dissolved and the company in general meeting has passed a resolution requiring the company to be wound up voluntarily; and the expression "resolution for voluntarily winding up" when used hereafter in this Part means a resolution passed under clause (1), clause (2) or clause (3) of this section.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, at the end of clause (3) the words in italics have been inserted.

Meaning of "company." The word "company" does not include an unregistered company[1], but includes a company formed and registered under the Indian Act of 1866 or any Act or Acts repealed thereby or under the Act of 1882[2].

Creditors' right. Creditors had no voice, before the amending Act of 1936, as to whether a company should be wound up voluntarily; but they might, under an order of the Court, obtain a certain amount of control over the proceedings, Now see ss. 209 to 209H.

Cl. (2). A company by passing a special resolution can wind up itself under this clause or under cl. (1) of s. 162[3].

Members' power. The members' power to wind up voluntarily cannot be excluded by any provision in the articles except to the extent of precluding certain shareholders or classes of them from the right of voting[4].

Resolution when invalid. The resolution to wind up will not be valid if it is passed at a meeting which was not properly convened[5], or at a meeting at which a quorum was not present[6], or if the resolution passed at the meeting was not in accordance with the resolution of which notice had been given[7]. But a resolution to wind up will not be rendered invalid by the fact that it was passed contemporaneously and in concert with an invalid resolution for reconstruction[8].

Notice. The notice must show clearly that it was intended to propose a resolution that the company was unable, by reason of its liabilities, to continue its business[9]. A notice stating that a resolution in the terms of this section will be proposed may however be sufficient[10].

Where a notice was given calling an extraordinary general meeting and, if necessary, to pass a special resolution that the company be voluntarily wound up and that liquidators be appointed, and then it went on to say that in the event of the said resolution being passed a special meeting would be held immediately after the extraordinary general meeting confirming the same, and a resolution was passed for winding up the company and liquidators were appointed; it was held that the resolution not being a special resolution as defined in the Act, the voluntary winding up was not according to law and the appointment of liquidators was a nullity and they had no locus standie to exercise the statutory power of a properly appointed liquidator 1.

What is a fatal defect in an extraordinary resolution.

If an irregularity in passing an extraordinary resolution directing a voluntary winding up is discovered after the supervision order under s. 221, the order may be discharged on application to the Court of Appeal and the time for making the appeal, if necessary, may be extended 2. The omission to state in the resolution that the company cannot, by reason of its liabilities, continue its business and that it is advisable to wind it up is a fatal defect 2. Where the company has not passed an extraordinary resolution to the effect that it cannot by reason of its liabilities continue its business and that it is advisable to wind it up as required by s. 203 (3), and the notice calling the general meeting at which the question of liquidation was discussed did not specify the intention to propose the resolution as an extraordinary resolution, the company is not in voluntary liquidation in accordance with the provisions of the Act 3.

Waiver of formalities.

It is however competent for all shareholders acting together to waive the formalities required by s. 81 as to notice of intention to propose a resolution as an extraordinay resolution, and all the shareholders meeting and passing a resolution to wind up the company, the resolution is an extraordinary resolution within the meaning of this section, and it is not open to a creditor to impeach its validity 4.

Contempt of Court.

It is a contempt of Court, while a petition for compulsory winding up is pending, to obtain by improper means a resolution for a voluntary winding up with a view to mislead the Court as to the real views of the shareholders and thereby induce the Court to abstain from making a compulsory order 5.

When compulsory order may be made.

An order to wind up a company compulsorily will be made on the petition of a paid up shareholder, notwithstanding that an extraordinary resolution has been passed to wind it up voluntarily 6.

Effect of resolution.

Passing a resolution for voluntary liquidation does not operate as a notice of discharge of the servants of the company where the business is continued 7. Where a company goes into voluntary liquidation merely with a view to reconstruct itself, the property of the old company being transferred to the new company, it does not cease to carry on business within the meaning of an agreement which provides that in the event of the company ceasing to carry on business the Municipality should have the right of purchasing the company's telephone lines with plants, stores &c. 8.

Gratuities.

A company should not, after the commencement of the voluntary winding up, give gratuities to directors or servants and if they are voted, the liquidator should refuse to pay them 9.

Commencement of voluntary winding up.

204. A voluntary winding up shall be deemed to commence at the time of the passing of the resolution for voluntarily winding up.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words in italics have been substituted for the words "authorising the winding up."

Importance of the date.

The date of commencement of a winding up is important, as past members may escape by reason of a year having elapsed since they ceased to be members 1, or fraudulent preference may have become unimpeachable 2.

A special resolution was deemed to have been passed at the date when is was confirmed 3. But confirmation is no longer necessary ; see s. 81 (2) ante.

When followed by other winding up.

Where a voluntary winding up was continued under supervision 4, or was followed by a compulsory winding up 5, the winding up commenced at the date of the confirmation of the special resolution authorizing the voluntary winding up 6, and it made no difference that the order was made on a petition presented before the resolution was passed where nothing had been done until after the resolution 7.

Effect of voluntary winding up on status of company.

205. When a company is wound up voluntarily, the company shall, from the commencement of the winding up, cease to carry on its business, except so far as may be required for the beneficial winding up thereof :

Provided that the corporate state and corporate powers of the company shall, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in its articles, continue until it is dissolved.

From the commencement of winding up a company's existence continues solely for the purpose of the winding up, and not for another purpose such as an amalgamation 8, or a reconstruction 9. With the sanction under s. 208A (2) or s. 209D (2) the directors' powers may be exercised 10. As to compulsory winding up see s. 179 and notes.

When a limited company, against which an action is brought, subsequently goes into voluntary liquidation, it still remains as defendant on the record. The liquidators are not parties to the suit and it is improper to implead them as parties defendants. The effect of the liquidation on the suit is merely that in the conduct of the defence, the company would, before liquidation, act through the directors, and after liquidation through the liquidators 11.

A resolution to wind up does not operate as a dismissal of the company's servants [1].

Compare s. 179, cl. (b) and see notes thereto.

Notice of resolution to wind up voluntarily.

206. (1) Notice of any special resolution or extraordinary resolution for winding up a company voluntarily shall be given by the company within ten days of the passing of the same by advertisement in the [Official Gazette], and also in some newspaper (if any) circulating in the district where the registered office of the company is situate.

(2) If a company makes default in complying with the requirements of this section, it shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues; and every officer of the company who knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default shall be liable to a like penalty.

In sub-s. (1) the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "local official Gazette" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Declaration of solvency.

207. (1) *Where it is proposed to wind up a company voluntarily, the directors of the company or, in the case of a company having more than two directors, the majority of the directors may, at a meeting of the directors held before the date on which the notices of the meeting at which the resolution for the winding up of the company is to be proposed are sent out, * make a declaration verified by an affidavit to the effect that they have made a full inquiry into the affairs of the company, and that, having so done, they have formed the opinion that the company will be able to pay its debts in full within a period, not exceeding three years, from the commencement of the winding up.*

(2) Such declaration shall be supported by a report of the company's auditors on the company's affairs, and shall have no effect for the purposes of this Act unless it is delivered to the registrar for registration before the date mentioned in sub-section (1) of the section.

(3) A winding up in the case of which a declaration has been made and delivered in accordance with this section is in this Act referred to as a "members' voluntary winding up", and a winding up in the case of which a declaration has not been made and delivered as aforesaid is in this Act referred to as "a creditors' voluntary winding up."

Amendment. By sec. 105 of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the new ss. 207 to 218 (both included) have been substituted for ss. 207 to 219, both included, of the Act of 1913. As a result there is no s. 219 in this amended Act. The wordings of some of the original sections reappear in the new sections; so relevant case notes have been given at the appropriate places under the new sections.

By the Repealing and Amending Act XXXIV of 1939 the word "to" between "sent out" and "make a declaration" in sub-s. (1) has been omitted.

The above s. 207 is new and reproduces s. 230 of the English Act of 1929. The original ss. 207 to 219 are given below :—

Consequences of voluntary winding up. 207. The following consequences shall ensue on the voluntary winding up of a company :—

(i) the assets of the company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu and, subject thereto, shall, unless the articles otherwise provide, be distributed among the members according to their rights and interests in the company ;

(ii) the company in general meeting shall appoint one or more liquidators for the purpose of winding up the affairs and distributing the assets of the company, and may fix the remuneration to be paid to him or them ;

(iii) on the appointment of a liquidator all the powers of the directors shall cease, except so far as the company in general meeting, or the liquidator, sanctions the continuance thereof ;

(iv) the liquidator may, without the sanction of the Court, exercise all powers by this Act given to the official liquidator in a winding up by the Court ;

(v) the liquidator may exercise the powers of the Court under this Act of settling a list of contributories, and of making calls, and shall pay the debts of the company, and adjust the rights of the contributories among themselves ;

(vi) the list of contributories shall be prima facie evidence of the liability of the persons named therein to be contributories ;

(vii) when several liquidators are appointed, every power hereby given may be exercised by such one or more of them as may be determined by the company at the time of their appointment, or in default of such determination by any number not less than two ;

(viii) if from any cause whatever there is no liquidator acting, the Court may, on the application of a contributory, appoint a liquidator ; and

(ix) the Court may, on cause shown, remove a liquidator, and appoint another liquidator.

Notice by liquidator of his appointment. 208. (1) The liquidator in a voluntary winding up shall, within twenty-one days after his appointment, file with the registrar a notice of his appointment in the form prescribed.

(2) If the liquidator fails to comply with the requirements of this section, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

209. (1) Every liquidator appointed by a company in a voluntary winding up shall, within seven days from his appointment, send notice by post to all persons who appear to him to be creditors of the company that a meeting of the creditors of the company will be held on a date, not being less than twenty-one days nor more than one month after his appointment, and at a place and hour, to be specified in the notice, and shall also advertise notice of the meeting once in the local official Gazette and once at least in some newspaper (if any) circulating in the district where the registered office or principal place of business of the company was situate.

Rights of creditor in a voluntary winding up.

(2) At the meeting to be held in pursuance of the foregoing provisions of this section the creditors shall determine whether an application shall be made to the Court for the appointment of any person as liquidator in the place of, or jointly with, the liquidator appointed by the company, and, if the creditors so resolve, an application may be made accordingly to the Court at any time not later than fourteen days after the date of the meeting, by any creditor appointed for the purpose at the meeting :

Provided that the Court may, by order at any time, extend the time for making an application under this sub-section for such period as the Court thinks proper.

(3) On any such application the Court may make an order either for the removal of the liquidator appointed by the company and for the appointment of some other person as liquidator or for the appointment of some other person to act as liquidator jointly with the liquidator appointed by the company, or such other order as, having regard to the interests of the creditors and contributories of the company, may seem just.

(4) The Court shall make such order as to the costs of the application as it may think fit, and, if it is of opinion that, having regard to the interests of the creditors in the liquidation, there were reasonable grounds for the application, may order the costs of the application to be paid out of the assets of the company, notwithstanding that the application is dismissed or otherewise disposed of adversely to the applicant.

210. (1) If a vacancy occurs by death, resignation or otherwise in the office of liquidator appointed by the company in a voluntary winding up, the company in general meeting may, subject to any arrangement with its creditors, fill the vacancy.

Power to fill vacancy in office of liquidator.

(2) For that purpose a general meeting may be called by any contributory or, if there were more liquidators than one, by the continuing liquidators.

(3) The meeting shall be held in manner prescribed by the articles, or in such manner as may, on application by any contributory or by the continuing liquidators, be determined by the Court.

211. (1) A company about to be, or in course of being, wound up voluntarily may, by extraordinary resolution, delegate to its creditors, or to any committee of them, the power of appointing liquidators or any of them, and of supplying vacancies among the liquidators, or enter into any arrangement with respect to the powers to be exercised by the liquidators, and the manner in which they are to be exercised.

(2) Any act done by creditors in pursuance of any such delegated power shall have the same effect as if it had been done by the company.

Arrangement when binding on creditors.

212. (1) Any arrangement entered into between a company about to be, or in the course of being, wound up voluntarily and its creditors shall, subject to any right of appeal under this section, be binding on the company if sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution, and on the creditors if acceded to by three-fourths in number and value of the creditors.

(2) Any creditor or contributory may, within three weeks from the completion of the arrangement, appeal to the Court against it, and the Court may thereupon, as it thinks just, amend, vary or confirm the arrangement.

Power for liquidators to accept shares, etc., as a consideration for sale of property of company.

213. (1) Where a company is proposed to be, or is in course of being, wound up altogether voluntarily, and the whole or part of its business or property is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company (in this section called the transferee company) the liquidator of the first-mentioned company (in this section called the transferor company) may, with the sanction of a special resolution of that company conferring either a general authority on the liquidator or an authority in respect of any particular arrangement, receive, in compensation or part compensation for the transfer or sale, shares, policies or other like interests in the transferee company, for distribution among the members of the transferor company, or may enter into any other arrangement whereby the members of the transferor company may, in lieu of receiving cash, shares, policies or other like interests, or in addition thereto, participate in the profits of, or receive any other benefit from, the transferee company.

(2) Any sale or arrangement in pursuance of this section shall be binding on the members of the transferor company.

(3) If any member of the transferor company who did not vote in favour of the special resolution at either of the meetings held for passing and confirming the same expresses his dissent therefrom in writing addressed to the liquidator, and left at the registered office of the company within seven days after the confirmation of the special resolution, he may require the liquidator either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect, or to purchase his interest at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration in manner hereinafter provided.

(4) If the liquidator elects to purchase the member's interest, the purchase-money must be paid before the company is dissolved, and be raised by the liquidator in such manner as may be determined by special resolution.

(5) A special resolution shall not be invalid for the purposes of this section by reason that it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution for winding up the company, or for appointing liquidators; but if an order is made within a year for winding up the company by or subject to the supervision of the Court, the special resolution shall not be valid unless sanctioned by the Court.

214. (1) The price to be paid for the purchase of the interest of any dissentient member may be determined by agreement. If the parties dispute about the same, such dispute shall be settled by arbitration.

Mode of determining price.

(2) The provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, other than those restricting the application of the Act in respect of the subject-matter of the arbitration, shall apply to all arbitrations in pursuance of this section.

215. (1) Where a company is being wound up voluntarily, the liquidator or any contributory or creditor may apply to the Court to determine any question arising in the winding up, or to exercise as respects the enforcing of calls, or any other matters, all or any of the powers which the Court might exercise if the company were being wound up by the Court.

Power to apply to Court.

(2) The Court, if satisfied that the determination of the question or the required exercise of power will be just and beneficial, may accede wholly or partially to the application on such terms and conditions as the Court thinks fit, or may make such other order on the application as the Court thinks just.

216. (1) Where a company is being wound up voluntarily, the liquidator may, from time to time, summon general meetings of the company for the purpose of obtaining the sanction of the company by special or extraordinary resolution, or for any other purposes he may think fit.

Power of liquidator to call general meeting.

(2) In the event of the winding up continuing for more than one year, the liquidator shall summon a general meeting of the company at the end of the first year from the commencement of the winding up, and of each succeeding year, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient, and shall lay before the meeting a statement in the prescribed form containing the prescribed particulars with respect to the proceedings in and the position of the liquidation.

217. (1) In the case of every voluntary winding up, as soon as the affairs of the company are fully wound up, the liquidator shall make up an account of the winding up, showing how the winding up has been conducted and the property of the company has been disposed of; and thereupon shall call a general meeting of the company for the purpose of laying before it the account, and giving any explanation thereof.

Final meeting and dissolution.

(2) The meeting shall be called by advertisement, specifying the time, place and object thereof, and published one month at least before the meeting in the manner specified in section 206.

(3) Within one week after the meeting, the liquidator shall file with the registrar a return of the holding of the meeting, and of its date, and in default of so doing, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

(4) The registrar on the filing of the return shall forthwith register it, and, on the expiration of three months from the registration of the return, the company shall be deemed to be dissolved :

Provided that the Court may, on the application of the liquidator or of any other person who appears to the Court to be interested, make an order deferring the date at which the dissolution of the company is to take effect for such time as the Court thinks fit.

(5) It shall be the duty of the person on whose application an order of the Court under sub-section (4) is made, within twenty-one days after the making of the order, to file with the registrar a certified copy of the order, and if that person fails so to do, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

Costs of voluntary liquidation.

218. All costs, charges and expenses properly incurred in the voluntary winding up of a company, including the remuneration of the liquidator, shall be payable out of the assets of the company in priority to all other claims at the date of the winding up.

Saving for rights of creditors and contributories.

219. The voluntary winding up of a company shall not bar the right of any creditor or contributory to have it wound up by the Court, if the Court is of opinion, in the case of an application by a creditor, that the rights of the creditor or, in the case of an application by a contributory, that the rights of the contributories will be prejudiced by a voluntary winding up.

Members' voluntary winding up.

Provisions applicable to a member's voluntary winding up.

208. The provisions contained in sections 208A to 208E, both inclusive, shall apply in relation to a member's voluntary winding up.

This section reproduces s. 231 of the English Act of 1929.

Power of company to appoint and fix remuneration of liquidators.

208A. (1) The company in general meeting shall appoint one or more liquidators for the purpose of winding up the affairs and distributing the assets of the company, and may fix the remuneration to be paid to him or them.

(2) On the appointment of a liquidator all the powers of the directors shall cease, except so far as the company in general meeting, or the liquidator, sanctions the continuance thereof.

This section redroduces s. 232 of the English Act of 1929 and sub-s. (1) is the same as cl. (ii), and sub-s. 2 is the same as cl. (iii) of the original s. 207 of the Indian Act of 1913.

How liquidator is to be appointed.

Sub-s. (1). The liquidator may be appointed by an ordinary resolution, but he must not be appointed until there is an effective resolution to wind up the company[1]. If the liquidator is to be appointed by an ordinary resolution, notice of the intention to appoint him need not be given[2]. If the resolution to wind up was special, the appointment of the liquidator could not be made until after the confirmation; but it might be made by a resolution passed before and confirmed after the confirmation of the winding up resolution[1]. As the appointment of a liquidator was not required to be made by a special resolution, if any liquidator was proposed in the special resolution, it might be changed at the confirmatory meeting[1]. But a confirmatory meeting is no longer required ; see the new sub-s. (2) of s. 81.

A liquidator might be appointed at the general meeting at which a special resolution was confirmed or an extraordinary resolution wss passed, without any special notice being given that a resolution to appoint a liquidator would be proposed[2]. If notice is given that a certain person will be proposed at the meeting for the office of the liquidator, and the motion for that purpose fails, the meeting may appoint another person[3].

Effect of appointment of liquidator. The appointment of a liquidator, whether in a voluntary or a compulsory winding up, determines the authority of agents appointed by the directors from the time when notice of the winding up or the appointment of a provisional liquidator reaches them[4].

Imperfect appointment. Where a person is appointed liquidator, however imperfect he may consider his appointment to be, if he is nominally a liquidator and acts as such, he must carry out the duties as well as exercise the rights of a liquidator[5].

Remuneration of liquidator. Where the Court fixes the remuneration of a liquidator, it is generally on a percentage basis[6]. When a supposed voluntary liquidation proves to have been irregularly commenced, the liquidator has no claim for his services ; but so far as they have been adopted by the compulsory liquidator, the former may be paid upon a quantum meruit[7].

Where a members' voluntary winding up is superseded by compulsory liquidation, the Court is empowered by rule 192, sub-rule 1 of the English Companies (Winding up) Rules, 1929 to review the amount of remuneration fixed by the members of the company during the voluntary liquidation, as payable to the voluntary liquidator[8]. See rule 121 of the fresh Rules made by the Calcutta High Court (printed in the Appendix) which is not specific on the point.

Omission. If the Company in passing a resolution for voluntary winding up has omitted to appoint any liquidator, the Court may appoint one by the supervision order[9].

Joint liquidators. Where two persons are appointed liquidators jointly, the refusal of one of them to act renders abortive the resolution appointing them. One of them cannot take up the work alone, it clearly being the intention of the shareholders that they should act jointly and not separately[10]. So also where there are two liquidators and one of them dies, the survivor cannot act until a new liquidator is appointed[11].

Liquidator not trustee. A voluntary liquidator has been held in England to be not a trustee within the meaning of the English Trustees Act, 1925[12].

Sanction for continuance of directors' powers.

Sub-s. (2). The liquidator has power to sanction the continuance of the powers of the directors which cease on his appointment. Before his appointment such sanction may be given by a general meeting of the company 1. Inspite of this section the directors, it seems, do not cease to be officers to the company 2.

Power to fill vacancy in office of liquidator.

208B. (1) If a vacancy occurs by death, resignation or otherwise in the office of liquidator appointed by the company, the company in general meeting may, subject to any arrangement with its creditors, fill the vacancy.

(2) For that purpose a general meeting may be convened by any contributory or, if there were more liquidators than one, by the continuing liquidators.

(3) The meeting shall be held in manner provided by this Act or by the articles, or in such manner as may, on application by any contributory or by the continuing liquidators, be determined by the Court.

Power of liquidator to accept shares, etc., as consideration for sale of property of company.

208C. (1) Where a company is proposed to be, or is in course of being, wound up altogether voluntarily, and the whole or part of its business or property is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company, whether a company within the meaning of this Act or not (in this section called "the transferee company"), the liquidator of the first-mentioned company (in this section called "the transferor company") may, with the sanction of a special resolution of that company conferring either a general authority on the liquidator or an authority in respect of any particular arrangement, receive, in compensation or part compensation for the transfer or sale, shares, policies, or other like interests in the transferee company, for distribution among the members of the transferor company, or may enter into any other arrangement whereby the members of the transferor company may, in lieu of receiving cash, shares, policies, or other like interests or in addition thereto, participate in the profits of or receive any other benefit from the transferee company.

the company within seven days after the passing of the special resolution, he may require the liquidator either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase his interest at a price to be determined by agreement or by arbitration in manner hereafter provided.

(4) If the liquidator elects to purchase the member's interest, the purchase money must be paid before the company is dissolved, and be raised by the liquidator in such manner as may be determined by special resolution.

(5) A special resolution shall not be invalid for the purposes of this section by reason that it is passed before or concurrently with a resolution for voluntary winding up or for appointing liquidators, but if an order is made within a year for winding up the company by or subject to the supervision of the Court, the special resolution shall not be valid unless sanctioned by the Court.

(6) The provisions of the···"Arbitration Act, 1940" other than those restricting the application of the Act in respect of the subject-matter of the arbitration, shall apply to all arbitraiions in pursuance of this section.

Amendment.

In sub-s. (6) for the words and figures "Indian Arbitration Act, 1899" the words and figures "Arbitration Act, 1940" have been substituted by the Repealing and Amending Act, XXXII of 1940.

This section reproduces s. 234 of the English Act of 1929, and it is the same as the original s. 213 of the Indian Act of 1913 save only this that sub-s. (6) is new.

Memorandum and articles cannot take the place of this section.

Formerly it was considered that if the memorandum of association contained powers for the company to sell its business to another company in cosideration of shares and to distribute the shares in specie 1, this would enable the company to avoid compliance with this section 2. But in 1908 the Court of Appeal in England held that the proper function of the memorandum was to deal with the objects of the company during its corporate life, and not after the life had come to an end 3, and that any clause which could be used to maintain a scheme which imposed upon the members the alternative of accepting liability for a larger sum or being dispossessed of his status as a shareholder upon terms which he was not bound to accept was ultra vires 3. A company limited by shares cannot by its memorandum and articles of association provide as part of its constitution that in an event the corporator shall either submit to a liability on his shares or shall be dispossessed of his status as a corporator 4.

Every limited company has under this section a statutory right of effecting an arrangement whereby it is amalgamated with another company. No express power need be contained in the memorandum of association[1]; for the scheme of amalgamation does not depend for its validity upon the constitution of the company as contained in the memorandum and articles[1]. But the issue whether the amalgamation is binding upon the transferee company depends not upon the section, but upon the question whether that company is by its constitution empowered to effect such an acquisition[1].

Where the section is not called into operation.

In case where this section is not called into operation the right of every member is to have the assets, including the shares in the purchasing company, realized and applied first in payment of the debts and then to have his proportionate share of the balance[2]. So although a company can sell its undertaking under powers in the memorandum when it is intended to retain the proceeds of the sale in the business of the company, yet if the company is proposed to be wound up and the transaction is a sale and distribution, then the sale by conversion into money may be replaced by exchange for shares upon the terms, but only upon the terms of complying with the provisions of this section[3] in which case the right of a member to dissent cannot be excluded[3].

As to the rights of the shareholders to set aside the transaction after it has been completed, see Clinch v. Financial Corpn.[4].

Sub-s. (1). To comply with sub-s. (1) there must at least be a special resolution authorizing the liquidator to accept shares as consideration for the sale. In the absence of such a special resolution there would be no special resolution to which the provisions relating to dissentients in sub-s. (3) could apply[5].

Purchasing company must be in existence.

A sale under this section can be made only to a company already in existence[6] and not to a person about to form a company, or to a trustee for an intended company. But the purchasing company need not be one incorporated under this Act[7]. The new company however must have power under its memorandum to accept the transfer[8]. Reconstruction of an existing company by winding up and sale of its entire undertaking and assets for shares in a new foreign company is however outside the scope of reconstruction under this section[9]. But it may be effected as an arrangement under s. 153[10]. Under this section a company cannot sell or transfer its business or property in a foreign company[11].

Shareholders & creditors are bound by the sale.

The sale binds both the shareholders and the creditors of the transferor company[12] though the mortgagees may be entitled under the terms of their mortgage to prevent a sale of its assets[13]. The remedy of a creditor who cannot get payment of his debt is to obtain a winding up order before the expiration of a year[11].

What provisions of the agreement are valid.

The agreement for sale may validly provide that the transferor company shall call up its unpaid capital and transfer the amount so realized to the transferee company 1 ; but the agreement cannot validly provide for a call to be made on the shares of the transferor company in case its assets do not realize a specified amount 2. It may provide that shares in the transferee company shall be allotted either to the liquidator or directly to the members of the transferor company, and so either partly or fully paid up. The liability to pay cash however cannot be imposed on the members of the transferor company by allotting them shares credited as partly paid up, except with their consent 3. If there are preference shares with no preference as to capital in the transferee company, the preference shareholders are not entitled to preference shares in the transferor company 4. It is not allowable, upon a sale under this section, to distribute the assets otherwise than in accordance with the legal rights of the parties 5.

The agreement for sale is not invalid because it provides that part of the purchase money shall be paid to the directors and secretary of the transferor company as compensation for loss of office 6. The proposed payment however should be fully disclosed to the shareholders 7. Upon reconstruction it is desirable that effective assignment of the old company's property should be taken 8.

Court's power.

The Court has no power to authorize a sale to a transferee company in consideration of its agreeing to pay the creditors of the transferor company by instalments 9, nor even to authorize an agreement or resolution compelling the members of the transferor company to pay a premium upon the shares of the transferee company 10.

Distribution of consideration.

The consideration for the sale must be distributed among the members of the selling company in proportion to their rights and interests 11 under its regulations in the assets of the company remaining after payment of its liabilities. The persons prejudicially affected by any other mode of distribution can only be bound by their individual consent 12.

Court's jurisdiction.

An application was made for sanction of a scheme under which the liabilities of a company were to be paid up in full by a new company which was to take over the assets and liabilities of the old company, and the shareholders in the existing company were to receive shares of the new company as provided by the scheme. Meetings were held and the requisite resolutions of the different classes of shareholders and debenture-holders passed in favour of the scheme. On Nevile, J. sanctioning the scheme, certain shareholders appealed, and it was held that there was no jurisdiction (under s. 153) to compel the ordinary shareholders to take shares in the new company 13. But in a later case Astbury J. held that the last cited case must have depended on the special circumstances and he sanctioned a scheme which allowed dissent by dissatisfied members 1. The whole subject was exhaustively discussed by the same Judge in the under-noted case 2 and the following propositions were laid down : (1) When a scheme is really and truly a sale (under s. 213 replaced by the present section) simpliciter that section must be complied with and cannot be evaded by calling it a scheme of arrangement (under s. 153) ; (2) where a scheme cannot be carried through under s. 213 though it involves inter alia a sale to a company within that section for shares, policies and other interests and for liquidation and distribution of the proceeds, the Court can sanction it (under s. 153), if it is fair and reasonable in accordance with the principles upon which the Court acts in these cases, and it may, but only if it thinks fit, insist as a term of its sanction on the dissentient shareholders being protected in manner similar to that provided for in s. 213 ; (3) where a scheme of arrangement is one outside s. 213 entirely, the Court can also act as in proposition (2).

Sub-s. (3). A member who dissents from the sale is entitled, if he gives the requisite notice, to have his interest purchased by the liquidator, and this is a right which the articles cannot deprive him of 3. Provisions in the articles as to the price at which the interest of a dissentient member is to be purchased do not constitute an agreement within the meaning of sub-s. (3) so as to deprive him of his right to have his interest determined by arbitration 4. If a dissentient member fails to give the necessary notice, he will not be entitled to have his interest purchased, but he will not be bound to take shares in the purchasing company 5. An agreement by which time is fixed within which shareholders must elect whether they will take the shares or not is valid 6.

A member of the transferor company, even if he has not served notice of dissent, cannot be compelled to accept shares in the transferee company, but if he has served no such notice, he is not entitled to receive compensation for his interest in the transferor company 7.

Unless provision is made to satisfy money payable to a dissentient member, an injunction will be granted to restrain the liquidator from parting with the assets without providing for his claim 6. The new company is in no sense the servant or agent of the transferor company, and is not bound by injunctions granted against it 8.

The requisition under sub-s. (3) must be contained in the notice of dissent 9. Where the registered office is abroad, the notice given to the liquidator in England has been held to be sufficient, and that the liquidator can waive service at the office 10. An article which purports to authorize what may be done under the Act, but omits the proviso in favour of dissentient shareholders, is invalid 11. A company by its articles cannot deprive members of the protection afforded to them by this section 11. Nor can this result be produced by the exercise of powers taken in the memorandum of association ; for, the provisions of this section define rights in the members which cannot by any clause in the memorandum and articles be excluded 1.

Unless a contrary intention appears, a power to sell for shares is not confined to a sale for fully paid up shares 2.

A notice under sub-s. (3) dissenting from a resolution for reconstruction must not only contain a declaration of dissent, but must also expressly give the liquidator the option either to abstain from carrying the resolution into effect or to purchase the dissentient member's interest 3. As to the sufficiency of the notice and the liquidator's power to waive any informality, see the cases noted below 4. The circular convening the meeting must expressly state that the sale is to be carried out under this section 5.

Case of secret agreement.

In the case of a proposed amalgamation where there is any secret agreement or any interest of the directors in the agreement not disclosed in the circular or in the notice of the meeting, the Court will view with strictness any omission to refer to it in the notice or circular accompanying the notice ; and the omission to mention any secret arrangement would constitute a serious defect in the notice. But where no secret agreement is proved or suggested and where there is no indication that there was anything to conceal, that Court will, as far as possible, take a liberal view of the terms of the notice and will not upset the proceedings 6. The notice calling the extraordinary general meeting is not defective, if it failed to disclose difference of opinion among the directors on the question mentioned in the notice, nor if the copy of the agreement of the proposed amalgamation is not sent to the shareholders along with the notice 7.

Amalgamation.

If the word "amalgamation" is used in the proposed extraordinary resolution, in such a case it is not inaccurate, for an amalgamation may take place either by the transfer of the undertaking to a new corporation or by continuance of the old company by the new company upon terms that the shareholders of the former shall become shareholders of the latter, It is not necessary that an altogether new company should be formed 8.

A resolution in which the voluntary winding up of the company is mixed up with other matters relating to the agreement of amalgamation with another company is not illegal 8. The mere fact that in terms there are no words authorizing the liquidators to receive compensation and distribute it among the shareholders does not also make the resolution illegal 8.

Unfair scheme.

Where a scheme is eminently unfair, a dissentient minority may stop it by obtaining a compulsory winding up order 7.

Right of transferee of shares.

When under a contract made prior to the sanction of the reconstruction scheme the purchaser is entitled to be registered as transferee of shares in the old company, and the vendor obtains the allotment of shares in the new company, the allottee is a trustee of them for the purchaser, although he has delayed registration of the transfer 9.

Different classes of holders of shares.

Holders of shares partly paid up with uncalled balance paid in advance of calls and carrying interest are a different class to holders of fully paid shares and to other holders of partly paid shares, even if all the shares are ordinary shares 1. Should a class of shareholders disapprove the arrangement, the Court will, if satisfied that having regard to the value of the company's assets that class has no interest in them, disregard their disapproval 2.

Arrangement under s. 153.

A reconstruction of an existing company by winding up and sale of the entire assets for shares in a new company may be effected under s. 153 provided that proper provision is made for dissentient members 3. Any provision in the articles depriving members of their rights under this section is void 4. If the proposed reconstruction is carried out as a scheme of arrangement under s. 153, the rights of dissentient shareholders must be properly protected under this section ; otherwise the scheme will not be sanctioned 5.

Terms of the contract for sale.

A contract for sale usually provides that the purchasing company shall take over all the assets and pay all the liabilities of the old company, so that the business of the old company can be wound up at once ; but such an arrangement does not relieve the liquidator of the old company from the obligation of seeing that the debts are duly paid before the old company is dissolved. To leave everything to the new company is "a gross dereliction of duty by the liquidator" 6.

How to make the arrangement certain.

The parties to an arrangement under this section cannot be sure that it will be ultimately valid and binding. The only way to make the arrangement certain is to apply to the Court for a supervision order and, when the order is made, to apply that the arrangement may be sanctioned 7.

A company cannot sell its assets under this section to a foreign company 8.

Liquidator must not have restricted power.

The form of appointment embodied in a resolution under which in terms the liquidators become merely ministerial officers required to have regard to the supervision of the directors of the two companies proposed to be amalgamated in discharging their duties, was deprecated by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the under-mentioned case 9. It was observed that the Court, when it had an opportunity of doing so, would always cause it to be clearly understood that a liquidator in a voluntary liquidation, which was an essential condition of such an amalgamation, must not by the resolution appointing him be restricted in the exercise of his statutory duties 9.

Executors of deceased members.

Executors as representing the estate of a deceased member are members for the purposes of this section and as such are entitled to exercise the right of dissent. The right is not affected by an article prohibiting executors from "exercising any of the rights and privileges of a member, unless and until they shall have been registered" as shareholders, because such an article refers to an exercise of rights on their behalf and not on behalf of the testator's estate 10.

Where executors or trustees have no power to invest in the shares of a new company, the Court may, upon application by the trustees, sanction their taking fully paid new shares, if it can be shown that the case is one of emergency not contemplated by the settlor, and a large loss is likely to result 1.

Where a will contains a specific bequest of shares, and between the date of the will and the death of the testator the company is reconstructed without substantial alteration in its constitution, the shares in the new company will pass under the bequest 2.

Stamp duty.

Although it is necessary to look at the surrounding circumstances in order to see whether there is an amalgamation or a reconstruction, yet in considering whether a particular instrument executed in purported performance of such amalgamation or reconstruction is subject to stamp duty or exempt from such duty regard must be had to the terms of that instrument 3.

Appeal.

If a liquidator in a voluntary winding up desires to appeal from the decision of a Judge, he ought first to obtain leave from the Judge ; otherwise, if his appeal fails, his costs may be refused out of the estate 4.

Sub-s. (6) reproduces sub-s. (6) of s. 234 of the English Act of 1929.

Duty of liquidator to call general meeting at end of each year.

208D. (1) In the event of the winding up continuing for more than one year, the liquidator shall summon a general meeting of the company at the end of the first year from the commencement of the winding up and of each succeeding year, or as soon thereafter as may be convenient within ninety days of the close of the year, and shall lay before the meeting an account of his acts and dealings and of the conduct of the winding up during the preceding year and a statement in the prescribed form containing the prescribed particulars with respect to the position of the liquidation.

(2) If the liquidator fails to comply with this section, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

(2) The meeting shall be called by advertisement specifying the time, place and object thereof, and published one month at least before the meeting in the manner specified in sub-section (1) of section 206 for publication of a notice under that sub-section.

(3) Within one week after the meeting, the liquidator shall send to the registrar a copy of the account, and shall make a return to him of the holding of the meeting and of its date, and if the copy is not sent or the return is not made in accordance with this sub-section the liquidator shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues :

Provided that, if a quorum is not present at the meeting, the liquidator shall, in lieu of the said return, make a return that the meeting was duly summoned and that no quorum was present thereat, and upon such a return being made the provisions of this sub-section as to the making of the return shall be deemed to have been complied with.

(4) The registrar on receiving the account and either of the returns mentioned in sub-section (3) shall forthwith register them and on the expiration of three months from the registration of the return the company shall be deemed to be dissolved :

Provided that the Court may, on the application of the liquidator or of any other person who appears to the Court to be interested, make an order deferring the date at which the dissolution of the company is to take effect for such time as the Court thinks fit.

(5) It shall be the duty of the person on whose application an order of the Court under this section is made, within twenty-one days after the making of the order, to deliver to the registrar a certified copy of the order for registration, and if that person fails so to do he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

This section reproduces s. 236 of the English Act of 1929. It is almost the same as the original s. 217 with the exception of the proviso to sub-s. (3) which is new.

Sub-s. (4).

After the company has been dissolved the Court may, at any time within two years after the date of dissolution, on the application of the liquidator or of any person who appears to be interested, make an order declaring the dissolution to be void 1. This power will be exercised where upon a reconstruction the new company after agreeing to satisfy the liabilities of the old company has failed to perform its obligation 2.

Liability of liquidator continues.

Even after dissolution the liquidator remains liable in damages for breach of statutory duty to a creditor or contributory by distributing the assets without providing for his debt or claim after taking proper steps to ascertain it 3. If the dissolution is not set aside within two years, claims by the company against other persons vest in the Crown 4.

Petition for compulsory winding up after dissolution.

When a company has been dissolved under this section, no petition for its compulsory liquidation will be effective 1, unless the petition is ready for hearing before the lapse of three months mentioned in sub-s. (4) of this section 2. After dissolution no proceeding can be taken under section 235 for misfeasance 3, and winding up proceedings will not be re-opened unless fraud is proved 3.

Proviso to sub-s. (4).

Under the proviso to sub-sec. (4) the Court has jurisdiction to pass the order notwithstanding that the three months elapse before the order is made 4. It should be noted that the company will be deemed to be dissolved on the expiration of three months from the registration of the return and not from the filing of the return 5. If the registrar does not do his duty, or the necessary preliminaries which would justify registration have not been observed and the registrar insists on something more being done before he can take action, time does not begin to run until he takes action 5. If the liquidator is not satisfied with the decision of the registrar or if any contributory or creditor is dissatisfied with the conduct of the liquidator, either can go to the Court under s. 216 and claim that in the exercise of the powers conferred by that section the Court may take necessary action 5. The words "are fully wound up" must not be construed so narrowly and so strictly as to bring about a deadlock in the proceedings 6.

Special order of Court.

To relieve the directors and others from personal liability incurred by carrying on business after dissolution, the Court may make a special order; but this order will not be made in a flagrant case 7.

It is desirable that upon a reconstruction effective assignment of the old company's property should be taken 8.

A guarantee of interest on a company's debenture may continue after the company is dissolved 9.

Provided that in the case of different persons being nominated, any director, member or creditor of the company may, within seven days after the date on which the nomination was made by the creditors, apply to the Court for an order either directing that the person nominated as liquidator by the company shall be liquidator instead of or jointly with the person nominated by the creditors, or appointing some other person to be liquidator instead of the person appointed by the creditors.

211. Subject to the provisions of this Act as to preferential payments, the property of a company shall, on its winding up, be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu and, subject to such application, shall, unless the articles otherwise provide, be distributed among the members according to their rights and interests in the company.

This section reproduces s. 247 of the English Act of 1929. The word "property" which occurs both in the English Act of 1908 and 1929 replaces the word "assets" of cl. (i) of the original section 207 which may be compared. But there is little difference between the two words.

Application of assets.

When in a voluntary liquidation the assets have been collected, they shall be applied, first in payment of the costs, charges and expenses properly incurred in the winding up 1, secondly in payment of the debts entitled to preferential payment and thirdly in payment of the debts of the ordinary creditors. The surplus assets, which mean the fund remaining after payment of the debts and the cost of liquidation 2, must then be divided among the members in accordance with the rights conferred on them by the memorandum and the articles of association. In default of any such provision, and where some of the shares are fully paid and others are only partly paid, the liability of the partly paid shareholders must not be disregarded; and after all the capital has been returned, the balance should be divided among the shareholders in proportion to the number of shares held by them respectively 3. If however the assets are not sufficient to repay the capital in full, those members who have paid more on the shares than others must first be repaid the excess 4, and if necessary, the liquidator may make calls on the partly paid shareholders for the purpose of equalizing the amounts paid up 5.

Where a resolution gave to the holders of certain preference shares "a preferential rights as regards repayment of capital and otherwise as hereinafter mentioned" and so that they should accordingly "be entitled to have the surplus assets applied, first in paying off the capital paid up on the preference shares held by them respectively and, secondly in paying off the arrears, if any, of the preferential dividend......to the commencement of the winding up before any return or payment of capital is made to the holders of other shares", it was held that as the resolution did not deal with the whole of the assets, except in the case of a deficiency, it did not deprive the preference shareholders of a right to share in an ultimate surplus, and in the winding up the surplus assets must be rateably distributed between the ordinary and the preference shareholders 6.

In the case of a voluntary winding up of a company occupying certain premises as lessees, there is a well defined distinction between amounts due for rent before the date of the winding up order or a resolution for voluntary winding up and the amounts that become due after that date. In respect of the former amounts the lessor is entitled only to rateable distribution ; but as regards the latter amounts the owner of the premises occupied by the company and continued to be occupied for the purposes of the liquidation proceedings by the liquidator is entitled to recover those amounts in full [1].

Where a bank received cheques as agent for collection, there is no relation of debtor and creditor between the bank and its customers ; so the liquidator of the bank must pay out of the assets in his hands the full amount of a cheque which passed from the bank to another bank and found by the latter not in order [2].

Interest on debts.

So long as a company is in voluntary liquidation, interest continues to accrue on debts carrying interest [3]. But in the case of an ordinary insolvent company the bankruptcy rules apply [4], and no claim can be sustained for interest subsequent to a judgment [5].

Consequences of irregular distribution.

If a voluntary liquidator distributes the assets without taking proper steps to ascertain the creditors and carries through the liquidation down to dissolution, he is liable in damages to unpaid creditors of whose claims be was aware and who had no notice of the liquidation until after dissolution [6]. So if the liquidator distributes the assets without making provision for future rent of leasehold properties under the terms of the lease, he commits a breach of his statutory duty under this clause and will consequently be liable in damages, for this is a liability which ought to have been admitted to proof by the liquidator under s. 228 [7]. So also he will be personally liable for costs given against the company in litigation instituted by him, if he applies the available assets in paying his own solicitor's costs [8].

No statutory bar to execution.

This section is not itself a statutory bar to the progress of an execution proceeding against a company gone into voluntary liquidation, unless and until an order has been obtained from a Court having jurisdiction under this Act either for the winding up or for stay of proceedings, and the liquidator or any other creditor dissatisfied with the action taken by a decree-holder is entitled to move the Court having jurisdiction under this Act [9]. But where judgment has been recovered against a company which is in voluntary liquidation, the invariable practice of the Court is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise [10]. For other cases see notes to s. 216.

Right of preference shareholders.

As long as a company is a going concern, the preference shareholders are entitled only to the preferential dividend. But on the voluntary winding up this preference is determined and thenceforward the preference shares retain no preference or priority over ordinary shares [11]. In the last noted case it was held that according to the constitution of the company the prima facie presumption in favour of equality of distribution amongst all the shareholders ought to prevail.

Remedy of creditors.

The effect of the section is that even in voluntary liquidation the remedy of the creditors is to take only what he can take under the scheme of the liquidation and no more ; and a creditor who obtains a decree against the company cannot recover the whole amount due under the decree, but only a share in terms of the scheme of liquidation [1]. But the Calcutta High Court has taken the view that the provision of the section, that the assets of the company shall be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu, is intended for guidance of the voluntary liquidator and does not control the Court's power to entertain applications for execution against the assets of the company and realize the full amount to the detriment of the other creditors [2]. This section is no bar by itself to the progress of execution unless and until an order has been obtained from the Court under s. 215 (now s. 216) for stay [3]. The executing Court has no concurrent jurisdiction with the Court under the Companies Act [3]. Attachment creates no charge or lien upon the attached properties in favour of the attaching creditor. It does not make him a secured creditor, nor does it confer any title on him. Until the property is actually sold, the position of the attaching creditor is not higher than that of one who has a mere money claim against the judgment debtor, and it would be going against the statutory provisions of this section to allow the execution to proceed [4].

The word "property" includes unpaid capital recoverable from the contributories [5].

Distribution of assets.

This section must be read subject to s. 230 as to preferential payments [6]. Subject to this the assets must be applied pari passu in satisfaction of the liabilities of the company [7]. As to the distribution of assets, where the articles provide that if the company should be wound up, the assets should be so distributed that the losses would be borne by the members in proportion to the capital paid or which ought to have been paid up ; see the case noted below [8].

Sub-s. (1). As to the powers of the Court of settling the list of contributories and of making calls, see ss. 184 and 187.

In a voluntary winding up, as distinct from a compulsory winding up, it is the liquidator who without any order from the Court may make a call upon his own responsibility and he would be quite in order in such a case to make a call and receive payment 1.

Rules relating to list of contributories.

A voluntary liquidator has power to settle the list of contributories 2, and to rectify the register of members 2. The rules relating to the list of contributories do not apply to a voluntary winding up; but the practice in a winding up by the Court should be followed as closely as possible.

A person whose name is settled on the list of contributories is liable for any calls made by the liquidator, even though the contributory has received no notice thereof. The liquidator may also obtain an order to enforce any calls made by the directors before the winding up commenced 3. Notice of settlement of the list of contributories is usual, but not necessary, and absence of notice is no defence to an action for Fully paid shareholders. Fully paid shareholders are contributories in a voluntary winding up, and a call made to adjust the rights of contributories inter se after all debts and costs provided for is valid 3.

Right of set off. A shareholder in a voluntary as well as in a compulsory winding up cannot set off a debt owing to him by the company against a call 4. A valid forfeiture of shares before the commencement of the winding up cannot be cancelled by the liquidator 5.

Delegation of powers. The liquidators cannot delegate their powers generally to one of their number unless the power to do so is given to them at the time of their appointment 6. In case of death of one liquidator the survivor cannot act 7.

Joint liquidators. Sub-s. (3). Where one of several liquidators accepted a bill of exchange without authority of others, it was held that the company was not liable for it 8.

Appointment & removal of liquidator. If no liquidator is appointed the Court may appoint a liquidator, or where the validity of his appointment is questioned the Court may confirm the appointment 9. It may also on cause shown remove a liquidator and appoint another liquidator. The application to remove a liquidator must be made by a liquidator or creditor or contributory of the company 10, but not a company which has purchased the assets 10. As to what is due cause for removing a liquidator see notes to s. 176. The Court may also appoint an additional liquidator 11, or a liquidator in place of one retiring 12. An application for removal may be made by a creditor, contributory or a co-liquidator but no one else 13.

The distribution of circulars seeking support to an application for removal of a liquidator will not be restrained by the Court 14. A voluntary liquidator may be removed on the ground that he is not in a sufficiently independent position 1. A liquidator may appeal from an order removing him 2.

Jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of the Court to remove a liquidator is not confined to cases where there is personal unfitness. The cause shown is to be measured by reference to the real, substantial and honest interest of the liquidation and to the purpose for which liquidators are appointed. Fair play to the liquidators is not to be left out of sight; but the real interest of the liquidation is the principal thing for consideration 3.

Power to remove is discretionary.

The removal of a liquidator is a matter of judicial discretion and the Court of Appeal will not interfere if satisfied upon evidence that there was a cause shown 4. The Court will appoint a new liquidator if satisfied that it would be in the best interest of all concerned 5.

Notice by liquidator of his appointment.

214. (1) The liquidator shall, within twenty-one days after his appointment, deliver to the registrar for registration a notice of his appointment in the form prescribed.

(2) If the liquidator fails to comply with the requirements of this section, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

This section reproduces s. 250 of the English Act of 1929 and is almost identical in terms with the original s. 208.

Arrangement when binding on creditors.

215. (1) Any arrangement entered into between a company about to be, or in the course of being, wound up and its creditors shall, subject to the right of appeal under this section, be binding on the company if sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution, and on the creditors if acceded to by three-fourths in number and value of the creditors.

(2) Any creditor or contributory may, within three weeks from the completion of the arrangement, appeal to the Court against it, and the Court may thereupon, as it thinks just, amend, vary or confirm the arrangement.

This section reproduces s. 251 of the English Act of 1929, and is almost identical in terms with the original s. 212.

Scheme of reconstruction.

Where there was no mala fide or fraud in a proposed scheme of reconstruction, nor was it a sham or device, although the result would be that the majority of the shareholders would obtain control of the undertaking and compel the minority to accept a cash payment in lieu of shares in a new company to which that undertaking was to be sold, it was held that the scheme was one that ought not to be interfered with by the Court 6.

Sub-s. (1). Sub-s. (1) applies to an arrangement entered into during a voluntary winding up or shortly before the passing of a resolution for a voluntary winding up 1. A composition by a company with its creditors intended to make the company solvent and therefore to prevent a voluntary winding up is not an "arrangement" within the meaning of this section 1.

The last cited case illustrates the danger of taking a section from the English Act and inserting it bodily in the Indian Act without considering the effect of the language used; for Maugham J. observes: "I may add that the section (s. 251 of the English Act corresponding to the above s. 215) presents a certain number of practical difficulties. It says nothing about, and makes no provision for, a meeting of creditors, and 'creditors' must be taken to include secured as well as preferential creditors, though there is no provision for a valuation of securities. The Legislature seems to have thought that three-fourths in number and value of the creditors secured and unsecured ought to be able to bind a minority of them who may never even have heard of the proposed arrangement. The Court, if applied to within three weeks according to sub-section (2) of the section, has power only to 'amend, vary or confirm the arrangement'; the draftsman seems to have left out any words showing that the Court may set it aside, though by sub-section (1) the arrangement is '......subject to any right of appeal under this section ......' Nor is it easy to construe the words 'the completion of the arrangement.'" Inspite of the difficulties pointed by Maugham J. in 1931, the authorities responsible for the amending Act of 1936 inserted s. 251 of the English Act bodily into the Indian Act.

Power to apply to Court to have questions determined of powers exercised.

216. (1) The liquidator or any contributory or creditor may apply to the Court to determine any question arising in the winding up of a company, or to exercise, as respects the enforcing of calls, staying of proceedings or any other matter, all or any of the powers which the Court might exercise if the company were being wound up by the Court.

(2) The liquidator or any creditor or contributory may apply for an order setting aside any attachment, distress or execution put into force against the estate or effects of the company after the commencement of the winding up.

Such application shall be made—

- (a) if the attachment, distress or execution is levied or put into force by a High Court, to such High Court, and
- (b) if the attachment, distress or execution is levied or put into force in any other Court, to the Court having jurisdiction to wind up the company.

(3) The Court, if satisfied that the determination of the question or the required exercise of power or the order applied for will be just and beneficial, may accede wholly or partially to the application on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit, or may make such other order on the application as it thinks just.

1. Contal Radio Ltd. [1932] 2 Ch. 66.

This section is a reproduction of s. 252 of the English Act of 1929 and substantially reproduces the original s. 215. Sub-s. (2) is entirely new. It makes express provision for setting aside attachment &c. put in force against the company in a voluntary winding up and states to which Court an application for the purpose is to be made. For fuller discussion see Introduction.

Object.

"The object of the Act was", observed Sir W. James, L. J., "that a company and its directors should be left, if possible, to settle their affairs without coming to the Court at all, either for a compulsory winding up or for a winding up under supervision, but to provide them under the 138th section of the English Act of 1862 (corresponding to the present section) with the means of access to this Court whenever any question arose, in the course of a voluntary winding up, just in the same way as when any question arose, in the case of a compulsory winding up or winding up under supervision...No doubt if a liquidator did not do his duty, if he did not take the opinion of the Court in such a case as this, for example, it would be in the power of a creditor to apply to this Court for a proper order which would give him some opportunity of obtaining the decision of the Court; but if a liquidator is minded to bring a matter before the Court under section 138 I do not myself see the reason why the question should not be determined without obliging the contributories to present a petition for a compulsory winding up or a supervision order, which would only lead to increased expense" 1.

"It is the policy of the Act", observed their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, "that all claims competent to the company should be brought within the scope and control of the winding up and that not only in a compulsory winding up." Therefore the procedure of obtaining order of the Court under this section is not to be discouraged 2.

Scope.

Exercise of powers under this section must be in cases where it is just and beneficial, not only to the petitioner, but to all parties. The Court is empowered under this section on the petition of persons, named in the first sub-section, to exercise certain powers for the assistance of the winding up. Sub-s. (1) is very limited: It speaks of determining any question arising in the winding up. Under sub-s. (2) [now sub-s. (3)] the Court has to be satisfied that the determination of the question or the required exercise of power will be just and beneficial. Thus a person has no right to come and say that there is no such thing as winding up in a particular case, that is to say, the winding up is irregular and void for another reason 3.

Who can apply.

An application under this section cannot be made by a person who is not the liquidator or a creditor or a contributory 4. Where the registrar does not register the return under s. 217 (4) [now cl. (4) of ss. 208E & 209H] the liquidator, a contributory or creditor can apply under this section to the Court for taking proper action 5.

The liquidator can apply for determination of any question fairly arising in the liquidation 6, but the practice now is only to answer specific questions. Claims for damages will not be decided on such application 7.

This section (formerly s. 215) is exhaustive of the persons who are entitled to make the applications, and the Registrar of Companies not being one of them has no locus standie to make an application to remove a liquidator 1.

Court's power.

The Court will not act under this section, if it is not satisfied that exercise of the power will be "just and beneficial" 2. But the Court will not readily cut down its powers under this section 3. Under this section the Court can appoint a liquidator in a voluntary winding up not only where there is no liquidator acting or in the place of a liquidator who is by the Court removed from his office, but also in any other case where due cause is shown for appointing a liquidator, e. g., when an additional liquidator is required, and the appointment may be made on the application of the existing liquidator 4. But where the application asks for the appointment of official liquidator to a company in voluntary liquidation, the Court cannot treat the application as an application for compulsory winding up of the company. If it is treated as a petition for supervision or some such order as the Court might be empowered to make in the case of a compulsory winding up, it is obvious that in order to make such an order the Court would have to be satisfied that the winding up had taken place. A supervision order can be made only where there is a valid voluntary winding up. But where the whole case of the petitioner is that the winding up is ultra vires and void, the petition cannot be treated as one for supervision 5. The assistance of the Court is not the only method open to a voluntary liquidator. He has power to enforce calls by suit 6.

Court's duty.

"A Judge in winding up," say the Judicial Committee, "is the custodian of the interests of every class affected by the liquidation. It is his duty, even if it be in a voluntary liquidation that opportunity occurs, to see to it that all assets of the company are brought into the winding up. In authorising proceedings, especially if they may or will involve some drain upon the assets, he must satisfy himself as to their probable success : where they involve no possible charge on assets, he will nevertheless be careful to see that any action taken in the company's name under his authority is not vexatious or merely oppressive" 7.

Court may order stay of proceedings.

Voluntary liquidation does not by itself suspend the right to commence or continue legal proceedings against the company, and if the liquidator is confronted with a decree which has to be satisfied out of the assets of the company before distribution of the assets among the creditors, his proper remedy is to approach the Court, meaning the Court within the meaning of s. 2 (3), under this section 8. When proper cause is shown, the Court having jurisdiction to wind up the company has power under this section read with s. 169 to make an order staying all proceedings against the company 9. The Court may restrain actions 10, executions 11 and distress 12. Where an order is made staying action against a company which is being voluntarily wound up, the Court has power, in a proper case, to order the plaintiff to pay the cost of the application 1. The Court can exercise all the powers exercisable in a compulsory winding up 2. The Court will exercise the power where the exercise will be just and beneficial and it has a wide discretion in the matter 3. After having been unsuccessful in the executing Court the voluntary liquidator cannot approach the liquidating Court and ask for a declaration that the auction sale held by the executing Court is invalid 4.

Where in a suit instituted by a company long before it went into liquidation a decree for costs was made against the company after liquidation, the liability of the company under the decree should not ordinarily be treated in a different way from other liabilities and the decree-holder should not be allowed to execute the decree against the company. He must prove for his claim with the other creditors 5.

The power to make an order for the stay of proceedings under a voluntary winding up has been given to the Court by this section read with s. 173 6. In dealing with such an application the Court has to see whether a stay will be conducive or detrimental to commercial morality and to the interests of the public at large 7.

In the case of a voluntary liquidation the onus is on the liquidator to show that an order should be made staying an action, for prima facie the ordinary tribunal is the proper one to decide upon a claim against the company. The proceedings may be stayed when sufficient ground is shown to do so, e.g., when existence of the liability is substantially admitted and the dispute is only as to what is the exact amount due 8. If the claim is undisputed a stay will be granted as a matter of course ; but if the debt is disputed the Court may allow the action to proceed 9. Unless very exceptional circumstances exist, the Court in its discretion will always stay an execution against a company after it has gone into voluntary liquidation 10. The plaintiff in the action which is stayed is entitled to his costs 11.

Where the company is in a solvent condition and the resolution for voluntary winding up was passed with a view to the company being restarted after the claims of the creditors have been satisfied, proceedings should be stayed subject to the condition that all shareholders should be given the option of retiring from the company or continuing its members 12.

Examination of persons.

A voluntary liquidator is entitled to ask the Court for an order for examination of persons who were connected with the company with regard to its management or formation, and the Court has power to make such an order 13.

Delivery of books.

When the delivery of the books of the company is necessary for the purpose of liquidation, the liqudator in a voluntary winding up is entitled to an order for delivery of the books without prejudice to an alleged right of lien [1].

Cost of voluntary winding up.

217. All costs, charges and expenses properly incurred in the winding up, including the remuneration of the liquidator, shall, subject to the rights of secured creditors, if any, be payable out of the assets of the company in priority to all other claims.

This section reproduces s. 254 of the English Act of 1929 and is the same as the original s. 218.

Priority.

Liquidator's remuneration.

Compare s. 193. When the assets of a company in voluntary liquidation are insufficient to discharge its liabilities, the Court has power under this section read with s. 193 to make an order, in the exercise of its discretion, as to the payment thereout of the costs, charges and expenses (including the liquidator's remuneration) in such order of priority as it thinks just and prima facie all the expenses ought to be paid before the liquidator's remuneration [2]. In the last cited case the liquidator was authorized to retain the remuneration received by him before the date of the notice of the assessment of income tax.

Meaning of "all other claims."

Costs of litigation during the liquidation ordered to be paid, whether the order is only for payment or payment out of the assets, rank before the liquidator's own costs of the general costs of the winding up [3]. This section does not give the liquidator any priority over secured creditors, except in so far as he may be entitled in respect of matters of which the mortgagees had the benefit, e.g., expenses of collecting the estate for them [4].

Cost of litigation.

The costs of litigation ordered to be paid out of the assets are payable immediately and in full in priority to the general cost of the liquidation [5]. The rule that costs of unsuccessful litigation incurred by a liquidator, whether in a voluntary or compulsory winding up, are payable to the party entitled out of the assets of the company in priority to the costs of liquidation applies whether the order simply directs payment of costs, or directs that the costs be paid out of the assets of the company, or that the liquidator do pay the costs with liberty to recoup himself out of the assets [6]. The onus is on the liquidator to show that the condition of the assets is such that immediate payment cannot be made, and if he shows that other persons have a prior right to or are entitled pari passu with the successful litigant, no order for payment will be made without providing for the other claims. The date of the order gives no priority, but payment will not be indefinitely postpond until all claims have come in [7].

After costs &c., company's debts and liabilities.

After the costs, charges and expenses have been paid the assets are to be applied in payment of the company's debts and liabilities. When the creditors have been paid in full, any surplus is to be distributed amongst the contributories according to their rights inter se as adjusted by the Court 1. In this respect compare the provisions of s. 193.

Solicitor's claim.

In the absence of an express agreement the solicitor to a voluntary liquidator has no claim for the payment of his costs against the liquidator personally. His claim is against the assets of the company only 2 ; but his costs are payable in priority to the liquidator's remuneration 3. The liquidator is not personally liable to the solicitor, whether the winding up be compulsory 4, or voluntary 2. As to the solicitor's lien see the case noted below 5.

Liquidator's personal liability.

In proceedings in liquidation where the liquidator is the applicant he may, in case of failure, be ordered to pay the costs personally, when the order is usually without prejudice to his right to apply for liberty to retain them out of the assets 6.

Landlord's right.

When the liquidator in a voluntary winding up elects, for the benefit of the creditors, to occupy lease-hold premises that are part of the estate, the landlord is entitled to have the covenants of the lease carried out, and to be paid in full, out of the assets got in, all claims due and owing for repairs under the covenant 7.

Saving for rights of creditors and contributories.

218. The winding up of a company shall not bar the right of any creditor or contributory to have it wound up by the Court, but in the case of an application by a contributory, the Court must be satisfied that the rights of the contributories will be prejudiced by a voluntary winding up.

The section reproduces s. 255 of the English Act of 1929 and is almost identical with the original s. 219.

Creditor's right.

A creditor of a company in voluntary winding up, on proving his judgment debt and that his debt has not been paid, is entitled ex debito justitiæ to an order for compulsory winding up of the company 8. But he is not entitled, as of right, to ask the Court to convert a voluntary winding up into a compulsory one, and before he can obtain such an order, he must show that he, as a creditor, could obtain, had there been no voluntary winding up, an order for compulsory winding up 9.

Liquidator's right.

There is no section in the Act which enables the liquidator in a voluntary winding up to ask the Court to pass an order compulsorily winding up the company 9.

Voluntary winding up when bar to compulsory order.

An existing voluntary winding up is generally a bar to a contributory obtaining a compulsory order 1. But it is no bar, if the general body of creditors desire it although no individual creditor proves that his rights will be prejudiced by a voluntary winding up 2; for this section must be read with ss. 174 and 239. The Court may however in its discretion refuse the order if it will not benefit the creditors generally, but only the petitioning creditors 3.

Where the rights of the creditors or the contributories are not shown to be prejudiced by a voluntary winding up, the Court is not justified in ordering a compulsory winding up, though the application to that effect was filed before the company decided to go into voluntary liquidation 4. But where the scheme for reconstruction is eminently unfair to an independent minority of the shareholders, the Court will, on the petition of one of them, stop the scheme by making a compulsory order, if the contract with the new company has not been executed 5.

Cases where the order will be made.

A compulsory order may be made on the application of creditors, although the company is in voluntary liquidation, where the same person has been appointed receiver in the debenture-holder's action and as the liquidator, or where a prima facie case of fraud is established as to the formation of the company or the conduct of its business, or where there has been great delay in the voluntary liquidation, or where the conduct of the liquidation is unsatisfactory, or where the company's liabilities are very great, or where the foundation of the voluntary liquidation, as for instance, a reconstruction, is gone, or where the passing of the resolution is a breach of faith, or where the circumstances show that a public investigation is required 6.

The Court will order a company to be wound up compulsorily, if the resolution for voluntary winding up was procured by votes of persons whose conduct requires investigation 7, or if it was passed in furtherance of a reconstruction scheme which has fallen to the ground 8, or if the resolution for voluntary winding up is invalid 9. But no such order will be passed on the petition of a fully paid contributory, unless the Court is of opinion that some benefit will result to the shareholders from a winding up by the Court 10.

An unfair and improper sale to a new company sanctioned under s. 213 (now s. 208C) by a majority who have other interests to serve will be a ground for a compulsory order on the petition of the objecting minority 11.

If a prima facie case of malpractice is made out, a compulsory order will be made; but the malpractice does not include fraud upon the outside world in the course of its business 12.

Whether a company should be allowed to go into voluntary liquidation or a compulsory one depends upon the facts of each particular case [3]. Where it was stated that while the vast majority of the depositors of a bank were from places outside Karachi, but the vast majority of loans were made to persons in Karachi and the documents put in made it clear that the majority of the creditors, particularly of the creditors from outside Karachi, preferred official liquidation, the Court ordered the bank to be compulsorily wound up [1].

After the petition for compulsory winding up by a creditor, a resolution for voluntary liquidation was passed by the directors who were the sole shareholders, and voluntary liquidators were appointed. The matter was almost compromised before the company Judge, but with a view to speedy payment of the debts the company Judge passed an order for compulsory winding up. The order was supported by a dissentient director. Pending appeal against the aforesaid order all the creditors were satisfied by the voluntary liquidators : Held, the order for compulsory winding up should be set aside and the fact that misfeasance proceedings were in progress against the appellant director by the dissentient director was no reason for maintaining the order for compulsory winding up [2].

In a voluntary winding up the order made by the registrar that a claim in respect of a judgment should not be admitted to proof does not estop the claimant from presenting a petition for compulsory winding up, if after the date of the order he ascertains facts which show that the transaction of the company ought to be investigated by the official liquidator [3].

Liquidator cannot contest order.

The liquidator appointed by the company in a voluntary winding up or that under supervision of the Court has no right to contest an order directing a compulsory winding up [4]. In case a voluntary winding up is succeeded by a compulsory order, the date of the winding up will be the date on which the petition is presented [5].

Power of Court to adopt proceedings of voluntary winding up.

220. Where a company is being wound up voluntarily, and an order is made for winding up by the Court, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by the same or any subsequent order, provide for the adoption of all or any of the proceedings in the voluntary winding up.

Date of commencement of winding up.

The making of a compulsory order does not render void the proceedings in the voluntary winding up [6], but the presentation of the petition for compulsory winding up is the date of the compulsory winding up [7]. For the purposes of preferential payments, however, the winding up dates from the resolution [8], but for the purposes of fraudulent preference the presentation of the petition corresponds to the act of bankruptcy [9].

Winding up subject to supervision of Court.

Power to order winding up subject to supervision.

221. When a company has by special or extraordinary resolution resolved to wind up voluntarily, the Court may make an order that the voluntary winding up shall continue, but subject to such supervision of the Court, and with such liberty for creditors, contributories or others to apply to the Court, and generally on such terms and conditions as the Court thinks just.

Valid resolution for winding up voluntarily is necessary.

The Court cannot order the voluntary winding up to be continued under supervision unless there is in existence a valid resolution for voluntary winding up[1]. Dalip Singh J. of the Lahore High Court has however held that an order passed under this section is not without jurisdiction merely by reason of the fact that the extraordinary resolution was conditional or that it was passed at a meeting convened within 14 days of the issue of the notice[2].

A supervision order can be made only where there is a valid winding up. Hence where a creditor challenges the voluntary winding up proceedings as being void, he cannot apply for a supervision order[3].

Contributory's and creditor's application.

A supervision order is not, as a rule, made on the application of a contributory unless the winding up resolution has been passed fraudulently, or creditors appear to support the petition[4]. But in an application by a creditor for a supervision order the Court will always be in favour of making the order[9]. The petitioning creditor is entitled to his costs as a first charge on the assets of the company subject to any prior lien[5]. A supervision order was however made on a shareholder's petition where the only reason for making it was that in a proposed sale of the company's assets the representatives of the new company were much the same persons as those who controlled the liquidation[6].

Who can apply.

A person who has merely a claim for unliquidated damages against a company cannot however petition either for a compulsory or a supervision order[7]. The question whether the debt of a creditor was incurred before or after the voluntary liquidation commenced seems to be immaterial[8].

Petition for compulsory order.

If a petition is presented for winding up under supervision the Court cannot make a compulsory order on the motion of a creditor[9]; and if an order is made for winding up under supervision a creditor cannot present a petition for compulsory winding up, but the official receiver may do so[10].

It is not a matter of course to make a compulsory order; but it would be made where the official receiver after such an order would possess any power which the voluntary liquidator cannot exercise and which is necessary in order that there may be an efficient winding up in the interest of the creditors and the contributories, e.g., where misfeasance proceedings are contemplated and a public examination is absolutely necessary in order to obtain a sufficient disclosure 1.

Who can appear. At the hearing of a petition for winding up under supervision the liquidator and not the company ought to appear 2.

Date of commencement. The date of the commencement of a voluntary winding up is not altered by a supervision order 3; but it is altered by a compulsory winding up order 4.

Ground of order. Personal misconduct of a voluntary liquidator is not in itself a ground for making a supervision order on a shareholder's petition 3. The remedy is to bring an action against the liquidator or to remove him 5.

S. 216. S. 216 enables a creditor to apply to the Court when necessary; so the principal reasons for making a supervision order appear to be (1) that the order stops actions 6 and (2) that it subjects the costs to taxation 5.

Costs. Where on a creditor's petition for winding up a company under supervision of the Court a notice was served on other creditors who wished to oppose it, but the creditors professed to support it instead and were not willing to bear the burden of the petition which the petitioning creditor was unwilling to proceed with and the Court dismissed the petition, it was held that the supporting creditors were not entitled to costs 7.

For cases of shareholders' petition and creditors' petition see Buckley, 10th ed. pp. 458-459.

Effect of petition for winding up subject to supervision.

222. A petition for the continuance of a voluntary winding up subject to the supervision of the Court shall, for the purpose of giving jurisdiction to the Court over suits, be deemed to be a petition for winding up by the Court.

Stay of proceedings. As regards the Court's jurisdiction to stay suits and legal proceedings after presentation of the petition and after the winding up order see ss. 169 and 171 and the notes under those sections.

Court may have regard to wishes of creditors and contributories.

223. The Court may, in deciding between a winding up by the Court and a winding up subject to supervision, in the appointment of liquidators, and in all other matters relating to the winding up subject to supervision, have regard to the wishes of the creditors or contributories as proved to it by any sufficient evidence.

As to how the Court should ascertain the wishes of the creditors or contributories see s. 239. Compare s. 174.

Power for Court to appoint or remove liquidators.

224. (1) Where an order is made for a winding up subject to supervision, the Court may by the same or any subsequent order appoint any additional liquidator.

(2) A liquidator appointed by the Court under this section shall have the same powers, be subject to the same obligations, and in all respects stand in the same position as if he had been appointed by the company.

(3) The Court may remove any liquidator so appointed by the Court or any liquidator continued under the supervision order, and fill any vacancy occasioned by the removal, or by death or resignation.

Security.

If an additional liquidator is appointed by the Court, he will be required to give security 1.

Appointment of additional or new liquidator.

Where in an application for the appointment of an additional liquidator and for a supervision order objection was taken to the person suggested for the office on the grounds, (1) that his firm acted as creditors of the company and (2) that the existing liquidator was also an interested party he being the managing director of the company, the Court superseded the appointment of the existing liquidator, confirmed the appointment of the person suggested and conjoined with him a person unconnected with the company 2. After the supervision order the shareholders can resolve on the appointment of a new liquidator and inform the Court of their wishes 3.

If a company, in passing a resolution for voluntary winding up, has omitted to appoint any liquidator, the Court may appoint one by the supervision order 4.

Removal of liquidator.

This section enables the Court to remove liquidators after the supervision order, while s. 213 empowers the Court to remove liquidators appointed by the company or the Court in a voluntary winding up.

Powers of liquidator.

In the winding up under supervision the liquidator has no power to bind the company by a new contract to pay the depositors an increased rate of interest 5. Where a suit has been brought for enforcing a call by a voluntary liquidator and dismissed, a subsequent application by a liquidator under supervision of the Court is barred 6.

Effect of supervision order.

225. (1) Where an order is made for a winding up subject to supervision, the liquidator may, subject to any restrictions imposed by the Court, exercise all his powers, without the sanction or intervention of the Court, in the same manner as if the company were being wound up altogether voluntarily.

(2) Except as provided in sub-section (1), and save for the purposes of section 196, any order made by the Court for a winding up subject to the supervision of the Court shall for all purposes, including the staying of suits and other proceedings, be deemed to be an order of the Court for winding up the company by the Court, and shall confer full authority on the Court to make calls or to enforce calls made by the liquidators, and to exercise all other powers which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company altogether by the Court.

(3) In the construction of the provisions whereby the Court is empowered to direct any act or thing to be done to or in favour of the official liquidator, the expression "official liquidator" shall be deemed to mean the liquidator conducting the winding up subject to the supervision of the Court.

Staying of suits &c.

Where a company is being wound up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, any attachment, sequestration, distress or execution put in force against the estate or effects of the company is, unless leave to proceed is given by the Court, avoided altogether, so that no interest in any goods seized is acquired, even as against third persons 1.

The Court will set aside a judgment obtained without leave after the making of the winding up order 2. The provision applies for distress 3.

Agreement for sale.

An agreement for sale of a company's property by the liquidator is intra vires 4, although the winding up be under supervision of the Court 5.

Restrictions.

As to the restrictions imposed by theCourt see the cases noted below 6. Restrictions will not be placed unless there be necessity for doing so 7.

Appeal.

It is provided by sub-s. (2) that the orders passed by the Court in winding up proceedings under the supervision of the Court stand for all purposes on the same footing as orders passed during such proceedings when the winding up is by the Court. Hence an appeal is competent from an order passed in winding up proceedings under supervision of Court 8.

Appointment in certain cases of voluntary liquidators to office of official liquidators.

226. Where an order has been made for the winding up of a company subject to supervision, and an order is afterwards made for winding up by the Court, the Court may, by the last-mentioned order or by any subsequent order, appoint the voluntary liquidators or any of them, either provisionally or permanently, and either with or without the addition of any other person, to be official liquidator in the winding up by the Court.

Supplemental Provisions.

Avoidance of transfers, etc., after commencement of winding up.

227. (1) In the case of voluntary winding up every transfer of shares, except transfers made to or with the sanction of the liquidator, and every alteration in the status of the members of the company made after the commencement of the winding up shall be void.

(2) In the case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, every disposition of the property (including actionable claims) of the company, and every transfer of shares, or alteration in the status of its members, made after the commencement of the winding up shall, unless the Court otherwise orders, be void.

Scope.

The difference between this section and s. 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909 is that while bona fide payments to creditors by an insolvent subject to the provisions of the latter Act are permissible and valid and may generally be quite proper, payments to creditors of debts previously incurred by a company from the moment of the presentation of the petition for winding up become improper alienations and void. For the purpose of the present section it is wholly immaterial whether the person making or receiving the payment had or did not have notice of the presentation of the petition for winding up, whereas it would be essential under s. 57 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, for a person claiming the protection of that section to show that the transaction claimed to be valid was without notice of the presentation of any petition [1].

Date of commencement of winding up.

A winding up by the Court dates from the presentation of the petition [2] while a voluntary winding up or a winding up subject to the supervision of the Court dates from the passing of the resolution authorizing the winding up [3]. A special resolution was deemed to have been passed at the date when it was confirmed [4]. But confirmation is no longer necessary ; see the new sub-s. (2) of s. 81.

Transfer of shares.

Sub-s. (1). The execution of a transfer of shares without the sanction of the liquidator is void but not illegal [5], and an action may lie for refusal to execute a transfer although the sanction has not been obtained [6]. The liquidator has the power of sanction which involves the power to alter the register of members [7]. As to a transfer of shares to the liquidator see Vining's case [8]. Where successive transfers are sanctioned by the liquidator under this section, the ultimate transferee only is liable to contribute as a present member, the transferor and the prior transferees being liable as past members [9]. Where shares are pledged without the permission of the Court the transaction is void [10].

Where the contract was to deliver registered shares on a certain date, but the transferor could not deliver such shares on account of the company having gone into liquidation in the meantime, the promisee was entitled to get back the money paid to the promisor 1.

A transfer of shares after the commencement of the winding up made without previous sanction of the Court is not void. Complete discretion has been left to the Court to do whatever it may think just ; but an order that the transaction should stand would not ordinarily be made without good grounds 2.

Transfer of debentures.

The right to transfer debentures is not affected by the winding up 3. Where a debenture was issued by a company between the date of presentation of the petition for winding up and the date of the order for its compulsory winding up, it was held that notwithstanding the debenture-holder's knowledge of presentation of the petition, he was entitled to a declaration that the debenture was valid, that the costs of his successful application might well be regarded as mortgagor's costs and must therefore be added to his security and that the costs of the liquidator must be included in the costs of liquidation 4.

Alteration of status.

The words in the section forbidding alteration of status do not affect such transfers as are expressly authorized by the preceding words 5.

Transferor & transferee.

As between the transferor and the transferee the liability of one to the other is not affected by the Act 6 ; but the Court will not give effect to the transfer by ordering registration 7.

Forfeiture of shares.

Where a forfeiture has been validly made before the commencement of a voluntary winding up, the liquidator cannot under sub-s. (1) cancel the forfeiture 8. But the power of forfeiture may be exercised by the directors after the commencement of a voluntary winding up, if they obtain sanction of the liquidator or of a general meeting 9.

Sub-s. (2). Transactions made after the commencement of the winding up which a Court would validate under this sub-section are transactions bona fide entered into by a company for the benefit of the company and those interested in the assets of the company, for preserving the business of the company as a going concern and not to the detriment of other creditors 10. In the case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court every disposition of property of the company shall be void unless the Court otherwise orders 11. Although any disposition of the assets of the company after the winding up order is made and before the appointment of an official liquidator is not regular, as the property is then in the custody of the Court constructively, where the company has no creditor and the contributories in a meeting unanimously declare a dividend, the dividend so distributed will not be ordered to be repaid to the official liquidator, as the only persons interested in the assets are the contributories themselves 1. So where a lease was granted to certain persons pursuant to a resolution of a general meeting of shareholders after a petition for winding up presented by some of the shareholders had been dismissed, but on appeal the company was ordered to be wound up compulsorily, the Judicial Committee did not allow the official liquidator to impugn the lease, as the company had no creditors and the only persons interested were the shareholders who had by an unopposed resolution approved of the lease 2.

Where an insurance company makes payments between the commencement of the winding up and the date of the winding up order to some of its policy-holders in respect of their policies, the amounts of which have become due, such payments being payments of debts by the company to its creditors amount to disposition of property within the meaning of this sub-section and cannot be validated 3.

If the directors enter into a contract and make payments on it during the winding up proceedings, they do so at their peril. Excepting those cases in which it would be held that the payment was necessary for the winding up or for the carrying on of the business of the company pending the hearing of the winding up petition, the directors must be aware that there is always a risk of such payments being void under this section. In the sense that the directors are aware that they are making unauthorized payments, they are disposing of the property of the company wrongfully 4.

Sub-s. (2) intends to prevent any improper alienation and disposition of the property of a company in extremis during the period which must elapse before a winding up petition can be heard. Any bona fide transaction carried out and completed in the ordinary course of current business can however be sanctioned. This power is given for the benefit and interest of the company so as to ensure that a company which is made the subject of winding up petition may nevertheless obtain money necessary for carrying out its business and so avoid its working being paralysed ; but the Court will not allow the assets of the company to be disposed of at the mere pleasure of the company and thus cause the fundamental principles of equity among its creditors being violated 5.

Ordinary course of business.

There is a dividing line between what is the ordinary course of business bofore a winding up petition is presented, and what is the ordinary course afterwards. Before a petition is presented it is in the ordinary course of business for a company to pay all its debts and incidentally to give security to its bankers for any overdraft or loan it may arrange. But after petition is presented the situation is different. Prima facie all debts will have to be paid pari passu. Therefore it is no longer in the ordinary course of business to pay one creditor in full to the detriment of his fellow creditors 6. The transactions entered into by a creditor in ignorance of the presentation of the petition would be rare but knowledge of the presentation of the petition, though an element to be considered, is not conclusive on the question of bona fides 1.

The payment made to a creditor on the basis of his decree after the presentation of the petition for winding up is not valid merely because he could have recovered the money before the date of presentation of the petition for winding up, if the company had not delayed execution 2. It is wrong to say that any creditor who can bring pressure to bear on the company should have preference over a creditor who cannot 2.

Debts of all descriptions to be proved.

228. In every winding up (subject in the case of insolvent companies to the application in accordance with the provisions of this Act of the law of insolvency) all debts payable on a contingency, and all claims against the company, present or future, certain or contingent, shall be admissible to proof against the company, a just estimate being made, so far as possible, of the value of such debts or claims as may be subject to any contingency or for some other reason do not bear a certain value.

Application of the section.

This section applies where the assets of the company are sufficient to pay all its debts and liabilities as well as the costs of liquidation. Where the company is insolvent the provisions of the next following section will apply. Every company in liquidation will be deemed to be insolvent until it is shown that the assets are sufficient for payment of the debts in full 3. The section is applicable to voluntary winding up also 4.

The expression "the law of insolvency" should be narrowed down to include only the "rule" as given in the next section. The Companies Act does not import all the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act and in particular s. 28 (2) of the latter Act 5.

All debts are provable.

Every kind of liability, however difficult of valuation, is provable unless declared by the Court to be incapable of being fairly valued 6, the object of the Act being to put all unsecured creditors upon an equality and to pay pari passu 7. A debt payable abroad in foreign currency is provable at the rate of exchange ruling on the date when the debt became due, and not at the rate ruling on the date of the winding up order, the correct date being the date of the breach and not the date of the winding up 8.

Right of set off.

The right of set off may be exercised in respect of claims arising before the winding up commenced, although not ascertained until afterwards 9, and unliquidated damages for breach of contract can be set off against a liquidated sum 10. The liquidator may disallow a proof in whole or in part if the company, as a matter of account, has a set off 11.

Insurance policies.

In the winding up of an insurance company which issues policies to employers to indemnify them against claims by their employees in respect of accidents, the policy-holders are entitled to prove in respect of (1) obligations presently incurred under the contract of insurance at the date of the winding up, (2) obligations presently incurred under the contract of insurance since the date of the winding up and (3) estimated loss incurred by the repudiation of the contract of insurance limited to the proportion of the premium unexhausted 1.

Actionable claims.

A contributory having bought up a debt of the company for less than what is actually due may, in the absence of fraud 2, prove for the full amount 3; but the case is otherwise if he stands in a fiduciary relation to the company 4.

Proof of debts.

A judgment would always be prima facie proof of a debt. It is only when there are circumstances casting doubts on the correctness of the debt, as proved by the judgment, that the judgment may be set apart and independent proof may be called for 5.

See notes to the next section.

Application of insolvency rules in winding up of insolvent companies.

229. In the winding up of an insolvent company the same rules shall prevail and be observed with regard to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and to debts provable and to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities as are in force for the time being under the law of insolvency with respect to the estates of persons adjudged insolvent; and all persons who in any such case would be entitled to prove for and receive dividends out of the assets of the company may come in under the winding up, and make such claims against the company as they respectively are entitled to by virtue of this section.

Scope.

This section does not incorporate in the Act the provisions of s. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909, and all questions regarding priority of debts in winding up proceedings are governed solely by the provisions of s. 230 post. Apart from the exceptions contained in that section the assets of the company must be applied in satisfaction of its liabilities pari passu 6.

Insolvency Acts in force.

In the Presidency towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay and in the town of Karachi the law of insolvency in force is the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (Act III of 1909). In the rest of British India excepting the Scheduled Districts the Provincial Insolvency Act (Act V of 1920) applies. As regards the rules relating to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and to debts provable and to the valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities, see ss. 46 to 50 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act and ss. 45 to 50 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

How far applicable.

A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that the phrase "the same rules......under the law of insolvency" in this section is wide enough to include rules contained in the Provincial Insolvency Act, rules made under any power conferred by that Act and rules of practice, unless there is something in the Companies Act itself already providing for the matter in question, or in conflict with the rules which it is proposed to import [1]. But the Peshwar Court has held in a recent case that the above phrase should not be widened to include the whole of the law of insolvency as contained in the Insolvency Acts and in particular s. 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act [2]. This latter view is in accord with the decisions of English Courts (see below).

Where there are mutual dealings between an insolvent and a creditor, an account has to be taken of what is due from the one to the other in respect of such mutual dealings, and the balance of the accounts, and no more, has to be paid by one to the other. The law is not that the receiver-in-insolvency can recover the full amount due to the insolvent, leaving the creditor to take a pro rata dividend only. The above principle of s. 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and s. 47 of the Presidency Towns-Insolvency Act applies to companies in liquidation by virtue of the present section 229, the only exception being the case of a contributory who cannot set off the debt due to him or any dividend that may come to him afterwards against the calls [3].

English law.

In England it has been held that the corresponding section of the English Act does not import into the winding up the Bankruptcy rules relating to reputed ownership [4], requiring a petitioning creditor to surrender or value his security [5], restricting the rights of creditors under attachment of debts [6], giving a lessor a right to distrain for rent due before the winding up [7], depriving an execution creditor, where the sheriff has notice of a bankruptcy within fourteen days after sale, of the fruits of his execution [8], and the calculation of interest on debts for the purposes of the dividend [9]. Only the rules relating to the following are applicable viz., (1) the respective rights of secured creditors inter se and unsecured creditors inter se; (2) the debts and liabilities provable; (3) valuation of annuities and future and contingent liabilities, and (4) mutual credit and set off [10]. But the phrase "with regard to the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors and debts provable" is not wide enough to incorporate s. 60 of the English Bankruptcy Act, 1914, nor can the section possibly come within the words by reason of a referance to future and contingent liabilities in regard to which s. 60 can be fairly described as a rule relating thereto. S. 262 of the English Companies Act of 1929, corresponding to the present section, has been strictly construed and it has been held in numerous cases that the section does not introduce into a winding up bankruptcy rules in a number of matters [11]. For instance a winding up Court, unlike an insolvency

Court, cannot take cognizance of and adjudicate on the title of third persons except to the limited extent mentioned in ss. 231 and 232 ; and if it is necessary to impeach such title, the liquidator must have recourse to regular suits cognizable by ordinary Civil Courts 1.

Effect of Bankruptcy rules.

The effect of the introduction of the Bankruptcy rules is (1) to exclude from proof unliquidated damages for tort and (2) to prevent a secured creditor from proving for the full amount of his debt and subsequently realizing his security 2.

In winding up of an insolvent company all unsecured creditors are to be paid pari passu and the appropriate date for ascertaining their legal position is the date of the commencement of the winding up 3. The object of this is to prevent the injustice and scrambles and intrigues which would arise if the company was to be at liberty to prefer one creditor to another. An exception is made by s. 230 3.

Solvency and insolvency of companies.

A company in liquidation will be deemed to be insolvent until the contrary is shown 4. A company in liquidation becomes solvent as soon as it has paid off its liabilities existing at the date of the winding up order. When these liabilities have been discharged, creditors are entitled to subsequent interest when their debts carry interest 5. But interest in respect of debts which do not carry interest cannot be paid in a winding up 6.

Effect on contract.

The effect of a company going into liquidation while a contract entered into by the company before liquidation is subsisting is the same as when a party to a contract becomes bankrupt or insolvent. The bankruptcy or insolvency of a party may not alone necessarily result in such an incapacity to perform the contract as to entitle the other party at once to treat it as broken and to claim damages, because it may be for the benefit of the bankrupt or insolvent or of his estate to complete the contract and the representatives of his estate may be authorized to do so. The law does not require that the trustees in bankruptcy should give express notice, within a reasonable time after the date of the bankruptcy, of his adoption of the contract. The law only requires the trustee in bankruptcy to perform the bankrupt's part of it as and when he should have done it himself 7.

In a winding up the creditors should be allowed interest from the date of the winding up to the date of payment on the outstanding debts before the preferential shareholders can get anything. Where there has been a contract, interest at 6 per cent. per annum may be allowed, when the contractual interest is equal to or greater than the rate. In the absence of a contract for interest, a rate of 4 per cent. is proper 8. No proof is necessary for interest after commencement of the winding up.

Proof of interest.

The creditor, if his debt is one that bears interest, gets it if there is a surplus as incidental to his debt, irrespective of the question whether any mention of the interest was made in the order ajudicating upon his claim 9. In the case of an insolvent company where the debt bears interest, it is provable only up to the commencement of the winding up[1], whether the winding up is voluntary or compulsory[2].

Where the company is insolvent nothing should be allowed for interest after the commencement of the winding up ; but the opposite rule applies where the company is solvent, that is, where there is a surplus. In such a case this section has no application and in whatever manner the dividends may originally have been made, if it turns out that there is an ultimate surplus, the account must be taken as between the company and the creditors in the ordinary way, that is, by applying each dividend in the first place to that payment of the interest due at the date of such dividend and the surplus to the reduction of the principal[3]. The company's solvency is established if, after payment of the principal and interest up to the date of the winding up, there are some assets sufficient to meet the liability on account of interest accruing after the commencement of the liquidation[4].

So long as a company is in voluntary liquidation, interest continues to accrue on debts carrying interest[5] ; but in the case of an insolvent company the bankruptcy rules apply and no claim can be sustained for interest subsequent to a judgment[2]. If a supervision order is made, the creditors cannot prove for interest accrued after the passing of the winding up resolution, unless there is a surplus remaining over after the other liabilites of the company have been discharged[6].

No secured creditor need, or can be forced to, prove his debt and such a creditor can stand wholly outside the winding up proceedings, if he so elects, and rely upon his security or his decree, if he nas obtained one, provided he has obtained leave to proceed from the winding up Judge[7]. A secured creditor need not prove at all but may rely on his security. He may bring an action to realize it without leave in a voluntary winding up, and with leave of the Court in a compulsory winding up or in a winding up under supervision[8]. Where the security is only a floating charge, certain unsecured debts are paid before those of the debenture holders[9] and before any other payment for carrying on the business[10]. The landlord is not a secured creditor in England[11] but he is so in Scotland[12].

In compulsory liquidation of an insolvent company a secured creditor after having exhausted his security cannot, in proving as regards the balance of his debt unsatisfied, include interest after the commencement of the winding up 1. A secured creditor in the case of a liquidation is on the same footing as in that of insolvency proceedings in respect of the unsecured portion of his debt 1.

S. company which had been financing P. company through one M. T. company for 7 years decided to have the property of P. company as security for debt owed really by M. T. company and obtained an equitable mortgage over P. company's property. The M. T. company which was putting up P.'s property as security held almost all the shares in P. company and the directors of the latter had for years been directors of M. T. company and these facts were known to the directors of S. company in course of their business. Winding up proceedings having been started in respect of P. company, S. company claimed to be a secured creditor of P. by virtue of the equitable mortgage. It is was held by the Privy Council under the circumstances that the official liquidator of the P. company was entitled to avoid the equitable mortgage 2.

Debenture-holders.

It is true that the debenture-holders are not bound by any thing done by the official liquidators, but they have no better claim than the company itself. They have a charge on the assets of the company, but what those assets are depends on the rights of the company 3. A company, which was not able to carry on its business owing to lack of necessary funds, entered into an agreement with S to the effect that S should supply a certain amount of cotton to the mills in order that they might spin it, that he was to pay spinning charges at certain rate and that he should advance money to the company to pay for their staff and for purchase of machinery and other necessary articles. It was provided that S should deduct from the funds advanced by him the spinning charges which he had to pay or in the alternative that he should deduct his advances from the spinning charges. The company went into liquidation : held S. was entitled to deduct the amount of his advances from the sum payable towards the spinning charges 4. The debenture-holders are entitled to have their debentures declared valid in the winding up proceedings, if the liquidator sought the instruction of the Court as to how those debentures should be ranked 5.

Remedies of a secured creditor.

When a company goes into liquidation, a secured creditor may realize his security and recover therefrom the whole of his principal as well as interest up to the date of realization, and not merely the amount due on the date of the winding up order. But if he realizes his security and has to prove for a balance, the remaining assets of the company would only be liable for such principal and interest as was due on the date of the winding up order. The hypothecated property is liable for the whole claim and it is only the liability of the remaining assets that is affected by the winding up order 6.

Charge.

Where a suit is brought by a plaintiff against a company alleging that he is entitled to a charge, the issue ought to be decided in the suit which should be allowed to proceed inspite of the winding up proceeding 7. Upon a winding up a debenture-holder is entitled to enforce his charge, even though his debenture has not matured 1.

If a creditor values his security, he cannot prove for more than the balance though the security realizes less than his valuation 2. If he wilfully omits to mention his security in his proof he will not generally be allowed to amend 3.

Execution creditors.

An execution creditor who has seized before commencement of the winding up is a secured creditor 5. He may realize his security 4. The same rule applies if the sheriff seeks to take possession and is resisted 5, or if the creditor was put off by some trickery 6. A solicitor who holds a lien on documents for his costs against the company is a secured creditor and must mention the lien in his proof 7. A creditor who has obtained the appointment of a receiver of land by way of equitable execution is also a secured creditor 8.

An attaching creditor is not a secured creditor within the meaning of this section, an attachment merely preventing and avoiding alienation 9. In this respect the Indian law differs from the English law 10. After referring to Krishnaswami v. Official Assignee 11, Motilal v. Karrabuddin 12 and Peacock v. Madan Gopal 13 where it was held that an attaching creditor does not obtain by his attachment any charge or lien upon the attached property, Marten C.J. in the case noted below 9 points out that "one reason for this difference between the Indian and English practice is said to lie in the English writ of fiery facius as compared with the prohibitory orders which are passed in India and the different forms of the writ of attachment delivered to the sheriff."

Landlord.

A landlord is not a secured creditor 14, except where s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable; nor is a creditor who has obtained a garnishee order nisi before attaching a debt due to the company, but has not served it on the debtor before the winding up 15. But the attachment of a debt by the service of a garnishee order nisi before the presentation of the petition to wind up constitutes the garnishor a secured creditor 16.

Where fiduciary relation.

Where a fiduciary relation is established between the company and any other party, it is not necessary that the actual moneys paid over to a recipient and paid into his banking account must be traceable. It is sufficient if there is an equivalent sum. If the balance is less than the amount paid, the payer is entitled to look to the recipient up to the amount remaining in his hands 1. So where a sum was deposited with a company as an anticipated earnest payment in respect of a contract which would come into existence but never did so, it was held that a fiduciary relation was established between the parties and that in view of this section read with s. 52 (1) (a) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909 the party making the aforesaid deposit was entitled to the amount and that it was not divisible among the general body of creditors 2. When a customer delivers cheques to a bank for collection and the bank realizes the amount after it has suspended payment, the customer would be entitled, on the bank going into liquidation, to claim preferential payment in respect of the proceeds of the cheques over other creditors of the bank 3. A customer of a bank having a current account with it handed to the bank a sum of money for remitting it by telegraphic transfer to a company in Bombay. The bank did not do so as it suspended payment on the very day and liquidation proceeding were started later on. Held that the money was received by the bank in the capacity of a mere agent and was held apart by the bank as property of the customer who was therefore entitled to preferential payment in respect of the amount 4. For the case of a deposit which did not create a fiduciary relation see Maheshwari Bros. v. O. L. Indra Sugar Works 5.

Provident fund.

Where a provident fund is established by a company for the benefit of its employees and it is clear from the rules relating to the fund that it is held by the company for a specific purpose, the company being not entitled to operate on it except in the manner and conditions laid down by the rules, the relation between the bank and the employees in respect of the amounts standing to the credit of the latter is in the nature of a trust and is not one of debtor and creditor and the company holds the money of the fund in a fiduciary character. The fact that in certain contingencies, the employee may not be paid the amount or the company may have a beneficial interest in the said monies does not make the fund any the less a trust fund. Consequently in liquidation of the company by the combined operation of the present section and s. 52 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the said fund cannot be said to be part of the assets of the company. The employees of the company are therefore entitled to be paid in full the amounts standing to their credit in the provident fund account irrespective of the applicability of s. 230 (1) (e) post 6.

Security deposit.

Where an agent of a bank deposited a certain sum as security for the faithful discharge of his duties and agreed that the bank should receive and hold the money if not forfeited for losses occasioned through the agent's default upon his ceasing to be the bank's agent, it was however held that in liquidation proceedings the agent could only rank as an ordinary creditor and could not take preference over other creditors of the bank 7.

In the case of a going bank it is entitled to treat a security deposit as ear-marked for a particular purpose and refuse to deal with it for any other purpose ; but in liquidation of an insolvent bank, if the occasion for realizing the security has not arisen and if the money has, with the consent of the giver of the security, been received by the bank and mixed with its funds in consideration of an agreement to pay interest on it, the bank is only a debtor and not a trustee 1.

Costs.

Although a liquidator has made a payment taking a receipt purporting to be in full discharge of the claim, the creditor will not be precluded from claiming and recovering any further amount due, e. g., interest, unless there has been a bona fide compromise of a disputed claim 2. A creditor residing out of the Court's jurisdiction and seeking to prove may be ordered to give security for costs 3. The assets out of which costs, whether payable to an outside litigant or as the winding up costs, are payable, are those which are left after satisfying the claims of the secured creditors 4.

In the under-noted case where the costs of the winding up petition were taxed and paid out of the assets on the basis that the company was insolvent, but the company was ultimately found to be solvent, the solicitor was allowed to prove for the balance of his bill of costs, being solicitor and client costs, incurred upon the instructions of the company and its directors in opposing the petition 5.

Damages in tort.

If the damages in tort have been liquidated by agreement or by judgment actually signed before commencement of the winding up 6, they may be proved 7. A judgment obtained after commencement of a voluntary winding up, but before the compulsory order in the same case, may be recovered 8. Where the applicant recovered judgment for damages and costs against a company for personal injuries caused to him by the negligence of one of its servants and before execution could be levied the company went into liquidation, and the insurance company, with which the company in liquidation was insured against third party risks, paid the amount of the damages and costs to the liquidator, it was held that the applicant had no right at law or in equity, either as against the insurance company or as against the liquidator, to require that the money so paid should be handed over to him, but that the money formed part of the company's assets available for distribution among its general creditors including the applicant 9.

Where a paying passenger on a tramcar suffered serious injuries owing to the tramcar getting out of control and on winding up the tramway company rejected the proof of his claim for damages on the ground that it was a claim for unliquidated damages arising otherwise than by reason of a contract, it was held that as the proof was based on a contract to carry the applicant safely on the journey by the tramway company, the proof must be allowed and there must be an enquiry as to the damages 10.

Judgment can be re-opened.

The Court can go behind and re-open a judgment obtained before the liquidation, if there was no consideration or a bad consideration for a debt, particularly if the judgment was obtained by default or consent 1. No doubt where there has been a genuine contest between a claimant and a company which subsequently goes into liquidation and the parties have fought out the case bona fide, it should not be open to the official liquidator to re-open the case or go behind the judgment and to look into the consideration for the same; but where a decree rests on something less than a real trial on the merits of the case or there are circumstances justifying the official liquidator to doubt the bona fides of the judgment or to suspect a miscarriage of justice, it would be open to the official liquidator to reject the decree and call for fresh proof of the claim 2. Where therefore a company was assessed on an estimated income and after its winding up it was found that the company had not made any profit during the year, but suffered loss, the Income-tax officer could not claim his assessment as binding on the liquidator and the official liquidator could call for its proof 2. The last cited case has however been dissented from in the same Chief Court in Dinshaw & Co. v. Income-tax Officer, Lucknow 3, where it has been held that a judgment debt and an assessment for taxes do not stand on the same footing. The reason for allowing the Court to go behind the judgment in insolvency proceedings to see if there is a real debt is to prevent fraudulent judgments. This is not the case with assessment for taxes. Hence where a company has been assessed under s. 23 (4), Income Tax Act, 1922 on the basis of the estimated income of the previous year and the order of assessment is not appealed against, the assessment becomes final and cannot be challenged and re-opened in liquidation proceedings 3. "It is well settled that the Court can inquire into the consideration for a judgment debt.........If there be a judgment it is not necessary to show fraud or collusion. It is sufficient, in the language of Lord Esher, to show miscarriage of justice, that is to say, that for some good reason there ought not to have been a judgment" 4.

Where judgment is obtained on the confession of the insolvent, it is open to the liquidator to set apart the decree and ask for proof of the claim 5. Lord Justice James observed in exp. Kibble 6: "It is settled rule of the Court of Bankruptcy on which we have always acted, that the Court of Bankruptcy can enquire into the consideration for a judgment debt." No judgment recovered against the bankrupt, no covenant for payment given by or account stated with him, can deprive the trustee in bankruptcy of his right and duty to investigate the nature and grounds of the claim made against the bankrupt's estate; the trustee is therefore entitled to go behind these forms and require satisfactory evidence that the debt is a real debt 7.

Mortgage.

Similarly the Court can examine the consideration for which a mortgage was given, and if not good, can set aside the mortgage 8.

Limitation. The statutes of limitation cease to run against a creditor on a winding up order being made, and he is allowed to prove at any time before the company is dissolved, but so as not to interfere with the dividends already paid [1]. A proof in respect of claims statute-barred before the order will not however be allowed [2].

Proving debt. If a person fails to prove a debt, he is not excluded generally, but may prove at any time before dissolution and can obtain payment out of any fund that remains undistributed [3]. The liquidator should send notices to those creditors of whose debts he has any knowledge [4].

Proof in substitution. Where a creditor, who has proved his debt, subsequently assigns it and then withdraws his proof, the assignee will be entitled to file a proof in substitution [5].

Mutual credit and set off. In the case of insolvent companies the bankruptcy rules as to mutual credit and set off apply. This is a wider right than that given by the common law rules of set off, e.g., a claim for unliquidated damages for breach of contract can be set off against a debt [6]. The only condition is that there must be mutuality [7]. There is however a distinction between the right of set off which the official liquidator has under the mutual credit clause of the Insolvency Act and the right of set off which a defendant in a suit governed by the Civil Procedure Code exercises under O. 8. r. 6. Under that Code it is required as a condition precedent to a set off that the money should be "legally recoverable" by the defendant from the plaintiff, whereas the set off which the official liquidator exercises has no such condition precedent. The official liquidator can appropriate so much of the sum that the depositor owes to the company in satisfaction of what the company owes to the depositor, even though the company's claim is not legally recoverable by lapse of time [8]. A debt, although not presently payable, can be set off against moneys owing to a company in liquidation [9]. A joint debt cannot however be set off against a several debt [10]. But if it could be shown that though the joint account is in the names of A and B, A is solely entitled to the amount, a set off has always been allowed [11]. Where a secured creditor has a balance in hand after realization of his security, that may be set off against an unsecured debt due to him from the company [12]. Where at the time of insolvency, no debt is due from the company, there is no right to set off [13]. If an insolvent company is a creditor of and also a contributory liable for calls in another company, there is no set off [14].

In the case of an insolvent company where there are mutual debts and credits or mutual dealings between the company and any other person, an account, as in bankruptcy, is to be made out and the balance only proved for. But this rule only applies where the cross-claims are "commensurable" 1. A pension paid voluntarily by the company cannot be proved 2.

Under Insolvency Acts.

This section makes the provisions of s. 30 of the Provincial Insolvency Act applicable to a case where the amount sought to be set off by the debtor belongs to a joint account with another which account is in credit 3. It has however been observed in a recent case that the privileges and rights which are given in s. 46, Provincial Insolvency Act are based upon equity and fair dealing. It is recognized that it would be very harsh that if the official assignee or the official liquidator could demand in full money due by a debtor and at the same time that person being a creditor for an equal or a larger sum of the company, must be content with a dividend dependent on the distribution which can be made from the assets 4. S. 52 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act does not apply to cases of floating charges created before the liquidation 5.

In case of surety.

A debtor, who has a cross-claim which he can set off against the company, does not lose that right because the company has obtained a safeguard by the surety assuring to the company the amount of the debt of the debtor to the company, there being moneys which can be set off. This right is not lost when a surety is obtained in respect of the debtor's debt to the company 6. Where a surety, whose obligation is to pay to the company the debts of another person, himself has money owing to him by the company in a separate dealing or transaction, the money due to the surety on the one hand and from him to the company on the other are mutual dealings as contemplated by s. 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and he has the right to set off against his indebtedness to the company the moneys due to him when the obligation to the company by the debtor and the surety is joint and several 6. Where both the debtor to the company and his surety are themselves creditors of the company, they may set off one debt against the other 6.

Life assurance companies.

In the winding up of a life assurance company where there are contractual obligations at the date of the winding up the breach of which might give rise to a claim for damages, the claim is provable in the winding up and the policy-holder is entitled to set off the value of his policy against his debt 7.

(3) Subject to the retention of such sums as may be necessary for the costs and expenses of the winding up, the foregoing debts shall be discharged forthwith so far as the assets are sufficient to meet them.

(4) In the event of a landlord or other person distraining or having distrained on any goods or effects of the company within three months next before the date of a winding up order, the debts to which priority is given by this section shall be a first charge on the goods or effects so distrained on, or the proceeds of the sale thereof :

Provided that in respect of any money paid under any such charge the landlord or other person shall have the same rights of priority as the person to whom the payment is made.

(5) The date hereinbefore in this section referred to is—

(a) in the case of a company ordered to be wound up compulsorily which had not previously commenced to be wound up voluntarily, the date of the winding up order ; and

(b) in any other case, the date of the commencement of the winding up.

Amendment.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the word "and" at the end of cl. (b) of sub-s. (1) of this section has been omitted and after cl. (c) the new clauses (d), (e) and (f) have been inserted. For the effect of the amendments see Introduction.

Prerogative right of the Crown.

Sub. (1), cl (a). The prerogative right of the Crown in the winding up to payment of its debts in priority to all other creditors is inconsistent with and was abrogated by ss. 186, 207 and 209 of the English Act of 1908 (corresponding to ss. 207, 229 and 230 respectively of the present Indian Act) which negatived the prerogative by giving certain specified debts priority over all other including the Crown debts[1]. The Crown cannot claim even the narrower prerogative right to take the assets of the company by writ of extent or otherwise to the exclusion of all other claims and apart altogether from winding up, for that also is inconsistent with the provisions of the above sections[1].

Where the legislature has dealt with the powers under the prerogative, the prerogative must be taken to have been merged in the statute, and the powers previously within the prerogative can be exercised only in the manner and subject to the limitations contained in the statute[2]. But it has been held by Lort Williams J. that the priority exercised regarding Crown debts by reason of the Royal prerogative is limited to those arising out of revenue and taxation and does not extend to trading activities. The priority of Crown debts in winding up is limited to those specially mentioned in this section[3]. The Lahore High Court has held that where there is a conflict between the Companies Act and the Insolvency Act, the provisions of the former must be given effect to. It is the intention of the legislature to confine the decisions of all questions of priority to the present section which was enacted to deal specially with the same questions as were dealt in s. 61 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920[4].

The priority of payment of all Crown debts which prevails in insolvency under s. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act obtains equally in the winding up by reason of s. 229, and the priority is not confined to the debts mentioned in the section[2]. See s. 232 (2) and notes thereto.

Revenue.

If this section had read "all taxes, cesses, rates and other revenue", the word "revenue" would have had to be read ejusdem generis with the preceding words. The word "revenue" means income ; hence the rent of the Government telephone lines and also the charge for trunk calls are within its meaning [1].

Rates.

The duty cast by s. 129 and this section upon a receiver appointed by debenture-holders of a company to pay rates then due from the company applies to a subsequent increase in those rates resulting from an appeal being allowed against the derating of part of the company's premises [2].

As to what are rates see the cases noted below [3].

Who is a clerk or servant.

Cl. (b). A secretary may be a clerk or servant so as to be entitled to the preferential payment in a winding up [4] ; but a secretary who does not give his whole time to the company or performs his duties by a deputy is not within the section [5].

Where the articles of association allow it, a director may hold any other office under the company and as such he may be a "clerk or servant" and entitled to preferential payment [6]. But as a rule a director, even though a managing director, is not regarded to be in the employment of the company [7]. Where the employee is not a whole time servant, but in the nature of a "contributor" to a periodical, he is not entitled to preferential payment [7].

Persons appointed to investigate the management of a company and to make a report is not a "clerk or servant" of the company [8]. A reporter in the employment of a newspaper company who does not work at the office, is not employed exclusively by the company, is not bound to render any general service and is not under the control of the company, is not a "servant" of the company so as to be entitled to preferential payment [9]. Under special contract a singer in opera has been held to be a servant [10]. A chemist employed at weekly wages to prepare formulae may be a servant [11]. Wages made up partly by fixed salary and partly by commission upon work done are wages [12].

Effect of winding up on contract of service.

If the winding up order is made before expiry of the term of the contract of service, the servant is entitled to his salary to the end of the period of his contract [13]. The order is notice of discharge of the servant [14], even in the case of a voluntary winding up [15]. The appointment by the Court of a receiver and manager in a debenture-holder's action has a similar effect [16].

Employees of foreign company.

Cl. (e). In a case where a foreign company is wound up in more jurisdictions than one, the law is that the Court of such jurisdiction will be governed by the forensic rules which govern the conduct of its own liquidation. This clause is a forensic rule. It should therefore be applied in the matter of winding up a foreign company which is wound up in British India under the provisions of this Act 1.

Application.

This clause would also apply to the case of a sum due to any employee from the provident fund amount maintained by the company who entered service before 15th January, 1937 (date of commencement of the amending Act XXII of 1936). It is sufficient if he is an employee of the company on the date of the winding up 1.

Floating charge.

Sub-s. (2), cl. (b). A floating charge operates as an immediate and continuing charge on the property charged subject only to the company's powers to deal with the property in the ordinary course of its business 2. A floating charge, unless otherwise agreed, leaves the company at liberty to create specific mortgages ranking in priority to the floating charge 3, and by dealing with debtors to give them a right of set off 4. A notice of the floating charge does not postpone subsequent mortgagees 5. As to what is a floating charge see notes to s. 109.

This section makes it quite clear that where there is a floating charge created by a debenture, the debenture-holder does not get priority over the debts contemplated in sub-s. (1) 6. So where a company creates a fixed charge by mortgaging its immovable properties and also gives the mortgagee a floating charge over its book-debts, this clause applies to the floating charge. Consequently the debts mentioned in sub.s. (1) of this section must be given priority and paid first out of the book-debts before the floating charge over the same can be enforced 6.

Wages of workmen.

Under this clause read with cl. (c) of sub-s. (1) the wages of workmen have a priority of claim over the claims of debenture-holders under any floating charge created by the company 7.

Personal liability of receivers.

If a receiver disposes of the assets without making provision for the preferential payments, he is personally liable 8, and moneys paid to a debenture-holder cannot be recovered to make the necessary payments 9.

Priorities.

These are the only priorities recognized in law and except the floating charges, referred to in s. 129, there is no priority over the claims of mortgagees or debenture-holders who are outside the liquidation 10. The priority is in respect only of assets subject to a floating charge 11.

Costs and expenses.

Sub-s. (3). The effect of this sub-section is to make the costs and expenses of winding up payable out of the assets comprised in the floating charge before payment of the preferential debts ; but if the free assets are insufficient to pay the preferential debts, the balance must be paid out of the assets comprised in the floating charge 1.

Costs of unsuccessful litigation incurred by a liquidator, whether in a voluntary or a compulsory winding up, are payable out of the assets in priority to the costs of liquidation. This rule applies whether the order simply directs payment of costs, or directs that the costs be paid out of the assets of the company or that the liquidator do pay the costs with liberty to recoup himself out of the assets 2.

As to costs generally see notes to s. 193.

Date mentioned in sub-s. (1).

Sub-s. (5). The material date for the purpose of sub-s. (1) of this section is, in the case of a compulsory winding up which has been preceded by a voluntary winding up, the date of the commencement of the voluntary winding up, i.e., when the resolution for the voluntary winding up was passed 3. Where a voluntary winding up is succeeded by a compulsory order, the two months for which a clerk or servant can claim preferential payment are the two months next before the resolution for the winding up 4. The section deals with the winding up as one continuous process which may be commenced as a voluntary and continued as a compulsory winding up, and there is nothing to show that persons who have acquired preferential rights under the voluntary winding up are to be deprived of them if a compulsory order is made 4. As to the date of the commencement of a winding up whether voluntary or continued under supervision of the Court see s. 204.

Disclaimer of property.

230A. (1) Where any part of the property of a company which is being wound up consists of land of any tenure burdened with onerous covenants, of shares or stock in companies, of unprofitable contracts or of any other property that is unsaleable or not readily saleable, by reason of its binding the possessor thereof to the performance of any onerous act, or to the payment of any sum of money, the liquidator of the company, notwithstanding that he had endeavoured to sell or has taken possession of the property, or exercised any act of ownership in relation thereto, may, with the leave of the Court and subject to the provisions of this section, by writing signed by him, at any time within twelve months after the commencement of the winding up or such extended period as may be allowed by the Court, disclaim the property :

Provided that, where any such property has no. come to the knowledge of the liquidator within one month after the commencement of the winding up, the power under this section of disclaiming the property may be exercised at any time within twelve months after he has become aware thereof or such extended period as may be allowed by the Court.

(2) The disclaimer shall operate to determine, as from the date of disclaimer, the rights, interests, and liabilities of the company, and the property of the company, in or in respect of the property disclaimed, but shall not, except so far as is necessary for the purpose of releasing the company and the property of the company from liability, affect the rights or liabilities of any other person.

(3) The Court, before or on granting leave to disclaim, may require such notices to be given to persons interested, and impose such terms as a condition of granting leave, and make such other order in the matter as the Court thinks just.

(4) The liquidator shall not be entitled to disclaim any property under this section in any case where an application in writing has been made to him by any persons interested in the property requiring him to decide whether he will or will not disclaim, and the liquidator has not, within a period of twenty-eight days after the receipt of the application or such further period as may be allowed by the Court, given notice to the applicant that he intends to apply to the Court for leave to disclaim, and in the case of a contract, if the liquidator, after such an application as aforesaid, does not within the said period or further period disclaim the contract, the company shall be deemed to have adopted it.

(5) The Court may, on the application of any person who is, as against the liquidator, entitled to the benefit or subject to the burden of a contract made with the company, make an order rescinding the contract on such terms as to payment by or to either party of damages for the non-performance of the contract, or otherwise as the Court thinks just, and any damages payable under the order to any such person may be proved by him as a debt in the winding up.

(6) The Court may, on an application by any person who either claims any interest in any disclaimed property or is under any liability not discharged by this Act in respect of any disclaimed property and on hearing any such persons as it thinks fit, make an order for the vesting of the property in or the delivery of the property to any persons entitled thereto, or to whom it may seem just that the property should be delivered by way of compensation for such liability as aforesaid, or a trustee for him, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, and on any such vesting order being made, the property comprised therein shall vest accordingly in the person therein named in that behalf without any conveyance or assignment for the purpose :

Provided that, where the property disclaimed is of a leasehold nature, the Court shall not make a vesting order in favour of any person claiming under the company whether as under-lessee or as mortgagee except upon the terms of making that person—

(a) subject to the same liabilities and obligations as those to which the company was subject under the lease in respect of the property at the commencement of the winding up ; or

(b) if the Court thinks fit, subject only to the same liabilities and obligations as if the lease had been assigned to that person at that date ;

and in either event (if the case so requires) as if the lease had comprised only the property comprised in the vesting order, and any mortgagee or under-lessee declining to accept a vesting order upon such terms shall be excluded from all interest in and security upon the property, and, if there is no person claiming under the company who is willing to accept an order upon such terms, the Court shall have power to vest the estate and interest of the company in the property in any person liable, either personally or in a representative character, and either alone or jointly with the company, to perform the lessee's covenants in the lease, freed and discharged from all estates, incumbrances and interests created therein by the company.

(7) Any person injured by the operation of a disclaimer under this section shall be deemed to be a creditor of the company to the amount of the injury, and may accordingly prove the amount as a debt in the winding up.

Amendment.

This section has been introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. It is a reproduction of s. 267 of the English Act of 1929, which gives a liquidator power, corresponding to that of a trustee in bankruptcy, to disclaim land burdened with covenants, unprofitable contracts and property which is unsaleable.

Application must be heard.

The general law of insolvency applies to winding up of an insolvent company. A creditor in insolvency cannot in ordinary circumstances bring a suit against the official assignee. If he claims to be a creditor, he must file a proof of his debt with the official assignee. If his claim is rejected, then he has the right of asking the Judge sitting in insolvency to reverse the official assignee's decision. Consequently a customer of a bank putting in an application under this section, after an order for the compulsory winding up of the bank is passed, for rescinding a contract between himself and the bank and praying for damages, is entitled to have his application heard. If the Court then comes to the conclusion that the contract had already been rescinded, it would have no power to pass an order on the application, and the applicant would have to be relegated to the ordinary procedure provided by the Act for proving any debt in the winding up. The applicant cannot be relegated to the procedure of filing a suit unless he is heard [1].

Fraudulent preference.

231. (1) Any transfer, delivery of goods, payment, execution or other act relating to property which would, if made or done by or against an individual, be deemed in his insolvency a fraudulent preference, shall, if made or done by or against a company, be deemed, in the event of its being wound up, a fraudulent preference of its creditors, and be invalid accordingly.

(2) For the purposes of this section the presentation of a petition for winding up in the case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, and a resolution for winding up in the case of a voluntary winding up, shall be deemed to correspond with the act of insolvency in the case of an individual.

(3) Any transfer or assignment by a company of all its property to trustees for the benefit of all its creditors shall be void.

Fraudulent preference in insolvency.

Sub-s. (1). The law of fraudulent preference in the case of an individual in his insolvency is contained in s. 56 of the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act III of 1909, and s. 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act V of 1920. Both these sections say that (1) every transfer of property, every payment made, every obligation incurred and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money in favour of any creditor, with a view of giving that creditor a preference over the other creditors, shall, if such person is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof, be deemed fraudulent and void as against the official assignee (where the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act applies) or the receiver (where the Provincial Insolvency Act applies) ; (2) the sections shall not affect the rights of any person who in good faith and for valuable consideration has acquired a title through or under a creditor of the insolvent.

When the preference is fraudulent.

The preference is fraudulent when the substantial and dominant motive in the mind of the debtor (i.e., the company acting as a rule by its directors) was to prefer one creditor or particular creditors 1. It is essential that the payment should have been made with a view to give preference to the creditors to whom it is made. It is not sufficient that the creditor was in fact preferred. In each case the question to be considered is what was the dominant motive in making the payment or transfer 2. The Court must look at the motive, not at the result 3. "Now when you are going," observed Hanworth, M. R., "to set aside some conveyance as transfer of property or charge as a fraudulent preference, I think, it is plain that there must be evidence given affirmatively, not merely that there was in fact a preference, but that the preference was given with a view or object or goal of preferring" 4. As to the application of the Bankruptcy rules in cases of fraudulent preference see Trustee of Gonville v. Patent Caramel Co. 5. To prove the motive or intention evidence of other acts of preference in favour of other creditors committed at or about the same time is admissible 1. A debt although not presently payable can be set off against moneys owing to a company in liquidation. Such set off would not amount to a fraudulent preference 2.

Onus. In the case of an application for declaration that a particular transaction is a fraudulent preference, the onus is on those who claim to avoid the transaction to establish what the debtor really intended and that the real intention was to prefer. The onus is only discharged when the Court upon a review of all the circumstances is satisfied that the dominant intent to prefer is present 3. In this case the liquidator took out a summons for a declaration that by suffering a judicial proceeding to go by default (i.e., by withdrawing opposition to an application by a creditor to extend time for registration of an equitable mortgage under the provisions of the Companies Act, at a time when the company was in fact insolvent) a fraudulent preference had been committed by the company ; but the House of Lords held that upon the material available the inference that the intent was to prefer could not in law be properly drawn 3.

Fraudulent preference cannot be inferred where a creditor has been pressing for his debt and payment is made to avoid the pressure 4. But payment from a sense of moral obligation, or the issue of debentures to a director who had guaranteed the company's overdraft, is a fraudulent preference and invalid 5. A morally irreproachable transaction may be a "fraudulent preference" 6.

An assignment made in pursuance of an earlier agreement is not a fraudulent preference 7. If the debtor really thinks that the creditor's case is one of hardship, the preference is essentially an undue one 8.

The issue of debentures to outsiders in satisfaction of existing debts is not necessarily a fraudulent preference 9. But where a director takes debentures to secure an amount due to him, or for which he is a surety, and postpones registration until within three months before the winding up, the issue is a fraudulent preference 10.

After citing a number of cases Clauson, J. said in the undernoted case 11 : "The result of these authorities appears to me to be that a transfer by a debtor of substantially the whole of his property, whether by way of charge or by way of sale, will be an act of bankruptcy, if the necessary consequence of the transfer will be to defeat or delay his creditors, and with these authorities to guide me, I feel no difficulty in holding that the substitution in place of a going business and substantial business assets of (a) shares in a private company which has taken over the debtor's assets and liabilities together with (b) a right of action by the debtor against that company on its covenant to discharge his liabilities must necessarily have the result of delaying the creditors and cannot be treated as providing something which the creditors can reach just as easily and satisfactorilly as the assets which have been transferred. The fact that it was in the contemplation of all parties that further finance should be secured by placing a prior charge on the transferred assets, certainly makes the position no better for those who seek to argue that the creditors will not be delayed."

In order to ascertain whether there has been "fraudulent preference" under this section it must be seen whether the act is done by free will and volition. The preference should be voluntary and not brought on by pressure. So where an assignment is made in favour of a particular creditor under the impression that unless he is paid the company will go into liquidation, there cannot be said to be an overriding intention to prefer and the preference cannot be said to be fraudulent preference within the statute 1.

Where it can or cannot be pleaded.

Fraudulent preference cannot be pleaded by a debtor in defence to a suit filed against him in order to avoid his own obligation and not for the benefit of the creditors generally. It can be pleaded, if at all, only in the Insolvency Court (note 4, last page). A set off within three months of a winding up is fraudulent preference 2.

S. 37, Provincial Insolvency Act.

The object of s. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is to protect the interests of the whole body of creditors over whom an undue preference has been given in favour of other creditors. The same principle applies to a transaction which is sought to be impeached under this section, so that the disposition of a company's property cannot be impeached on the ground of fraudulent preference except on hehalf of the general body of the creditors. Therefore a person who is not a creditor of the company, but a debtor, cannot impeach a transfer made by the company, on the ground of undue preference 3.

The sale of an insolvent business to a private company for shares or debentures may be set aside as fraudulent 4, or may be treated as an act of bankruptcy 5.

Sub-s. (2). In the case of a winding up by or under supervision of the Court, the presentation of the petition for winding up, or the winding up resolution in the case of a voluntary winding up, corresponds to the act of bankruptcy of the individual. Every transfer &c., made within three months prior to the date of such petition or resolution will be deemed fraudulent 6.

Date of the act of insolvency.

Where a company which has gone into voluntary liquidation is ordered to be wound up by the Court, the date to which regard is to be had in ascertaining whether a fraudulent preference has been made is the date of the presentation of the petition, and not that of the extraordinary resolution 7. The date of the commencement of a winding up by the Court is the date of the presentation of the petition 8. A winding up continued under supervision of the Court dates from the resolution authorizing the winding up 9. But for the purpose of this section the date of the presentation of the petition is the material date. This is so in the case of a compulsory order, though there has been a previous voluntary winding up.

Sub-s. (3). A debenture by way of floating charge issued to a trustee for the benefit of all the company's creditors, is a conveyance and assignment within the meaning of this section if the value of the equity of redemption is merely nominal 1. An assignment by a company of all its property to a trustee for all its creditors is void 2.

Misfeasance.

Where any payment is void as a fraudulent preference of directors or other officers of the company, misfeasance proceedings under s. 235 may be taken to recover the amount paid 3. But there is no provision in the Act for a summary method of recovering money paid to a creditor by way of fraudulent preference 4.

Avoidance of certain attachments, executions, etc.

232. (1) Where any company is being wound up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, any attachment, distress or execution put in force without leave of the Court against the estate or effects or any sale held without leave of the Court of any of the properties of the company after the commencement of the winding up shall be void.

(2) Nothing in this section applies to proceedings by the [Crown.]

In sub-s. (1) the words in italics have been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. In sub-s. (2) the word within square brackets has been substituted for the word "Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

The effect of the amendment in sub-s. (1) is that not only attachment &c. but the sale of any of the properties of the company shall be void.

Date of commencement of the winding up.

Sub-s. (1). This section should be read with ss. 169 and 171 and is controlled by them 5. The date of the commencement of a winding up by the Court is the date of the presentation of the petition 6. A winding up continued under supervision of the Court dates from the resolution authorizing the winding up 7.

Stay of proceedings.

Upon a proper cause shown the Court having jurisdiction to wind up the company has power to make an order staying all proceedings against the company or the proceeding in the winding up 8. But where the company is not in liquidation, and a petition for winding up is not pending, the Court cannot, after ordinary meetings to be summoned and before approving the scheme of reconstruction, stay an execution on a judgment recovered before the order 9.

Sale after winding-up.

Where a company had gone into liquidation, a sale of its assets, after the winding up order, in execution of a decree passed before the date of that order without leave of the Court as provided in s. 171, was voidable at the instance of the liquidator, but would now be void. Want of knowledge of the winding up order does not validate such a sale[1]. But with the leave of the Court a distress or execution may be levied[2]. If the property was attached prior to the date of the application for winding up, the sale in continuation of the attachment was not invalid[3], but will be void now. Under this section the attachment &c. put in force without leave of the Court is void and not merely voidable.

See ss. 169, 171, 225 (2) and notes to those sections.

Applicability of the section.

This section is expressly limited to winding up either by the Court or subject to the supervision of the Court; so a voluntary liquidation cannot ipso facto have the effect of putting an end to an attachment already in force under a decree passed prior to the liquidation[4].

Sub-s. (2). This sub-section is not in the English Act. So Mr. Justice Page, while in the Calcutta High Court, held[5] that the effect of s. 171 is not to restrict any of the rights to recover debts due to the Crown which the Crown possesses in virtue of its prerogative. But the Patna High Court has held in a later case that it was not the intention of the legislature that the Court should be given discretion to permit proceedings which should have the effect of giving priority to any particular creditor, including the Crown, to which the latter is not otherwise entitled, this clause notwithstanding[6].

Effect of floating charge.

233. Where a company is being wound up a floating charge on the undertaking or property of the company created within three months of the commencement of the winding up shall, unless it is proved that the company immediately after the creation of the charge was solvent, be invalid except to the amount of any cash paid to the company at the time of, or subsequently to the creation of, and in consideration for, the charge, together with interest on that amount at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

Object of the section.

The object of this section is to prevent insolvent companies from creating floating charges to secure past debts or for moneys which do not go to swell their assets and become available for creditors[7].

What is floating charge.

As to what is a "floating charge" see notes to s. 109. A floating charge is a present charge though it does not finally attach or crystalize upon any specific property until the happening of some event which puts an end to the right of the company to deal with the property in the course of the business[8]. It is not a future security but a present one affecting all the assets of the company expressed to be included in it. On the other hand it is not a specific security, the holder being unable to affirm that the assets are specifically mortgaged to him. The assets are mortgaged in such a way that the mortgagor can deal with them without the concurrence of the mortgagee 1. See notes to ss. 109 and 230 (2) (b).

A floating security being only a charge on the assets for the time being, the company may, in the ordinary course of its business, unless it is otherwise agreed and until the security becomes fixed, sell, let, mortgage or otherwise deal with any of its assets and pay dividends out of the profits, just as if the floating charge has not been created 2.

Mortgage debentures usually contain a charge upon the undertaking of the company and all its property, real and personal, whether present or future, and may or may not give a charge upon uncalled capital. A specific charge is one that without more fastens on ascertained and definite property or property capable of being ascertained or defined ; whereas a floating charge is ambulatory and shifting in its nature, hovering over, and so to speak, floating with, the property which it is intended to affect, until some event occurs or some act is done, which causes it to settle and fasten on the subject of the charge within its reach and grasp 3.

Debenture containing floating security.

A debenture constituting a floating security over the undertaking and assets of a company does not specifically affect any particular assets until some event occurs or some act on the part of the mortgagee is done which causes the security to crystalize into a fixed security. A demand by the debenture-holder is not such an act, nor is a notice by him to the company's bankers claiming payment to him of the company's bank balance which has been attached by a judgment-creditor of the company under a garnishee order, for there is no equity in a debenture-holder, whose security is a floating charge, arising from his merely giving notice to seize a particular asset of the company 4.

Where floating charge is invalid.

Under this section a floating charge created within three months of winding up is invalid except to the amount of any cash paid at the time, unless the company's business is actually solvent at the time apart from the value of the fixed assets 5. Where there is a condition for payment of a sum at a time and place certain, the condition is not broken by non-payment at the time unless the demand for payment is made at the specified place 6.

Where moneys are advanced to secure the liability of a company under an antecedent independent guarantee, debentures giving a floating charge created by the company in favour of the guarantors who find money to pay off the debt owing to the company and guaranteed by them are, if the company goes into liquidation within three calendar months after the issue of the debentures, invalid unless it is proved that the company was solvent immediately after the creation of the charge 7. Where the debentures were issued to a bank to secure an existing loan account and a current account and the company went into liquidation within three months, the charge was held to be invalid as regards the loan account, although in the meantime various advances had been made and repaid on the current account 8.

Second floating charge.

Where a debenture trust-deed creating a general floating charge over all the undertaking and assets of the company, present and future, reserves power to the company in the ordinary course of its business to create specific charges over any of those assets, then although a second general floating charge over all the property comprised in the first charge but ranking pari passu with or in priority to that charge is under the general law incompatible with the first charge and ranks subject to it, yet there is no principle of law which forbids the creation of a second floating charge over part only of the assets ranking pari passu with or in priority to the earlier floating charge, so long as the latter floating charge is within the limits of the power reserved[1].

Meaning of "at the time of its creation."

A payment made on account in anticipation of creation of the charge and in reliance on a promise to execute it, although made some days before its execution, is made "at the time of its creation" within the meaning of this section[2].

Payment must be in cash.

The payment must be one in cash[3], otherwise it is not a good payment[4]. A debenture issued for a past debt is invalid when coming under the provisions of this section. Debentures, so far as given as security of the current account, are only valid to the extent of the amount owing by the company on that account at the date of the winding up[5]. But it is sufficient if in substance cash was paid[6]. In the last cited case the debenture was held not to have merely secured past debts but to have obtained for the company the advantage of being able to continue its business and Lord Hanworth M. R. pointed out: "The cases under this section must, each of them, depend upon their own facts. It is very difficult to lay down a precise test which shall bring a case within or without the section"[7].

Effect of the section.

The effect of this section is to invalidate a floating charge on the undertaking or property of the company created within three months of the commencement of the winding up, unless it is proved that the company was solvent immediately after the charge was created, but it does not altogether avoid the debenture[8]. Therefore where such a debenture has been redeemed by payment to the holder before the date of the winding up petition, the liquidator is not entitled to recover back the money so paid, though he may be at liberty to apply to set aside the debenture as being a fraudulent preference of the creditors whose debts it was given to secure or on any other ground[8]. As to the case of fraudulent preference under such circumstances see Columbian Fireproofing Co.[9], and F. & E. Stanton Ltd.[10].

General scheme of liquidation may be sanctioned.

234. (1) The liquidator may, with the sanction of the Court when the company is being wound up by the Court or subject to the supervision of the Court, and with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution of the company in the case of a voluntary winding up, do the following things or any of them :

(i) pay any classes of creditors in full ;

(ii) make any compromise or arrangement with creditors or persons claiming to be creditors or having or alleging themselves to have any claim, present or future, whereby the company may be rendered liable ;

(iii) compromise all calls and liabilities to calls, debts and liabilities capable of resulting in debts, and all claims, present or future, certain or contingent subsisting or supposed to subsist between the company and a contributory or alleged contributory or other debtor or person apprehending liability to the company, and all questions in any way relating to or affecting the assets or the winding up of the company, on such terms as may be agreed, and take any security for the discharge of any such call, debt, liability or claim, and give a complete discharge in respect thereof.

(2) The exercise by the liquidator of the powers of this section shall be subject to the control of the Court, and any creditor or contributory may apply to the Court with respect to any exercise or proposed exercise of any of these powers.

Court's discretion.

In this section the Court has been allowed a discretion to order payment in full to any class of creditors other than those referred to in s. 230 and when the discretion used by the Court is not capricious or in disregard of any legal principle, the High Court will be very slow to interfere with the exercise of the discretion 1.

Meaning of 'creditors.'

Sub-s. (1), cl. (i). No distinction is made between different kinds of creditors, the words "creditors" being general 2. Every person having a pecuniary claim against the company, whether actual or contingent, is a creditor. Secured creditors are included and also foreign and colonial creditors when their rights are in question 3. A creditor having a claim against the company for damages for breach of contract may be admitted as a creditor under this section as on the date of breach 4. The arrangement must be such as any man of business would reasonably approve 1, and it should be fair and reasonable as regards the different classes, if any 2.

Compromise.

Sub-s. (1), cl. (ii). A power to compromise rights presupposes some dispute about them or difficulties in enforcing them 3. A compromise however is good if both parties bona fide believe that there is a question in dispute, although it may not really be doubtful 4.

Notice.

Where there are several classes of creditors and contributories and the scheme does not affect the rights of some particular class, it is not the practice nor is it necessary, to send notice of any meeting to the members of such class; the dissent of a class which is not interested may be disregarded 5. It is however necessary for different classes of those affected by the scheme to have separate meetings 1. As to what is meant by a class for the purpose see Sovereign Assurance Co. v. Dodd 6. Where there are matured and unmatured policy-holders of an insurance company, a dissentient holder of matured policy is not bound by a resolution passed at a meeting to which all the policy-holders are summoned 6.

Meaning of "class."

The Court will sanction only a bona fide scheme.

The Court will not sanction a scheme when the required majority is made up of persons not acting bona fide in the interest of the class to which they belong as where their votes are given to get rid of their liability for amounts unpaid on their shares 7. In the absence of any improper motive there is nothing to prevent a creditor, who is also a shareholder, from voting 8. If the first meeting be unsatisfactory, a second meeting may be called 9. The Court can sanction only a bona fide scheme 10.

What schemes may be sanctioned.

Schemes have been sanctioned containing the following provisions: that the first mortgage debenture-holders are to be postponed to other debentures or charges about to be issued or created; that debenture-holders and other creditors of the old company are to accept shares in the new company in satisfaction of their debts; that debentures, the interest on which is to be paid only out of the profits of the company, are to be taken in satisfaction of debentures the interest on which is payable whether profits are made or not 11.

Court may impose condition.

The Court may, and often does, impose conditions on its sanction to a scheme. Where the scheme proposes that a company in difficulties is to make over its assets to a new company, the sanction may be refused, unless the scheme provides that the new company will undertake to obey the order of the Court as to any proceedings which it may think it right to have taken against officers of the old company 12. In one case the order on the assignment of the undertaking to a new company provided that the rights of the official receiver and liquidator to take misfeasance proceedings against officers of the transferor company should be preserved, and that the proceeds of any such proceeding should be held for the benefit of the shareholders of the transferor company[1]. In another case the Court gave its sanction on the undertaking of the liquidator to pay the unsecured creditors in full out of the assets in his hands, not to act upon the resolution as regarded underwriting, and to procure the cancellation of underwriting agreements, and provided that the shareholders who opposed should, if they elected within a prescribed time to dissent from the special resolution, be entitled to the rights of dissentient shareholders on an ordinary reconstruction[2]. A scheme once sanctioned by the Court is binding on all contributories[3].

Right of appeal.

Persons whose interests are affected by a scheme but who have not opposed it at a meeting or appeared at the hearing of the petition cannot appeal, without leave, from the order sanctioning the scheme[4].

Court's duty.

In an application under this section for sanction of a scheme the duty of the Court is not confined to ascertaining that all formalities have been complied with and to giving effect to the policy of the majority; but the Court must be satisfied that the proposals are not ultra vires, that they have been adopted in good faith and that they work no injustice to a dissentient minority. It is the duty of the Court to consider any criticisms that are made affecting the feasibility of the scheme, its fairness to all persons interested and its financial soundness. If alternative methods of dealing with the position are suggested, the Court will consider whether any of them may not be a more satisfactory solution[5]. The Court will not sanction a scheme merely because it has been approved by a large majority of the creditors. It will demand to be satisfied that the proposed arrangement is fair and equitable[6].

Reconstruction & reorganization.

Arrangements may be entered into for the purpose of reconstruction staying any pending winding up proceedings or distributing assets among creditors[7]. They may also involve the reduction or reorganization of the company's capital; but if so, the proceedings must comply with the other requirements of the Act[8].

Compromise.

The Court has no jurisdiction to compel a liquidator to consent to a compromise with a contributory or a creditor[9]. The compromise can only be made with the sanction of both the Court and the liquidator[9]. If a voluntary liquidator makes compromise of a claim by the company against a third party without obtaining the sanction of the company, the compromise is still binding on the company unless and until it is set aside[10]. A compromise under this section is binding only on those creditors who assent to it[11].

In the case of a winding up under supervision the voluntary liquidator may, unless the Court has otherwise directed, make a compromise without obtaining the Court's sanction[12]. Any creditor or contributory may appear either to support or to oppose an application for sanction of the Court. If the sanction is obtained by misrepresentation, it will be rescinded 1.

A general compromise of claims upon contributories as a class may be sanctioned 2, but not so as to be binding on an unwilling minority 3. A compromise with contributories on the A list does not release contributories on the B list 4, or affect the liability of other contributories on the A list 5.

Compromise between liquidator and company.

A compromise between a liquidator and a company is not binding upon the company until it is sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution of the company 6. But it has been held that a person entering into a compromise with a voluntary liquidator is not bound to see that the liquidator has got the necessary sanction. He is entitled to assume that the requisite authority has been obtained 7.

If a claim made against a company in voluntary liquidation is brought to the Court for adjudication under s. 215 (now s. 216), the liquidator cannot compromise without the Court's sanction 7.

General compromise.

The power to compromise extends to making a general compromise with creditors or contributories as a class, notwithstanding difference in position among them, and without enquiring closely into the means of each individual 8. A compromise entered into with a contributory on the A list does not discharge his transferor on the B list 9, and if the B contributory is called upon to pay, his transferee remains liable, notwithstanding the compromise, to indemnify him 10.

Whether an order to sanction a compromise be made under this section or s. 179, there must be such evidence before the Court as will enable it to exercise a judicial discretion in the matter 11.

Amendment. By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 in sub-s. (1) of this section the words in italics have been inserted, and sub-s. (3) has been omitted. See Introduction.

The sub-s. (3) was as follows :—

(3) The Indian Limitation Act, 1908, shall apply to an application under this section as if such application were a suit.

Limitation. There was a great conflict of decisions in different High Courts as to whether Arts. 36, 90, 115, 116 or 120 of the Limitation Act was applicable to an application under this section. This has been removed by the above amendment which provides a special limitation of three years from the date of the first appointment of a liquidator or of the misapplication, retainer, misfeasance or breach of trust whichever is longer. As the cases under the old sub-s. (3) have become obsolete they have been omitted.

This section creates no new or additional right or liability 1. The power of the Court is however restricted so as to prevent it from proceeding suo motu 2. An application under this section is a representative application filed on behalf of a class of persons and not to enforce any personal remedy or obtain any exclusive benefit 2.

Scope of section. Being a procedure section only, it provides a summary way of enforcing against directors or other officers a liability for breach of trust or other misconduct which previously might have been enforced by action 3. To bring a case within the section it is essential (1) that there has been a breach of trust, (2) that the breach has resulted in pecuniary loss to the company and (3) that the applicant has an interest in the result of the application[1]. Orders in a misfeasance proceeding under this section do not bar a suit against a third person whose wrongful act has caused loss to the company, for such proceedings are domestic proceedings between the company and its officers and the orders are passed in a special jurisdiction investing the Court with certain powers over the internal affairs of the company[2]. But where such proceedings have been taken against a director or other person mentioned in this section, subsequent suit against him for compensation for fraud or misfeasance is incompetent on the principle of res judicata[3].

This section contemplates a loss to the company before an order for delivery of the books of the company can be passed under it[4].

The section is not in terms meant to be applied for the purpose of enforcing claims due under contracts between the company and other persons, whether such persons happen to be directors or not. Therefore the section cannot be invoked for the purpose of enforcing payment for arrears of rent due by a director to the company[5]. It does not extend to all cases in which a company has a right of action against an officer, but is limited to cases where there has been something in the nature of a breach of duty by an officer as such which has caused pecuniary loss to the company[6]. "It has been settled that the misfeasance spoken of in that section is not misfeasance in the abstract, but misfeasance in the nature of a breach of trust resulting in a loss to the company[7]." It covers every misconduct by an officer of the company as such for which he might, apart from the section, have been sued[8]. Thus directors may be compelled to replace dividends paid out of capital[9], money applied for a purpose which the company cannot sanction[10], money improperly paid for underwriting commission[11] or money improperly paid to or received from a promoter[12]. The more serious acts of misfeasance are : the allotment of shares by the directors without having received the minimum subscription or the money due on application for shares ; obtaining by fraud the certificate for commencement of business ; commencing business although the directors had not paid the application and allotment moneys due on their shares[13]. For a wilful contravention of the provisions of s. 101 the directors will be liable to pay compensation to the company under s. 102 (2). Under s. 235 they are liable to discharge every creditor of the company as well as to return to the shareholders the money paid for their shares. Such payments would be a contribution to the assets of the company[14].

directors who have made a secret profit can be compelled to repay it 1. But directors who have been guilty only of an error of judgment are not liable 2, nor are they liable for negligence unless their neglect has been, in a business sense, culpable or gross 3. Even if the payment by the directors be ultra vires, they are not liable if they made the payment honestly, reasonably believing in a state of facts which would justify the payment (Kingsttln C. Mills Co., supra). "I cannot think that it can be expected of a director that he should be watching either the inferior officers of the bank or verifying the calculations of the auditor himself. The business of life could not go on if people could not trust those who were put into a position of trust for the express purpose of attending to details of management" 4. "I agree with what was said by Sir George Jessel in Hallmark's case 5 or by Chitty J. in in re Denham & Co. 6 that directors are not bound to examine entries in the company's books" 7. Where the general board of a bank delegates under the articles its powers of sanctioning loans to a committee of selected directors and the committee sanction a loan to a man of no means, the directors cannot be held guilty of misfeasance and made personally liable 8.

Liability.

In this connection the following observation of Sir Aurthur Wilson regarding the responsibility of the presidents and other directors should be remembered : "Attempts have repeatedly been made to render them personally liable on the ground that they have trusted regularly authorized officers of the company, that they have failed to detect, and been misled by, misrepresentation or concealment by such officers when there was no reason for doubting their fidelity. But such attempts have not been successful. It is sufficient to refer to the case of Dovey v. Cory (1901) A. C. 477 in which the subject was fully considered by the House of Lords" 9.

"Officers."

The following are officers within the mesning of this section : the secretary 10, the auditors 11 except a person casually employed by the directors to prepare a balance sheet 12, a solicitor when remunerated by a fixed salary 13 but not when employed in the ordinary way 14, and persons whose duty it is to invest the company's money and hold the investment 15, but not trustees of a debenture trust-deed or bankers 16. As to whether an auditor is an officer see however notes to s. 145.

The misfeasance summons has been constantly resorted to, e.g., where directors have used funds of the company for objects not sanctioned by the company's memorandum of association or paid dividends out of capital, or made secret profits or sold their property to the company.

What is a misfeasance.

It is a misfeasance for directors to qualify themselves by taking shares from the promoters holding them in trust for the latter and executing a blank transfer which the promoter may fill up and so disqualify the directors whenever they please, the result being that the directors are bound to act according to the will of the promoters 1. In such a case the directors will be liable for the amount of qualification and may be liable for acts done on account of their subservient position 1. It is wrong and improper for the directors to accept any gift whatever while the consideration or completion of a contract is still open 2.

Director's misfeasance.

Directors are responsible for the management of the company where by the articles of association the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent. They cannot divest themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent and abstaining from all enquiry. If the latter proves unfaithful under such circumstances, the liability is theirs just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful. In such a case the estate of the deceased director is liable on the ground that the misfeasance of a director is a breach of trust and not a mere personal default 3. The section gives a summary remedy only against such directors or other officers as have been personally guilty of some act of misfeasance and does not give the Court power to make an order against the directors en masse for all acts of misfeasance without any specific finding against the individuals who are actually responsible for the particular acts of misfeasance 4. Elaborate discussion as to the liability of directors and auditors under this section will be found in the case noted below 5, where the previous authorities have been considered.

Although the liability of a director depends more or less on the particular circumstances of each case and also the memorandum and articles, yet apart from this where the directors have been wilfully shutting their eyes to the acts of the agents or managing agents and recklessly sanctioning acts of such agents consciously and thereby aiding misfeasance, misapplication and falsification of balance sheets, and the state of affairs continues over a series of years, the directors are guilty of misconduct and are liable to pay compensation 6.

This section applies to the conduct of a director as such and anything done by him during the period of his directorship in his capacity as a debtor cannot be made a ground of liability under the section 7. A director is not trustee of the loans advanced by the company before his acceptance of office as such 8. Where in an application under this section the liquidator sought to establish the liability of an ex-director on the ground that he did not, at the time of his appointment as director, disclose his indebtedness to the company, it was held that it was the duty of the applicant to satisfy the Court that loss or damage resulted to the company from the alleged non-disclosure 8.

The insertion of names of persons as vendors when they have no real interest in the property sold being a device for enabling them to get fully paid up shares for their services in the promotion of the company, if such shares are issued to them it is a misfeasance on the part of the directors 1.

The mere fact that the directors of a company carrying on banking business allow advances to be made on the strength of a promise by the debtor to execute a mortgage instead of the mortgage itself, does not amount to an act of misfeasance on the part of the directors so as to make them personally liable to the extent of the amount of advances; but where the directors permit a depositor to make an overdraft and one of the directors who is a creditor of such depositor receives a portion of the amount represented by the overdraft in payment of the debt due to him by the depositor, such director cannot be allowed to retain the amount and is liable to refund it to the bank 2.

Directors & other officers.

De facto directors or managers are liable if loss has resulted to the company through their acts of misfeasance 3. The executors of a deceased officer are not officers and are not therefore liable to misfeasance proceedings 4; but the survivors of several directors are liable 5. The estate of a deceased director however remains liable for his breaches of trust 6 but not for his negligence 7.

"If the directors apply money of the company for purposes so outside its powers that the company could not sanction such application, they may be made personally liable as for a breach of trust. On the other hand, if they apply the money of the company or exercise any of its powers in a manner which is not ultra vires, then a strong and clear case of misfeasance must be made out to render them liable. Lord Hatherley, in Overend & Gurney Co. v. Gibb 8 intimates that in such a case their conduct must amount to crassa negligentia. In Mazeti's case 9 a definite test is applied, Lord Justice James said :—'A director should not be held liable upon any very strict rules which were laid down by the Court of Chancery to make unfortunate trustees liable; directors are not to be made liable on those strict rules which have been applied to trustees'. And he intimates that the negligence for which a director would be held liable must be such as would make a managing director of a business liable to his employers. Lord Justice Brett said, the director must be 'guilty of such negligence as would make him liable in an action. Mere imprudence is not such negligence. Want of judgment is not. It must be such negligence as would make a man liable in point of law'; and with this Lord Justice Cotton concurs. This is the law" 10.

accounts induced the shareholders to declare a larger dividend, it was held that the managing director was guilty under s. 409 I.P.C., because being entrusted with the property of the bank, he dishonestly used and disposed of some of the property contrary to the bank's articles of association, causing the shareholders to declare a dividend larger than what the profits warranted [1]. If a balance-sheet falsely states the condition of the company, it is a false balance-sheet, though it follows the accounts as shown in the books of the company [2].

A managing director occupies the position of a trustee for the company and he is bound to exercise his powers for the benefit of the company and for that alone. He cannot in law withdraw from the till of the company a sum of money and mix it with money belonging to himself. In such a case he is guilty of breach of trust and misfeasance [3]. An order under this section should however be made only on a clear case being made out [3]. The fact that the act was not concealed from the auditors does not obviate the guilt, nor can it be ratified by the board of directors [3]. The funds of the company cannot be used by the directors for paying their own litigation costs, although these would not have been incurred if they had not been directors [4]. But the costs of prosecution for libel on the company, if properly incurred, must be paid by the company [5]. A director is, no doubt, liable to the company for any unauthorized profits made by virtue of his office [6]. But if he is acting in the interest of the company, he is not liable merely because he is also promoting his own interest [7].

If a director has received moneys of the company which it was ultra vires for it to pay, he can be made to repay it at the instance of the liquidator or creditors, although all the shareholders knew and approved of the payment [8]. But it is otherwise if the payment was intra vires [9]. Where directors receive benefits from promoters or vendors, complete disclosure of the facts in the prospectus will protect the former from liability to repay [10]. A partial and misleading disclosure however will not suffice [11].

Error of judgment.

Where money is lost through an error of judgment on the part of the directors, it cannot be recovered either under this section or by action [12]. A director is not bound to bring any special qualification to his office or to have knowledge of the particular class of business he controls; but if he has knowledge he must use it to the best of his ability [13]. A release given in general terms by a company to a director will not be a protection [14]; but articles declaring that the director shall be liable only in the case of dishonesty is a protection against a claim for negligence [13]. But see s. 86C. A director is not bound to examine entries in the books and is entitled to rely on accounts kept and audited by duly authorized officers[1].

A director cannot set off a debt due to him from the company against his liability to pay damages for misfeasance[2].

Payment of dividend.

Distribution of moneys to the shareholders in the shape of dividends or profits when in fact no profits are being earned, is misapplication of the company's funds. When the directors blindly trust a dishonest manager and allow themselves to be in utter ignorance of the affairs of the company, they cannot escape liability although they are not dishonest[3]. So the auditors who, if they had done their dury, would readily have discovered the true state of affairs, are similarly liable[3]. But where a director in assenting to the payment of dividends out of capital and to advances on improper security honestly relied on the judgment, information and advice of the chairman and general manager by whose statements he was misled and whose integrity, skill and competence he had no reason for suspecting, it was held by the House of Lords that he was not negligent of his duties as director and was not liable on the winding up[4].

Promoters.

A misfeasance summons may be brought against promoters in respect of undisclosed profits received by them[5]. As to who is or who is not a promoter see notes to s. 100 ante and Thiruvenkatachariar v. Velu Mudaliar[6]. Such summons may be brought against directors where they have received money from promoters in pursuance of an agreement to indemnify against loss on qualification shares[7], or where they have received money from vendors to the company to pay for qualification shares[8]. They are also liable for presents or remuneration improperly received out of the assets of the company[9]. As to travelling expenses taken by directors see the case noted below[10]. Directors and promoters, who do not disclose the fact that they are vendors of property, are guilty of a breach of duty and the company has a remedy against them even on a misfeasance summons[11]. In all cases in which a director becomes entitled to profits in fraud of the company, the latter can recover the amount of the commission or bribe not only from the director but also from the person giving the bribe[12]. The principle that a person in a fiduciary position must not make secret profits is based not on actual fraud but on motives of public policy[13]. Directors of an insolvent company cannot use their powers to benefit themselves in view of an approaching winding up[14].

A misfeasance summons is the proper mode of procedure where shares or debentures have been improperly issued to directors at a discount or undervalue 1, or where directors have improperly paid dividends out of capital 2, or where they have knowingly allotted shares to infants 3, or where they have improperly received director's fees 4, or where they have generally acted ultra vires 5. But where the misfeasance is an act which is not ultra vires or dishonest, directors are not liable unless it is shown that they did not really exercise their judgment 6. If they act within their powers with such care as is reasonable to be expected from them, they are not liable 7. Where however the act is ultra vires, the directors, although they have acted quite honestly, are liable to replace the moneys which have been misapplied 8 unless they have acted after making proper enquiries and exercising due care and on reasonable grounds in which case they are not liable even for paying dividends out of capital 9, or improperly investing or paying away the company's money 10, or where they have improperly received commission 11 or where an act benefiting the directors is a fraudulent preference 12. Facts which may show imprudence in the exercise of powers, undoubtedly conferred upon directors, will not subject them to personal responsibility. The imprudence must be so great and manifest as to amount to crassa negligentia 13.

Where not ultra vires.

Where the alleged misfeasance consists of an act which is not ultra vires the company, and not fraudulent or dishonest, the directors are not liable unless it be shown that they did not really exercise their discretion and judgment as such directors, and the omission to do so resulted in loss or damage to the company 14.

Where circumstances require investigation.

Where a misfeasance summons against a director was dismissed with costs, the Court intimated in a case 15, that as there were many circumstances requiring investigation, the liquidator had only done his duty in bringing the matter before the Court and that no difficulty should be placed in the way of his recouping himself out of the assets.

Liquidator's misfeasance.

Where the liquidator allows the company to be dissolved before its debts have been paid, he commits a breach of his statutory duty and is liable in damages to the creditors 16. Where assets have been distributed without regard to a creditor's claim, he may, even after dissolution of the company, obtain in an action damages against the liquidator for breach of his duty 17. In such a case he may be brought to account on a misfeasance summons if the creditor is the Crown 18. But generally speaking where the company has been dissolved, the remedy by misfeasance application no longer exists 17. The liquidator in a voluntary winding up is not, apart from negligence, liable for wrongly admitting a claim by an alleged creditor ; but where the liquidator does not fulfil his duty of properly investigating the claim, he is liable for misfeasance especially where the claim is an invalid one 1.

The question as to the liability of a liquidator who without negligence allowed proof of a person having no legal claim was left open by the Court of Appeal in England in Windsor Steam Coal Co. 2. A high standard of care and diligence is however required from a liquidator in a voluntary winding up. It is his duty to investigate the validity of the proofs, and where this duty is not discharged the liquidator cannot escape liability. The articles of a company not being a contract between the company and its liquidator do not give protection to liquidators, but this section gives a wide discretion to the Court 3. Following Sunlight I. G. Lamp, Ltd. 4 Maugham, J. in the last cited case held that the liquidator should be ordered to contribute, by way of compensation, only such a sum as would enable all creditors to be paid in full with interest at 5 p. c. The position of a liquidator examining a proof for admission or rejection is the same as that of a trustee in bankruptcy as decided in In re Van Laun 5.

Auditor's misfeasance.

An auditor who is duly appointed by a general meeting and not casually called in as occasion may require is an officer of the company within the meaning of this section 6. A misfeasance summons is a proper remedy when an auditor by his neglect of duty has caused property of the company to be improperly paid away, as for instance, in dividends 7. See notes to s. 144.

Auditor whether officer or not.

The question however whether the auditors are to be considered as officers of the company must be decided with reference to each company by a consideration of the particular facts and especially by reference to the articles of association 8. Where a person has been appointed auditor and in pursuance thereof does the work of audit, he cannot be heard to say that his appointment was invalid or irregular 9. As to whether an auditor is an officer within the meaning of a particular clause in the articles of association see notes to s. 144.

Where liable.

If the auditor fails in his duty of examining the books of the company carefully and satisfying himself that they show the true financial position, the auditors will be jointly and severally liable with those who are responsible for the management of the company, although he is not guilty of any dishonesty 10.

Bankers, solicitors & brokers.

Neither bankers nor solicitors are officers of a company within the meaning of this section 11, but if the solicitor has other duties and occupy a different position from that of a purely legal adviser, he may come within the section 12. In Liberator P. B. B. Society 12 Cave J. observed : "It seems to me that merely because he was appointed solicitor to the society, without more, the solicitor does not become an officer of the society any more than it has been held that a banker does, if he is appointed banker to the society. All these persons render services to the society, but they cannot be said to be in the employment of the society so as to make them officers." There is no difference in the position of a broker to a company whose duties are confined to dealing with its shares and the position of its banker who has to deal with the moneys of the company. Therefore a broker is not an officer of the company and does not come under this section 1.

Managing agents.

Where a firm is entrusted with the management of a company, it cannot escape liability for misfeasance or non-feasance merely by calling itself "managing agents" instead of "managers" 2.

Compensation must be in the nature of damages.

The compensation which under this section may be assessed against a defaulting director or other officer of a company is of the nature of damages. It is therefore necessary that the loss of the company in respect of which compensation is asked for should be direct and not a remote and more or less speculative consequence of the misfeasance 2.

Practice.

The practice of allowing witnesses on the trial of misfeasance summonses to give their evidence in chief by affidavits prepared or settled for them by others in cases where real disputes of facts exist or where various charges of misfeasance or breaches of trust are involved, is open to grave objection 3. A misfeasance summons ought to be set down in the witness list as soon as the points of claim, defence and reply have been delivered 4.

Costs.

If the official receiver or liquidator institutes proceedings for misfeasance, the Court has jurisdiction to order him personally to pay costs 5.

Jurisdiction.

It seems that the Court has no jurisdiction to set aside a contract between the company and a director or promoter, and even if it has, such jurisdiction will not be ordinarily exercised 6. The jurisdiction under this section is discretionary and where all the creditors are satisfied and a large majority of the contributorises are prepared to waive any claim against the directors for an alleged secret profit, the Court may in its discretion refuse relief under this section in respect of the claim 7.

Contributory's remedy.

The section is not confined to claims the successful assertion of which will increase the assets of the company, and an individual contributory, who has suffered damage by the act of the liquidator, may bring an action against the liquidator 8.

Moneys recovered under this section for misfeasance may be assets for debenture-holders to whom the company has issued debentures charging all its undertakings, present and future 9.

against a claim under this section which provides a summary remedy 1, he is entitled to set off the amount due to him when a regular suit is brought by the company in respect of the claim 2.

Choses in action.

Claims in respect of misfeasance being choses in action pass under an assignment of all its assets, property and effects 3. They may be sold 3.

Judicial proceedings.

An application under this section is in the nature of a plaint and the proceedings are judicial proceedings; but the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are inapplicable, because express provisions for its contents and the formalities connected therewith are provided for by the Act and the rules made thereunder 4. As to the contents of such a petition see the last cited case and the Rules framed by the different High Courts. Proceedings under the Act are proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 141 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and a liquidation Court in which a misfeasance proceeding is pending can, in a proper case, make an order for attachment before judgment under Or. 38, R. 5, C. P. C. 5.

Joint trial.

Where in proceedings under this section against certain persons, the matters alleged against some of them are entirely different from those which are the subject matter of the investigation against others, the claims against all cannot be tried jointly on principles under O. 2, r. 6, C. P. C. 4.

Representative.

A representative or an executor of a promoter, director and such other person cannot be brought within the purview of this section. The liquidator may however bring a regular suit against such a representative 6.

Effect of death.

In the case of death of a director his estate remains liable for any breach of trust he has committed 7, but not for negligence 8, trespass or deceit 10 unless his estate has benefited by the fraud 9. Where a director has been guilty of misconduct in sanctioning a loan fraudulently and in violation of the rules, a suit against him by the company for compensation is not one merely for tort but is one for breach of fiduciary obligation towards the company. Even if it is viewed as a suit for tort, the right to sue survives on his death against his legal representatives by the application of s. 306 of the Succession Act 10.

Liability of directors.

If the directors, without the knowledge of the shareholders, vote and pay themselves out of the company's funds commissions on purchases and sales, and make no mention of it in their report and balance-sheet, they are liable to repay the amount with interest 11. Where the directors permitted the company to commence business inspite of their knowledge that permission to do so had been obtained owing to false declaration and that the directors had not paid what was due in respect of their respective shares and consequently the company suffered loss, the directors were liable to make repayment under this section. The directors must be deemed to know the law 1.

Co-directors.

A director is liable for the acts of his co-directors, if knowing that they intend to commit a breach of trust he does not, by applying for injunction or otherwise, prevent it 2. But a director, who has in fact retired, is not liable for subsequent acts or statements 3. Nor is an innocent director liable for the fraud of his co-directors in issuing to the shareholders false and fraudulent reports and balance-sheets, if the books and accounts of the company have been kept and audited by duly appointed and responsible officers and he has no ground for suspecting fraud. Consequently if such a director has received dividends declared and paid in pursuance of such reports and balance-sheets, such dividends having been in fact payments of capital, he cannot be called upon to repay the dividends so paid 4.

But a director, who knowing the improper character of a transaction contents himself with protesting only, stands in no better position than his fellow directors 5. He cannot escape liability by professing ignorance of a state of affairs which he might have learnt from the books of the company 6. Where the debtor does not pay his debt, and the loan is tainted with dishonesty of the directors, they must be held responsible for the debt which is found to be bad 7. The question whether a particular debt is worth pursuing by suit or in execution is however largely a matter of discretion in the hands of business men, and the Court cannot hold managers responsible for every unrecovered debt merely because steps by way of suit were not taken 8.

Contribution.

A director can maintain a suit for contribution against his co-directors in respect of damages paid under this section and the liability to contribute survives in the case of death of a co-director 9. But where two directors join in signing a cheque whereby a part of the company's funds is used for a purpose not authorized by the articles and one of the directors is subsequently compelled to replace the money so used, he cannot recover contribution from the other if the money has been applied for the sole benefit of the director claiming contribution even if the other director has assented to its being so used 10.

Suit.

A misfeasance proceeding under this section, is merely an examination by the Court into the conduct of an officer of the company, and as a result of that examination the Court may order the officer to restore the money or the property of the company as the Court may think just. Such proceedings cannot be said in any way to be a "suit or other legal proceeding" within the meaning of s. 280. Hence on this ground as well as on the ground of public policy an official liquidator who files a misfeasance summons cannot be required to furnish security for costs 11.

Onus. The onus is on the pliantiff to prove misfeasance [1]. As to the measure of damages see the case noted below [2].

Amendment of petition. An order allowing an amendment of a petition made under this section entirely altering its character by introducing grave questions of fraud after a period of two and a half years has been held to be highly unjudicial [3].

As to the power of the Court to grant relief to a director who has been guilty of negligence or breach of trust see s. 281.

Penalty for falsification of books. 236. If any director, manager, officer or contributory of any company being wound up destroys, mutilates, alters or falsifies or fraudulently secretes any books, papers or securities, or makes, or is privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any register book of account or document belonging to the company with intent to defraud or deceive any person, he shall be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

It is not correct to hold that charges of falsification of accounts or forgery against the persons mentioned in this section can only be tried under this section. A penal enactment in a special Act is no bar to a prosecution under the Penal Code [4].

Prosecution of delinquent directors. 237. (1) If it appears to the Court in the course of a winding up by, or subject to the supervision of, the Court that any past or present director, manager or other officer, or any member, of the company has been guilty of any offence in relation to the company for which he is criminally liable, the Court may, either on the application of any person interested in the winding up or of its own motion, direct the liquidator either himself to prosecute the offender or to refer the matter to the registrar.

(5) If it appears to the Court in the course of a voluntary winding up that any past or present director, manager or other officer, or any member, of the company has been guilty as aforesaid, and that no report with respect to the matter has been made by the liquidator to the registrar, the Court may, on the application of any person interested in the winding up or of its own motion, direct the liquidator to make such a report, and on a report being made accordingly, the provisions of this section shall have effect as though the report has been made in pursuance of the provisions of sub-section (2).

(8) If any person fails or neglects to give assistance in manner required by [sub-section (7)], the Court may, on the application of the registrar, direct that person to comply with the requirements of the said sub-section, and where any such application is made with respect to a liquidator, the Court may, unless it appears that the failure or neglect to comply was due to the liquidator not having in his hands sufficient assets of the company to enable him so to do, direct that the costs of the application shall be borne by the liquidator personally.

Amendments.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, this section has been substituted for the original s. 237. It reproduces s. 277 of the English Act of 1929. For its effect see Introduction. In sub-s. (3) the words "Central Government" within square brackets have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into force on 1st April, 1937. But with effect from 1st April, 1938 the Central Government has entrusted to Provincial Governments its functions under this section—see Gazette of India dated 26th March, 1938, Part I, p. 440. The original s. 237 was as follows :—

Prosecution of delinquent directors, etc.

237. (1) If it appears to the Court in the course of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court that any past or present director, manager, officer or member of the company has been guilty of any offence in relation to the company for which he is criminally responsible, the Court may, on the application of any person interested in the winding up, or of its own motion, direct the official liquidator or the liquidator (as the case may be) to prosecute for the offence, and may order the costs and expenses to be paid out of the assets of the company.

(2) If it appears to the liquidator in the course of a voluntary winding up that any past or present director, manager, officer or member of the company has been guilty of any offence in relation to the company for which he is criminally responsible, the liquidator, with the previous sanction of the Court, may prosecute the offender, and all expenses properly incurred by him in the prosecution shall be payable out of the assets of the company in priority to all other liabilities.

By the amending Act II of 1938 which received the assent of the Governor General on 26th February, 1938 the following further amendments have been made in this section, namely : In sub-s. (6) after the words "institute proceedings" the words "and it shall be the duty of the liquidator and every officer and agent of the company past and present (other than the defendant in the proceedings) to give him all assistance in connection with the prosecution which he is reasonably able to give" have been omitted; after the proviso the following paragraph has been omitted : "For the purposes of this sub-section, the expression 'agent' in relation to a company shall be deemed to include any banker or legal adviser of the company and any person employed by the company as auditor, whether that person is or is not an officer of the company" ; after sub-s. (6) the new sub-section 7 within square brackets has been inserted; and the former sub-s. (7) has been re-numbered as sub-s. (8) and in that sub-section so re-numbered the words and figure within square brackets have been substituted for the words and figure "sub-section (6)."

What the Court will consider.

In order to determine whether leave ought to be given to institute criminal proceedings under this section and whether the costs of the prosecution ought to be paid out of the assets of the company, the Court will consider whether it is a case in which an honest and upright man, desiring as a good citizen of doing his duty by the State, would feel that he ought, at his own expense, to institute a prosecution 1.

The law in this respect was laid down by Buckley J. in London and Globe Finance Corpn. [1903] 1 Ch. 728 in the following words : "I have next to consider upon what principles I ought to exercise the power given me by s. 162 of the Companies Act, 1862, to direct the official receiver to institute and conduct a prosecution at the expense of the assets. It is obvious that no one legitimately can or ought to institute a criminal prosecution with a view to his personal profit. Neither should a prosecution be instituted from motives of vengeance against the offender. The motives of every prosecution ought to be to inflict punishment upon the criminal for the proper enforcement of the law and for the advantage of the State, and with a view to deter others from doing the like. From the prosecution, no doubt, there may arise benefit to the prosecutor in the sense that if he be a person interested in commerce, it may be to his advantage to enforce commercial morality. But except in this sense the personal advantage of the prosecutor is not to be regarded"—at p . 733.

Then again : "Next affirmatively, what are the considerations which ought to govern it ? If the person at whose expense the prosecution would be instituted were not a class but were a single person, and that person were an honest and upright man desirous as a good citizen, of doing his duty by the State, are the circumstances such as in discharge of that duty he would feel that he ought at his own expense and to his own loss to institute a prosecution ? Not in every case in which a criminal offence has been committed would such an one think it his duty to prosecute. The question to be answered : Would he in the case think his duty to the State required him to prosecute ? If that question be answered in the affirmative, then upon principle I think that the Court ought to direct a prosecution. Further I think that the Court can, and in a proper case ought to, direct a prosecution without the assent, and even notwithstanding the dissent, of the class or many of the class at whose expense the prosecution would be instituted. It is noticeable that the section provides that the Court may act 'of its own motion.' No principle suggests itself to me upon which the Court ought 'of its own motion' to direct a prosecution other than that above indicated'—at pp. 734-35.

Jurisdiction unfettered.

The jurisdiction of directing a prosecution of directors or officers for offences in relation to the company for which they are criminally responsible is unfettered and may be exercised by the Court when it is satisfied that a prima facie case in support of the application has been made out, without allowing the application to stand over to enable evidence to be adduced in opposition [1].

The offences specially dealt with in regard to companies are those referred to in ss. 236 and 282. The Act however nowhere lays down that there can be no prosecution on a criminal charge otherwise than upon a direction by the company Judge [2].

A de facto manager is liable to be punished for publishing false statements with intent to deceive or defraud [3].

An appeal lies from an order under this section [4]. See notes to s. 202.

Penalty for false evidence.

238. If any person, upon any examination upon oath authorised under this Act, or in any affidavit, deposition or solemn affirmation, in or about the winding up of any company under this Act, or otherwise in or Disposal of documents of company.

242. (1) When a company has been wound up and is about to be dissolved, the documents of the company and of the liquidators may be disposed of as follows (that is to say) :—

(a) in the case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, in such way as the Court directs ;

(b) in the case of a voluntary winding up, in such way as the company by extraordinary resolution directs.

(2) After three years from the dissolution of the company, no responsibility shall rest on the company or the liquidators, or any person to whom the custody of the documents has been committed, by reason of the same not being forthcoming to any person claiming to be interested therein.

In sub-sec. (2) it is "five years" in the English Act.

Voluntary winding up.

In the case below 1, when the company had been dissolved after a voluntary winding up, the liquidator was ordered to produce documents upon the footing that they were under his absolute control.

Power of Court to declare dissolution of company void.

243. (1) Where a company has been dissolved, the Court may at any time within two years of the date of the dissolution, on an application being made for the purpose by the liquidator of the company or by any other person who appears to the Court to be interested, make an order, upon such terms as the Court thinks fit, declaring the dissolution to have been void, and thereupon such proceedings may be taken as might have been taken if the company had not been dissolved.

(2) It shall be the duty of the person on whose application the order was made, within twenty-one days after the making of the order, to file with the registrar certified copy of the order, and if that person fails so to do, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

Scope.

It appears that a dissolution made under cl. (d), sub-s. (1) of s. 154 ante cannot be declared void by virtue of the present section as s. 154 occurs in Part IV whereas this section occurs in Part V 2.

Upon the application within two years of the liquidator or any interested person the Court can declare the dissolution void and stay all proceedings 3.

Fraud.

An order of dissolution cannot be set asside on the ground of fraud unless fraud is alleged and proved. By whatever procedure it is sought to overthrow a judgment on the ground of fraud, the fraud must be definitely alleged and its particulars unequivocably stated 1. Fraud like any other charge of a criminal offence, whether made in civil or criminal proceedings, must be established beyond reasonable doubt. A finding as to fraud cannot be based on suspicion and conjecture 2.

Rights prior to dissolution.

Where a company is revived by order of the Court after dissolution, its rights prior to the dissolution are not affected 3. As to who are the persons interested see the case noted below 4.

After dissolution.

The dissolution does not debar the liquidator from taking action in respect of assets realized after the dissolution 5. Where the liquidator within two years from its dissolution presented a petition in which he craved the Court to declare the dissolution void, so as to enable him to grant a title to a certain property which belonged to the company and had been sold subsequent to the dissolution, the decree so craved was granted 6.

Effect of declaration.

An order under this section declaring the dissolution of a company to have been void does not affect the validity of proceedings taken during the interval between the dissolution and its avoidance 7. But where the landlord of the company re-enters and grants lease to another person of the demised property, the lease is not valid if subsequently the Court declares the resolution for winding up as void 8.

Bona vacantia.

Where the assets might be bona vacantia, upon an application on the ground that there were undistributed assets of the dissolved company, the Court held that the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown should be served 9.

For the form of an order under this section see the case noted below 10.

Information as to pending liquidations.

244. (1) Where a company is being wound up, if the winding up is not concluded within one year after its commencement, the liquidator shall, once in each year and at intervals of not more than twelve months, until the winding up is concluded, file in Court or with the registrar, as the case may be, a statement in the prescribed form and containing the prescribed particulars with respect to the proceedings in and position of the liquidation.

(2) Any person stating himself in writing to be a creditor or contributory of the company shall be entitled, by himself or by his agent, at all reasonable times, on payment of the prescribed fee, to inspect the statement, and to receive a copy

Amendment. By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, in sub-s. (1) for the words "at such intervals as may be prescribed" after the words "the liquidator shall", the words "once in each year and at intervals of not more than twelves months," and after the words "is concluded" for the words "file with the registrar" the words "file in Court or with the registrar, as the case may be" have been substituted. By the same Act the new sub-s. (4) has been added.

The provisions of this section apply whether the company is being wound up by or under the supervision of the Court or voluntarily 1.

Payment of liquidator into bank.

244A. (1) Every liquidator of a company which is being wound up by the Court shall, in such manner and at such times as may be prescribed, pay the money received by him into a scheduled bank as defined in clause (e) of section 2 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 :

Provided that if the Court is satisfied that for the purpose of carrying on the business of the company or of obtaining advances or for any other reason it is for the advantage of the creditors or contributories that the liquidator should have an account with any other bank, the Court may authorise the liquidator to make his payments into or out of such other bank as the Court may select and thereupon those payments shall be made in the prescribed manner.

(2) If any such liquidator at any time retains for more than ten days a sum exceeding five hundred rupees or such other amount as the Court may in any particular case authorise him to retain, then, unless he explains the retention to the satisfaction of the Court, he shall pay interest on the amount so retained in excess at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and shall be liable to disallowance of all or such part of his remuneration as the Court may think just and to be removed from his office by the Court and shall be liable to pay any expenses occasioned by reason of his default.

Unclaimed dividends and undistributed assets to be paid to Companies Liquidation Account.

"244B. (1) Where any company is being wound up, if the liquidator has in his hands or under his control any money of the company representing unclaimed dividends payable to any creditor or undistributed assets refundable to any contributory which have remained unclaimed or undistributed for six months after the date on which they became payable or refundable, the liquidator shall forthwith pay the said money into the Reserve Bank of India to the credit of the Central Government in an account to be called the Companies Liquidation Account, and the liquidator shall, on the dissolution of the company, similarly pay into the said account any money representing unclaimed dividends or undistributed assets in his hands at the date of dissolution.

(2) The liquidator shall, when making any payment referred to in sub-section (1), furnish to such officer as the Central Government may appoint in this behalf a statement in the prescribed form setting forth in respect of all sums included in such payment the nature of the sums, the names and last known addresses of the persons entitled to participate therein, the amount to which each is entitled and the nature of his claim thereto, and such other particulars as may be prescribed.

(3) The receipt of the Reserve Bank of India for any money paid to it under sub-section (1) shall be an effectual discharge of the liquidator in respect thereof.

(4) Where the company is being wound up by the Court, the liquidator shall make the payments referred to in sub-section (1) by transfer from the special banking account referred to in sub-section (3) of section 244A, and where the company is wound up voluntarily, or subject to the supervision of the Court, the liquidator shall, when filing a statement in pursuance of sub-section (1) of section 244, indicate the sum of money which is payable to the Reserve Bank of India under sub-section (1) which he has had in his hands or under his control during the six months preceding the date to which the said statement is brought down, and shall, within fourteen days of the date of filing the said statement, pay that sum into the Companies Liquidation Account.

(5) Any person claiming to be entitled to any money paid into the Companies Liquidation Account in pursuance of this section may apply to the Court for an order for payment thereof, and the Court, if satisfied that the person claiming is entitled, may make an order for the payment to that person of the sum due :

Provided that before making such order the Court shall cause a notice to be served on such officer as the Central Government may appoint in this behalf calling on the officer to show cause within one month from the date of the service of the notice why the order should not be made.

(6) Any money paid into the Companies Liquidation Account in pursuance of this section, which remains unclaimed thereafter for a period of fifteen years, shall be transferred to the general revenue account of the Central Government ; but any claim preferred under sub-section (5) to any money so transferred shall be allowable as if such transfer had not been made, the order for payment on such claim being treated as an order for refund of revenue.

(7) Any liquidator retaining any money which should have been paid by him into the Companies Liquidation Account under this section shall pay interest on the amount retained at the rate of twenty per cent. per annum and shall also be liable to pay any expenses occasioned by reason of his default, and, where the winding up is by or under the supervision of the Court, he shall also be liable to disallowance of all or such part of his remuneration as the Court may think just and to be removed from his office by the Court.

(8) Nothing in this section shall apply in relation to companies with objects confined to a single Province which are not trading corporations."

Amendment. This section has been introduced by the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act XXXVI of 1940. It came into force on 5th April, 1941, vide Notification No. 24 (48)—Tr. (C. L.) 38 (i) in Part I p. 474 of the Gazette of India, dated 5th April, 1941.

Amendment. In sub-s. (1) the words within square brackets have been substituted for the words "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Rules.

246. (1) The High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Act and with the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, concerning the mode of proceedings to be had for winding up a company in such Court and in the Courts subordinate thereto, and for voluntary winding up (both members and creditors), for the holding of meetings of creditors and members in connection with proceedings under section 153 of this Act, and for giving effect to the provisions hereinbefore contained as to the reduction of the capital and the sub-divisions of the shares of a company and generally for all applications to be made to the Court under the provisions of this Act, and shall make rules providing for all matters relating to the winding up of companies which, by this Act, are to be prescribed.

Power of High Court to make rules.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the High Court may by such rules enable or require all or any of the powers and duties conferred and imposed on the Court by this Act, in respect of the matters following, to be exercised or performed by the official liquidator, and subject to the control of the Court, that is to say, the powers and duties of the Court in respect of—

(a) holding and conducting meetings to ascertain the wishes of creditors and contributories ;

(b) settling lists of contributories and rectifying the register of members where required, and collecting and applying the assets ;

(c) requiring delivery of property or documents to the liquidator ;

(d) making calls ;

(e) fixing a time within which debts and claims must be proved :

Provided that the official liquidator shall not, without the special leave of the Court, rectify the register of members, and shall not make any call without the special leave of the Court.

The words at the end of sub-s. (1) "and shall make rules.........prescribed" were inserted by Act 11 of 1915, and the words in italics in the same sub-section have been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. See Introduction.

High Court's power to make rules.

The power of the High Court of making rules under this section was limited to making rules concerning the mode of proceeding to be had for winding up a company and for giving effect to the provisions as to reduction of capital and sub-division of shares. For the purpose of regulating the costs in other proceedings in company matters recourse must be had to rules framed by the High Court under the rule-making powers under the High Courts Act 1. But now by the amendment power has been given to make rules generally for all applications under this Act.

Removal of defunct Companies from Register.

Registrar may strike defunct company off register.

247. (1) Where the registrar has reasonable cause to believe that a company is not carrying on business or in operation, he shall send to the company by post a letter inquiring whether the company is carrying on business or in operation.

(2) If the registrar does not within one month of sending the letter receive any answer thereto, he shall within fourteen days after the expiration of the month send to the company by post a registered letter referring to the first letter, and stating that no answer thereto has been received and that, if an answer is not received to the second letter within one month from the date thereof, a notice will be published in the [Official Gazette] with a view to striking the name of the company off the register.

1. Damodar &c. Co. v. Nagin Das [1915] 17 Bom. L. R. 207, 39 Bom. 383.

(3) If the registrar either receives an answer from the company to the effect that it is not carrying on business or in operation, or does not within one month after sending the second letter receive any answer, he may publish in the [Official Gazette], and send to the company by post a notice that, at the expiration of three months from the date of that notice, the name of the company mentioned therein will, unless cause is shown to the contrary, be struck off the register and the company will be dissolved.

(4) If, in any case where a company is being wound up, the registrar has reasonable cause to believe either that no liquidator is acting or that the affairs of the company are fully wound up, and the returns required to be made by the liquidator have not been made for a period of six consecutive months after notice by the registrar demanding the returns has been sent by post to the company, or to the liquidator at his last known place of business, the registrar may publish in the [Official Gazette] and send to the company a like notice as is provided in the last preceding sub-section.

(5) At the expiration of the time mentioned in the notice the registrar may, unless cause to the contrary is previously shown by the company, strike its name off the register, and shall publish notice thereof in the [Official Gazette], and, on the publication in the [Official Gazette] of this notice, the company shall be dissolved: Provided that the liability (if any) of every director and member of the company shall continue and may be enforced as if the company had not been dissolved.

(6) If a company or any member or creditor thereof feels aggrieved by the company having been struct off the register, the Court, on the application of the company or member or creditor, may, if satisfied that the company was at the time of the stricking off carrying on business or in operation, or otherwise that it is just that the company be restored to the register, order the name of the company to be restored to the register, and thereupon the company shall be deemed to have continued in existence as if its name had not been struck off; and the Court may by the order give such directions and make such provisions as seem just for placing the company and all other persons in the same position as nearly as may be as if the name of the company had not been struck off.

(7) A letter or notice under this section may be addressed to the company at its registered office, or, if no office has been registered, to the care of some director, manager or other officer of the company, or, if there is no director, manager or other officer of the company whose name and address are known to the registrar, may be sent to each of the persons who subscribed the memorandum, addressed to him at the address mentioned in the memorandum.

Amendment. In sub-ss. (2), (3), (4) and (5) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "lccal Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Companies removed from register.

"Companies which have never commenced operation or have ceased to carry on business and have no assets to divide, are frequently disposed of (without winding up) under the section. In 1923 in England and Wales 1503 companies were in this manner removed from the register, as against 8008 registered and 2859 wound up during the year" 1.

When a company is still in operation.

A company which is in the course of being wound up voluntarily is still in operation within the meaning of the section 2. A company, although not carrying on business, may be in operation 3.

Restoration.

The power given to the Court to restore to the register the name of a company which has been struck off by the registrar applies to the case of a company which at the time of the striking off was carrying on business only for the purpose of winding up voluntarily and realizing its assets 4.

Effect.

If a company is struck off the register under this section, the personal liability of its officers for engagements made as its agents is preserved 5, and it may be enforced as if the company had not been dissolved. On the application for restoration of the name the Court has no power to impose a penalty as a condition of making the order 5. As to the title of the petition and the terms on which an order will be made see the case noted below 6.

Third party.

A third party has no locus standie to oppose a company's application for restoration under this section, but he may be heard as amicus curie if the Court so pleases 7.

Sub-s. (6). An order passed under sub-s. (6) refusing to restore a company is not made in the matter of winding up and hence is not appealable; but where the order is based on an erroneus view of the law it is open to revision 8. The registrar is not bound to remove a company from the register, even though an application be made for the purpose, on discovering that the company is not functioning or that its members have been reduced to less than seven 8. Where the object of the application to the registrar under this section is to avoid liability in a suit pending against the company, the application must be rejected. If the application is granted by the registrar, the order is liable to be set aside by the Court.

Where an application was made by a shareholder under this clause for setting aside an order of the registrar and made him alone a party to the application and the Court set aside the order of the registrar, it was held that in view of O. 29 rr. 1 and 2, C. P. C. read with s. 141 C. P. C. the company could not be said to have been properly represented by the registrar as the only person who could legally put in appearance on behalf of the company would either be its secretary or one of its directors, though he was no party to the original proceedings. A director can apply for review of such an order [1].

As to the power of the Court to wind up a company which does not commence its business within a year from its incorporation or suspends its business for a whole year, see s. 162 (iii) and notes thereto.

Limitation.

An application for winding up a company dissolved under this section may be made within three years of its dissolution [2]. In the last cited case it was held that Art. 181 of the Limitation Act applies to such a case, although it has been held in a long series of cases that Art. 181 of the Limitation Act is restricted to applications made under the Code of Civil Procedure [3].

REGISTRATION OFFICE AND FEES.

Registration offices.

248. (1) For the purpose of the registration of companies under this Act, there shall be offices at such places as the [Central Government] thinks fit, and no company shall be registered except at an office within the province in which, by the memorandum, the registered office of the company is declared to be established.

(2) The [Central Government] may appoint such registrars and assistant registrars as it thinks necessary for the registration of companies under this Act, and may make regulations with respect to their duties.

(3) The salaries of the persons appointed under this section shall be fixed by the [Central Government].

(4) The [Central Government] may direct a seal or seals to be prepared for the authentication of documents required for or connected with the registration of companies.

(6) Whenever any act is by this Act directed to be done to or by the registrar it shall, until the [Central Government] otherwise directs, be done to or by the existing registrar of joint-stock companies or in his absence to or by such person as the [Central Government] may for the time being authorise; but, in the event of the [Central Government] altering the constitution of the existing registry offices or any of them, any such act shall be done to or by such officer and at such place with reference to the local situation of the registered offices of the companies to be registered as the [Central Government] may appoint.

Amendments.

In the several sub-sections of this sections the words "Central Government" in italics within square brackets have been substituted for the words "Local Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into operation on 1st April, 1937. But with effect from 1st April, 1938 the Central Government has entrusted to Provincial Governments its functions under this section—vide Gazette of India dated 26th March, 1938, Part I, p. 440.

Documents field with registrar to be evidence.

Sub-s. (5). The Commercial Documents Evidence Act XXX of 1939 which received the assent of the Governor General on 26th September, 1939 has provided as follows:—(1) The Court shall presume that copies certified by the registrar of Companies, of the memorandum or articles of association of a company filed under the companies Act, 1913 purporting to be such documents and to have been duly made by or under the appropriate authority, were so made and the statements contained therein are accurate; (2) the Court may presume that copies so certified of the balance-sheet, profit and loss account and audit report of the company filed with the said registrar under the Companies Act, 1913 and Rules made thereunder purporting to be such documents and to have been duly made by or under the appropriate authority, were so made and the statements contained therein are accurate—see s. 3 of the aforesaid Act XXX of 1939. The said Act has further provided that notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, statements of facts in issue or of relevant facts, made in any of the above mentioned documents, as to matters usually stated in such documents shall be themselves relevant facts within the meaning of that Act—see s. 2 of the aforesaid Act XXX of 1939.

Fees.

249. (1) There shall be paid to the registrar in respect of the several matters mentioned in Table B in the First Schedule the several fees therein specified; or such smaller fees as the [Central Government] may direct.

(2) All fees paid to the registrar in pursuance of this Act shall be accounted for to the Crown.

Amendment. In sub-s. (1) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into force on 1st April, 1937.

The Act does not contemplate new articles of association, and where a company purports to adopt new articles of association, they are nothing but a special resolution and as such do not require to be stamped 1.

As to the smaller fees directed by the Central Government see the Notification No. 40(1)—Tr. (C. L.) 41, dated 23-8-1941 in Appendix E.

Enforcing submission of returns and documents to registrar.

249A. (1) If a company, having made default in complying with any provision of this Act which requires it to file with, deliver or send to the registrar any return, account or other document, or to give notice to him of any matter, fails to make good the default within fourteen days after the service of a notice on the company requiring it to do so, the Court may, on an application made to the Court by any member or creditor of the company or by the registrar, make an order directing the company and any officer thereof to make good the default within such time as may be specified in the order.

(2) Any such order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application shall be borne by the company or by any officers of the company responsible for the default.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be taken to prejudice the operation of any enactment imposing penalties on a company or its officers in respect of any such default as aforesaid.

This section has been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. It reproduces s. 135 of the English Act, of 1929. See Introduction.

PART VII.

Application of Act to companies formed under former Companies Acts.

250. In the application of this Act to existing companies, it shall apply in the same manner in the case of a limited company, other than a company limited by guarantee, as if the company had been formed and registered under this Act as a company limited by shares; in the case of a company limited by guarantee, as if the company had been formed and registered under this Act as a company limited by guarantee; and, in the case of a company other than a limited company, as if the company had been formed and registered under this Act as an unlimited company :

Provided that—

(1) nothing in Table A in the First Schedule shall apply to a company formed and registered under Act XIX of 1857 and Act VII of 1860, or either of them, or under the Indian Companies Act, 1866, or the Indian Companies Act, 1882 ;

(2) reference, express or implied, to the date of registration shall be construed as a reference to the date at which the company was registered under Act No. XIX of 1857 and Act No. VII of 1860, or either of them, or under the Indian Companies Act, 1866, or the Indian Companies Act, 1882, as the case may be.

This Act shall apply to every company registered but not formed under Act No. XIX of 1857 and Act No. VII of 1860 or either of them, or under the Indian Companies Act, 1866, or the Indian Companies Act, 1882, in the same manner as it is hereinafter in this Act declared to apply to companies registered but not formed under this Act :

Mode of transferring.

PART VIII.

COMPANIES AUTHORISED TO REGISTER UNDER THIS ACT.

253. (1) With the exceptions and subject to the provisions mentioned and contained in this section,—

Companies capable of being registered.

(i) any company consisting of seven or more members, which was in existence on the first day of May, eighteen hundred and eighty-two, including any company registered under Act No. XIX of 1857 and Act No. VII of 1860 or either of them, and (ii) any company formed after the date aforesaid whether before or after the commencement of this Act, in pursuance of any Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] other than this Act, or of Letters Patent, or being otherwise duly constituted according to law, and consisting of seven or more members ; may at any time register under this Act as an unlimited company or as a company limited by shares, or as a company limited by guarantee ; and the registration shall not be invalid by reason that it has taken place with a view to the company being wound up :

(2) Provided as follows :—

(a) a company having the liability of its members limited by Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] or by Letters Patent, and not being a joint-stock company as hereinafter defined, shall not register in pursuance of this section ;

(b) a company having the liability of its members limited by Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] or by Letters Patent shall not register in pursuance of this section as an unlimited company or as a company limited by guarantee ;

(c) a company that is not a joint-stock company as hereinafter defined shall not register in pursuance of this section as a company limited by shares ;

(d) a company shall not register in pursuance of this section without the assent of a majority of such of its members as are present in person or by proxy (in cases where proxies are allowed by the articles) at a general meeting summoned for the purpose ;

(e) where a company not having the liability of its members limited by Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] or by Letters Patent is about to register as a limited company, the majority required to assent as aforesaid shall consist of not less than three-fourths of the members present in person or by proxy at the meeting ;

(f) where a company is about to register as a company limited by guarantee, the assent to its being so registered shall be accompanied by a resolution declaring that each member undertakes to contribute to the assets of the company, in the event of its being wound up while he is a member, or within one year afterwards, for payment of the debts and liabilities of the company contracted before he ceased to be a member, and of the costs and expenses of winding up, and for the adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves such amount as may be required not exceeding a specified amount.

(3) In computing any majority under this section when a poll is demanded regard shall be had to the number of votes to which each member is entitled according to the articles.

(4) A company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, shall not be registered in pursuance of this section.

Amendment. In cl. (ii) of sub-s. (1) and cls. (a), (b) and (e) of sub-s. (2) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into force on 1st April, 1937.

Partnership.

A partnership formed solely for the purpose of being incorporated under the Act in order that it may be forthwith wound up cannot be registered under this section [1].

Sub-s. (1), cl. (ii). A tramway company created by a private Act of Parliament, incorporating the English Companies Clauses Act, was closed down, and after being registered under Part IX of the English Act of 1929 (corresponding to Part VIII of the Indian Act) was voluntarily wound up. The liquidator took out a summons to determine inter alia, the rights of the debenture-holders as against the unsecured creditors and the extent of the charge created by the debentures. It was held that the tramway company having altogether ceased to exist as a going concern, the debenture-holders were entitled to a charge on all the assets including proceeds of sale of realized assets and uncalled capital, in priority to the claims of unsecured creditors [2].

A joint-stock company has been defined in the next following section.

Registration after presentation of a winding up petition is a nullity [3].

By registration a company may acquire powers which it did not possess before [4].

Definition of "joint-stock company."

254. For the purposes of this Part as far as relates to registration of companies as companies limited by shares, a joint-stock company means a company having a permanent paid up or nominal share capital of fixed amount divided into shares, also of fixed amount, or held and transferable as stock, or divided and held partly in one way and partly in the other, and formed on the principle of having for its members the holders of those shares or that stock, and no other persons ; and such a company, when registered with limited liability under this Act, shall be deemed to be a company limited by shares.

Requirements for registration by joint-stock companies.

255. Before the registration in pursuance of this Part of a joint-stock company, there shall be delivered to the registrar the following documents (that is to say) :—

(1) a list showing the names, addresses and occupations of all persons who on a day named in the list, not being more than six clear days before the day of registration, were members of the company, with the addition of the shares or stock held by them respectively, distinguishing, in cases where the shares are numbered, each share by its number ;

(2) a copy of any Act of Parliament, Act of the [Central Government], Royal Charter, Letters Patent, deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery or other instrument constituting or regulating the company ; and

(3) if the company is intended to be registered as a limited company, a statement specifying the following particulars (that is to say) :—

(a) the nominal share capital of the company and the number of shares into which it is divided or the amount of stock of which it consists ;

(b) the number of shares taken and the amount paid on each share ;

(c) the name of the company, with the addition of the word "Limited" as the last word thereof ; and

(d) in the case of a company intended to be registered as a company limited by guarantee, the resolution declaring the amount of the guarantee.

In sub-s. (2) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into operation on 1st April, 1937.

Requirements for registration by other than joint-stock companies.

256. Before the registration in pursuance of this Part of any company not being a joint-stock company, there shall be delivered to the registrar—

(1) a list showing the names, addresses and occupations of the directors of the company ; and

(2) a copy of any Act of Parliament, Act of the [Central Government], Letters Patent, deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery or other instrument constituting or regulating the company ; and

(3) in the case of a company intended to be registered as a company limited by guarantee, a copy of the resolution declaring the amount of the guarantee.

In sub-s. (2) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into operation on 1st April, 1937.

Authentication of statement of existing companies.

257. The list of members and directors and any other particulars relating to the company required to be delivered to the registrar shall be duly verified by the declaration of any two or more directors or other principal officers of the company.

Registrar may require evidence as to nature of company.

258. The registrar may require such evidence as he thinks necessary for the purpose of satisfying himself whether any company proposing to be registered is or is not a joint-stock company as hereinbefore defined.

On registration of banking company with limited liability, notice to be given to customers.

259. (1) Where a banking company, which was in existence on the first day of May eighteen hundred and eighty-two, proposes to register as a limited company, it shall, at least thirty days before so registering, give notice of its intention so to register to every person who has a banking account with the company, either by delivery of the notice to him, or by posting it to him at, or delivering it at, his last known address.

(2) If the company omits to give the notice required by this section, then as between the company and the person for the time being interested in the account in respect of which the notice ought to have been given, and so far as respects the account down to the time at which notice is given, but not further or otherwise, the certificate of registration with limited liability shall have no operation.

Exemption of certain companies from payment of fees.

260. No fees shall be charged in respect of the registration in pursuance of this Part of a company if it is not registered as a limited company, or if before its registration as a limited company the liability of the shareholders was limited by some Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] or by Letters Patent.

See notes to s. 256, supra.

261. When a company registers in pursuance of this Part with limited liability, the word "Limited" shall form and be registered as part of its name.

Addition of "Limited" to name.

262. On compliance with the requirements of this Part with respect to registration, and on payment of such fees, if any, as are payable under Table B in the First Schedule, the registrar shall certify under his hand that the company applying for registration is incorporated as a company under this Act, and in the case of a limited company that it is limited, and thereupon the company shall be incorporated, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal.

Certificate of registration of existing companies.

The certificate of the registrar is conclusive evidence that the company was authorized to be registered 1. See s. 23 and notes thereto.

263. All property, moveable and immoveable, including all interests and rights in, to and out of property, moveable and immoveable, and including obligations and actionable claims as may belong to or be vested in a company at the date of its registration in pursuance of this Part, shall, on registration, pass to and vest in the company as incorporated under this Act for all the estate and interest of the company therein.

Vesting of property on registration.

264. The registration of a company in pursuance of this Part shall not affect the rights or liabilities of the company in respect of any debt or obligation incurred or any contract entered into, by, to, with, or on behalf of, the company before registration.

Saving of existing liabilities.

If a previously unlimited company has been registered with a limited liability, a member, inspite of the terms of his agreement before registration, is not liable to contribute beyond the amount of his shares 2. A member of an unregistered company which is registered under this Part after the member has parted with all his shares is not a contributory 3.

Contributory.

265. All suits and other legal proceedings which at the time of the registration of a company in pursuance of this Part are pending by or against the company, or the public officer or any member thereof, may be continued in the same manner as if the registration had not taken place; nevertheless execution shall not issue against the effects of any individual member of the company on any decree or order obtained in any such suit or proceeding; but, in the event of the property and effects of the company being insufficient to satisfy the decree or order, an order may be obtained for winding up the company.

266. When a company is registered in pursuance of this Part—

Effect of registration under Act.

(i) all provisions contained in any Act of Parliament, Act of the [Central Government], deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery, Letters Patent, or other instrument constituting or regulating the company, including, in the case of a company registered as a company limited by guarantee, the resolution declaring the amount of the guarantee, shall be deemed to be conditions and regulations of the company, in the same manner and with the same incidence as if so much thereof as would, if the company had been formed under this Act, have been required to be inserted in the memorandum, were contained in a registered memorandum, and the residue thereof were contained in registered articles ;

(ii) all the provisions of this Act shall apply to the company and the members, contributories and creditors thereof, in the same manner in all respects as if it had been formed under this Act, subject as follows (that is to say) :—

(a) the regulations in Table A in the First Schedule shall not apply unless adopted by special resolution ;

(b) the provisions of this Act relating to the numbering of shares shall not apply to any joint-stock company whose shares are not numbered ;

(c) subject to the provisions of this section, the company shall not have power to alter any provision contained in any Act of Parliament or Act of the [Central Government] relating to the company ;

(d) subject to the provisions of this section, the company shall not have power, without the sanction of the [Central Government], to alter any provision contained in any Letters Patent relating to the company ;

(e) the company shall not have power to alter any provision contained in a Royal Charter or Letters Patent with respect to the objects of the company;

(f) in the event of the company being wound up, every person shall be a contributory, in respect of the debts and liabilities of the company contracted before registration, who is liable to pay or contribute to the payment of any debt or liability of the company contracted before registration, or to pay or contribute to the payment of any sum for the adjustment of the rights of the members among themselves in respect of any such debt or liability; or to pay or contribute to the payment of the costs and expenses of winding up the company, so far as relates to such debts or liabilities as aforesaid; and every contributory shall be liable to contribute to the assets of the company, in the course of the winding up, all sums due from him in respect of any such liability as aforesaid; and in the event of the death or insolvency of any contributory, the provisions of this Act with respect to the legal representatives and heirs of deceased contributories, and with reference to the assignees of insolvent contributories, shall apply;

(iii) the provisions of this Act with respect to—

(a) the registration of an unlimited company as limited;

(b) the powers of an unlimited company on registration as a limited company to increase the nominal amount of its share capital and to provide that a portion of its share capital shall not be capable of being called up except in the event of winding up;

(c) the power of a limited company to determine that a portion of its share capital shall not be capable of being called up except in the event of winding up;

shall apply notwithstanding any provisions contained in any Act of Parliament, Act of the [Central Government], Royal Charter, deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery, Letters Patent or other instrument constituting or regulating the company;

(iv) nothing in this section shall authorise the company to alter any such provisions contained in any deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery, Letters Patent or other instrument constituting or regulating the company, as would, if the company had originally been formed under this Act, have been required to be contained in the memorandum and are not authorised to be altered by this Act ;

(v) nothing in this Act shall derogate from any lawful power of altering its constitution or regulations which may, by virtue of any Act of Parliament, Act of the [Central Government], deed of settlement, contract of co-partnery, Letters Patent or other instrument constituting or regulating the company, be vested in the company.

Amendment. In the several clauses of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for the words "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into operation on 1st April, 1937.

Pre-existing liability. Where a member of an unregistered company who is personally liable to be sued for the price of goods supplied to the company has parted with his shares before registration, he is not, by reason only of the registration, released from his pre-existing liability 1.

See notes to s. 253 ante.

Power to substitute memorandum and articles for deed of settlement.

267. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, a company registered in pursuance of this Part may by special resolution alter the form of its constitution by substituting a memorandum and articles for a deed of settlement.

(2) The provisions of this Act with respect to confirmation by the Court and registration of an alteration of the objects of a company shall, so far as applicable, apply to an alteration under this section with the following modifications :—

(a) there shall be substituted for the printed copy of the altered memorandum required to be filed with the registrar a printed copy of the substituted memorandum and articles ; and

(b) on the registration of the alteration being certified by the registrar, the substituted memorandum and articles shall apply to the company in the same manner as if it were a company registered under this Act with that memorandum and those articles, and the company's deed of settlement shall cease to apply to the company.

1. Lanyon v. Smith [1863] 3 B. & S. 938 ; Harvey v. Clough [1863] 8 L. T. 324.

(3) An alteration under this section may be made either with or without any alteration of the objects of the company under this Act.

(4) In this section the expression "deed of settlement" includes any contract of co-partnery or other instrument constituting or regulating the company, not being an Act of Parliament, an Act of the [Central Government], a Royal Charter or Letters Patent.

Amendment. In sub-s. (4) of this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into force on 1st April, 1937.

For the provisions of this Act with respect to confirmation by the Court and registration of an alteration of objects see s. 12 et seq.

Special resolution must be confirmed by Court.

Where a company constituted by a deed of settlement has passed a special resolution to alter the form of its constitution by substituting a memorandum and articles of association for the deed of settlement pursuant to this section, the special resolution must be confirmed by the Court under this section even if the memorandum does not make any change in the objects of the company 1.

Procedure, conditional notice is not sufficient.

The proposed resolution in such a case should be described as a special resolution and copies of the resolution and the proposed memorandum and articles of association should be sent with the notice of the meeting to the shareholders or, if previously sent, should be referred to 2. The conditional notice that "if passed, the resolution would be submitted to another general meeting at a specific place and date for final determination and approval" is not sufficient 3.

Confirmation by Court.

A company, having power to amalgamate with any other company with similar objects under a contract of co-partnery which formed its constitutive writ, presented a petition craving the Court to confirm an alternative of its form of constitution by substituting for the contract of co-partnery a memorandum and articles of association which had been adopted by a special resolution and to confirm an extention of its objects. The memorandum included among other objects power to "sell, transfer or dispose of the undertaking, property and rights heritable or moveable, real or personal and business of the company or any part thereof" : it was held that the alterations made should be confirmed in so far as they conferred power to "sell......business of the company" 4.

Power of Court to stay or restrain proceedings.

268. The provisions of this Act with respect to staying and restraining suits and legal proceedings against a company at any time after the presentation of a petition for winding up and before the making of a winding up order shall, in the case of a company registered in pursuance of this Part, where the application to stay or restrain is by a creditor, extend to suits and legal proceedings against any contributory of the company.

As to the provisions for staying and restraining proceedings against a company at any time after the presentation of a petition to wind up before the winding up order, see s. 169 and notes.

Suits stayed on winding up order.

269. Where an order has been made for winding up a company registered in pursuance of this Part, no suit or other legal proceeding shall be commenced or proceeded with against the company or any contributory of the company in respect of any debt of the company, except by leave of the Court, and subject to such terms as the Court may impose.

Suit by company will not be stayed.

This section is intended to apply not to suits or other legal proceedings brought by the company, but to a suit or proceeding brought by a third person against either the company or a contributory. There is no reason why a suit brought by the company should not proceed inspite of an order for winding up made after the commencement of the suit [1].

Effect of dismissal.

Dismissal of a suit instituted after the registered company has gone into liquidation does not bar the maintenance of a claim before the official liquidator [2].

Compare s. 171 and see notes to that section.

PART IX.

WINDING UP OF UNREGISTERED COMPANIES.

Meaning of "unregistered company."

270. For the purposes of this Part, the expression "unregistered company" shall not include a railway company incorporated by Act of Parliament or by an Act of the [Central Government], nor a company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1866, or under any Act repealed thereby, or under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, or under this Act, but save as aforesaid, shall include any partnership, association or company consisting of more than seven members.

Amendment. In this section the words in italics within square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 which came into force on 1st April, 1937.

[1] Rup Ram v. Fazul Din [1920] 57 I. C. 223.

[2] Peary Lal v. Porter [1914] 24 I. C. 99.

Applicability.

A company whose principal object is the construction of docks, but the company has power also to make a branch railway, does not come within the exception 1. A tramway company incorporated by a special Act is not a "railway company" and may be wound up 2.

Meaning of "more than seven members."

The words "more than seven members" mean at least eight existing members, and for this purpose representatives of deceased members, trustees of bankrupt members and past members cannot be counted 3. Mr. Justice Cunliffe of the Rangoon High Court ordered a company consisting of not more than seven persons to be wound up under this section holding that the English decisions mentioned in the last note took a narrow view of the language 4. With all respect it is submitted that this decision is not correct. In a later case Page C. J., and Mosely J., of the same High Court held that under this section and the following section the Court can order the winding up of a partnership, association or company if, and only if, at the time when the petition for the winding up is presented it consists of more than seven persons 5.

Meaning of "company."

The first part of this section gives definition of the expression "unregistered company." The second part does not tell what bodies will fall within the expression, but some particular kinds of bodies would be included. The section is not exhaustive. The words "shall include" do not amount to "shall mean and include" 6. Therefore "company" in this part of the section can only mean a body which has no corporate existence, not being registered under the Act. But a foreign company is a corporate body and a legal entity and under the law it can sue and be sued as such. The words "shall include" will not exclude a foreign company not registered under the Act, and such a company must fall within the expression "unregistered company" whatever may be the number of members 6.

Meaning of "unregistered company."

An unregistered company means a company unregistered at the date of the commencement of the winding up. Registration subsequent to that date is a nullity 7. It must consist of more than seven members, not "seven or more" as in s. 5.

Jurisdiction.

The High Court has jurisdiction to wind up an unregistered foreign company irrespective of the number of its members under this and the following section, and the mere fact that the order for winding up the company has been made by a competent Court of the place of the company's incorporation cannot make any difference to the jurisdiction 8.

271. (1) Subject to the provisions of this Part, any unregistered company may be wound up under this Act, and all the provisions of this Act with respect to winding up shall apply to an unregistered company, with the following exceptions and additions :—

Winding up of unregistered companies.

(i) an unregistered company shall, for the purpose of determining the Court having jurisdiction in the matter of the winding up, be deemed to be registered in the province where its principal place of business is situate or, if it has a principal place of business situate in more than one province, then in each province where it has a principal place of business ; and the principal place of business situate in that province in which proceedings are being instituted shall, for all the purposes of the winding up, be deemed to be the registered office of the company ;

(ii) no unregistered company shall be wound up under this Act voluntarily or subject to supervision ;

(iii) the circumstances in which an unregistered company may be wound up are as follows (that is to say) :—

(a) if the company is dissolved, or has ceased to carry on business or is carrying on business only for the purpose of winding up its affairs ;

(b) if the company is unable to pay its debts ;

(c) if the Court is of opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up ;

(iv) an unregistered company shall, for the purposes of this Act, be demeed to be unable to pay its debts—

(a) if a creditor, by assignment or otherwise, to whom the company is indebted in a sum exceeding five hundred rupees then due, has served on the company, by leaving at its principal place of business, or by delivering to the secretary, or some director, manager or principal officer of the company, or by otherwise serving in such manner as the Court may approve or direct, a demand under his hand requiring the company to pay the sum so due, and the company has for three weeks after the service of the demand neglected to pay the sum, or to secure or compound for it to the satisfaction of the creditor ;

(b) if any suit or other legal proceeding has been instituted against any member for any debt or demand due or claimed to be due, from the company or from him in his character of member, and notice in writing of the institution of the suit or other legal proceeding having been served on the company by leaving the same at its principal place of business or by delivering it to the secretary, or some director, manager or principal officer of the company or by otherwise serving the same in such manner as the Court may approve or direct, the company has not within ten days after service of the notice paid, secured or compounded for the debt or demand, or procured the suit or other legal proceeding to be stayed, or indemnified the defendant to his reasonable satisfaction against the suit or other legal proceeding, and against all costs, damages and expenses to be incurred by him by reason of the same ;

(c) if execution or other process issued on a decree or order obtained in any Court in favour of a creditor against the company, or any member thereof as such, or any person authorised to be sued as nominal defendant on behalf of the company, is returned unsatisfied ; and

(d) if it is otherwise proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the company is unable to pay its debts.

(2) Nothing in this Part shall affect the operation of any enactment which provides for any partnership, association or company being wound up, or being wound up as a company or as an unregistered company, under any enactment repealed by this Act, except that references in any such first mentioned enactment to any such repealed enactment shall be read as references to the corresponding provision (if any) of this Act.

(3) Where a company incorporated outside British India which has been carrying on business in British India ceases to carry on business in British India it may be wound up as an unregistered company under this Part, notwithstanding that it has been dissolved or otherwise ceased to exist as a company under or by virtue of the laws of the country under which it was incorporated.

Amendment. By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the new sub-s. (3) has been added following the provisions of sub-s. (2) of s. 338 of the English Act of 1929.

Jurisdiction. The Court has jurisdiction under the section to wind up companies incorporated by a special Act and foreign companies having a place of business in this country 1, even if the company has ceased to exist 2. If there is no member, officer or servant of the company on whom the petition to wind up can be served, the service must according to Companies' Winding up Rules be made by leaving a copy at the company's last known principal place of business within the jurisdiction 2. But when a foreign company is already in the course of being wound up in the country where it was domiciled, the winding up here is ancillary to the foreign liquidation, and the power of the liquidator is restricted to dealing with assets in this country 3. Where there is jurisdiction to wind up a foreign company at the time the petition is made, any subsequent order in the foreign country to wind up the company does not affect the former proceedings 3. See notes to s. 270 ante.

Scheme under s. 153. A scheme under s. 153 provides an alternative mode of winding up a company. It is a provision with respect to avert a winding up and is therefore a provision with respect to winding up within the meaning of this section 4.

The Court however has no jurisdiction to wind up a foreign company which has agents but no office in this country 5, or an illegal association 6, or a club 7, or a literary or scientific institution not established for the purpose of carrying on business 8, or a trade union 9, or an association of less than eight members 10.

"Carrying on business only for the purpose of winding up." Where an unregistered company has large outstandings which it would take years to work out and is not insolvent, the mere fact that it has ceased to take new business cannot be construed as carrying on business for the purpose of winding up its affairs and would not, on that ground only, justify a winding up order by the Court 11.

"Just and equitable." So long as a society, formed for the mutual assurance of life, is solvent and in a position to do all that it has undertaken to do, it will not be just and equitable, even if it were the wish of the majority of the shareholders, to wind it up against the wishes of the minority 12. For other cases see notes to s. 162 (vi).

Companies wound up under this section.

A telegraph company 1, a water works company 2, an exhibition company 3, and a canal company 4, incorporated by special Acts have been wound up. A friendly society registered or unregistered may be wound up under this section 5.

Sub-s. (1) (iii) (a). The words, "is dissolved" are equivalent to "has been dissolved" 6.

Sub-s. (1), (iv). Compare s. 163 ante. See also notes to that section. For the meaning of "under his hand" in cl. (a) see notes to s. 163 ante.

Sub-s. (3). If a foreign company which after carrying on business in this country has been dissolved in the country of its incorporation, it may, notwithstanding its dissolution in that country be wound up as an unregistered company under this section, although the dissolution took place before the passing of this new sub-s. (3), and on the instruction of the liquidator with the approval of the Committee of Inspection, an action may be brought in the name of the foreign company to recover sums which at the date of its dissolution were due to the company and unpaid 7. Where a company has ceased to exist by an act of the country, by whose acts and under whose laws it was made a juristic entity, it must be treated as non-existent by all Courts administering English law 8. Such a company can be wound up in this country 9.

Contributories in winding up of unregistered companies.

272. (1) In the event of an unregistered company being wound up, every person shall be deemed to be a contributory who is liable to pay or contribute to the payment of any debt or liability of the company, or to pay or contribute to the payment of any sum for the adjustment of the rights of the members among themselves, or to pay or contribute to the payment of the costs and expenses of winding up the company, and every contributory shall be liable to contribute to the assets of the company all sums due from him in respect of any such liability as aforesaid.

(2) In the event of any contributory dying or being adjudged insolvent, the provisions of this Act with respect to the legal representatives and heirs of deceased contributories, and to the assignees of insolvent contributories shall apply.

Who is not a contributory. A debtor to the company is not a contributory within the above definition and must not be settled on the list of contributories [1]. For the meaning of the word "contributory" in the winding up of registered companies see s. 158.

Sub-s. (2). Compare s. 160.

Power to stay or restrain proceedings. 273. The provisions of this Act with respect to staying and restraining suits and legal proceedings against a company at any time after the presentation of a petition for winding up and before the making of a winding up order shall, in the case of an unregistered company, where the application to stay or restrain is by a creditor, extend to suits and legal proceedings against any contributory of the company.

For the provisions for staying and restraining suits and legal proceedings against a company see s. 169 and notes thereto. Cf. s. 268.

Suits stayed on winding up order. 274. Where an order has been made for winding up an unregistered company, no suit or other legal proceedings shall be proceeded with or commenced against any contributory of the company in respect of any debt of the company, except by leave of the Court, and subject to such terms as the Court may impose.

See s. 171 and notes. Cf. s. 269.

Applicability. This section only applies to actions brought against contributories as such to enforce payment of a debt of the company [2].

Directions as to property in certain cases. 275. If an unregistered company has no power to sue and be sued in a common name, or if for any reason it appears expedient, the Court may, by the winding up order, or by any subsequent order, direct that all or any part of the property, moveable or immoveable, including all interests and rights in, to and out of property, moveable and immoveable, and including obligations and actionable claims as may belong to the company or to trustees on its behalf, is to vest in the official liquidator by his official name, and thereupon the property or the part thereof specified in the order shall vest accordingly; and the official liquidator may, after giving such indemnity (if any) as the Court may direct, bring or defend in his official name any suit or other legal proceeding relating to that property, or necessary to be brought or defended for the purposes of effectually winding up the company and recovering its property.

Personal right or liability. If the property of the company is vested in the official liquidator under this section, he does not thereby acquire any personal rights or liabilities 1. A vesting order under this section can be obtained on an ex parte motion 2, but the trustee in whom the property is vested may be served 3.

Provisions of this Part cumulative. 276. The provisions of this Part with respect to unregistered companies shall be in addition to, and not in restriction of, any provisions hereinbefore in this Act contained with respect to winding up companies by the Court, and the Court or official liquidator may exercise any powers or do any act in the case of unregistered companies which might be exercised or done by it or him in winding up companies formed and registered under this Act; but an unregistered company shall not, except in the event of its being wound up, be deemed to be a company under this Act, and then only to the extent provided by this Part.

Scope of the section. The words "except in the event of its being wound up" include the time when a petition is pending 4. This section renders inapplicable to unregistered companies the whole of the Act except Part V 4.

Amendment.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, in sub-s. (3) the words in italics have been inserted and the proviso thereto has been omitted. By the said Act the original sub-sections (5), (6) and (7) have been re-numbered as sub-sections (6), (7) and (8) respectively and the new sub-s. (5) has been inserted. The proviso to sub-s. (3) was as follows :—

Provided that the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India subject to such restrictions and conditions, if any, as he may therein prescribe, exempt any such company or any class of such companies from this requirement.

By the amending Act II of 1938 the following further amendments have been made in this section : In sub-s. (1) the new cl. (e) has been added, and after that the words within square brackets have been substituted for the words "or in such address." In sub-s. (3), cl. (i) the words within the first square brackets have been substituted for "a copy of that balance-sheet," and the words "in triplicate" in the second square brackets have been inserted. In cl. (ii) the words "in triplicate" within square brackets have also been inserted by the same amending Act.

Applicability.

A company incorporated in Canada and not having established places of business within the United Kingdom was not bound to conform to the regulations contained in the corresponding section (s. 274) of the English Act of 1908 [1].

Where a foreign company had a place of business within the United Kingdom within the meaning of the corresponding section (274) of the English Act of 1908, a service upon the person named in cl. (d) of sub-s. (1) was an effective service [2].

English & foreign corporations.

An English corporation is none the less English because the corporators are foreigners [3], and a foreign corporation is none the less foreign because the corporators are English [4].

Carrying on business.

It cannot be said that a foreign company cannot carry on business in another country. Where a company incorporated outside British India does business in Calcutta through its agents, the company is carrying on business in British India within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, Calcutta [5], and it may be sued there [6].

Banking Companies.

Definition of banking company.

277F. A "banking company" means a company which carries on as its principal business the accepting of deposits of money on current account or otherwise, subject to withdrawal by cheque, draft or order, notwithstanding that it engages in addition in any one or more of the following forms of business, namely :—

(1) the borrowing, raising or taking up of money; the lending or advancing of money either upon or without security; the drawing, making, accepting, discounting, buying, selling, collecting and dealing in bills of exchange, hoondees, promissory notes, coupons, drafts, bills of lading, railway receipts, warrants, debentures, certificates, scrips and other instruments, and securities whether transferable or negotiable or not; the granting and issuing of letters of credit, travellers cheques and circular notes; the buying, selling and dealing in

(4) the promoting, effecting, insuring, guaranteeing, underwriting, participating in managing and carrying out of any issue, public or private, of State, Municipal or other loans or of shares, stock, debentures, or debenture stock of any company, corporation or association and the lending of money for the purpose of any such issue ;

(5) carrying on and transacting every kind of guarantee and indemnity business ;

(6) promoting or financing or assisting in promoting or financing any business undertaking or industry, either existing or new, and developing or forming the same either through the instrumentality of syndicates or otherwise ;

(7) acquisition by purchase, lease, exchange, hire or otherwise of any property immoveable or moveable and any rights or privileges which the company may think necessary or convenient to acquire or the acquisition of which in the opinion of the company is likely to facilitate the realisation of any securities held by the company or to prevent or diminish any apprehended loss or liability ;

(8) managing, selling and realising all property moveable and immoveable which may come into the possession of the company in satisfaction or part satisfaction of any of its claims ;

(15) selling, improving, managing, developing, exchanging, leasing, mortgaging, disposing of or turning into account or otherwise dealing with all or any part of the property and rights of the company ;

(16) acquiring and undertaking the whole or any part of the business of any person or company, when such business is of a nature enumerated or described in this section ;

(17) doing all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the promotion or advancement of the business of the company.

In clause (2) the words within square brackets have been added by the Amending Act II of 1938.

Limitation of activities of banking company.

277G. (1) No company formed after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the purpose of carrying on business as a banking company or which uses as part of the name under which it proposes to carry on business the word "bank", "banker" or "banking" shall be registered under this Act, unless the memorandum limits the objects of the company to the carrying on of the business of accepting deposits of money on current account or otherwise subject to withdrawal by cheque, draft or otherwise along with some or all of the forms of business specified in section 277F.

(2) No banking company whether incorporated in or outside British India shall after the expiry or two years from the commencement of the said Act carry on any form of business other than those specified in section 277F :

Provided that the [Central Government] may, by notification in the [Official Gazette], specify in addition to the business set forth in clauses (1) to (17) of section 277F other forms of business which it may be lawful under this section for a banking company to engage in.

Amendment. In the proviso to sub-s. (2) of this section the words within the first square brackets have been substituted for "Governor General in Council" and those within the second square brackets have been substituted for "Gazette of India" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sub-s. (1). The date of commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 is 15th January, 1937 (see the first page of Introduction).

Banking company not to employ managing agent.

277H. No banking company shall after the expiry of two years from the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, employ or be managed by a managing agent other than a banking company for the management of the company.

See notes to the previous section.

Restriction on commencement of business by banking company.

277I. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 103, no banking company incorporated under this Act after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, shall commence business, unless shares have been allotted to an amount sufficient to yield a sum of at least fifty thousand rupees as working capital and unless a declaration duly verified by an affidavit signed by the directors and the manager that such a sum has been received by way of paid up capital has been filed with the registrar.

See notes to s. 277G.

Prohibition of charge on unpaid capital.

277J. No banking company shall create any charge upon any unpaid capital of the company, and any such charge shall be invalid.

Reserve fund.

277K. (1) Every banking company shall, after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, maintain a reserve fund.

(2) Every banking company shall out of the declared profits of each year and before any dividend is declared transfer a sum equivalent to not less than twenty per cent. of such profits to the reserve fund until the amount of the said fund is equal to the paid up capital.

(3) A banking company shall invest the amount standing to the credit of its reserve fund in Government securities or in securities mentioned or referred to in section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, or keep deposited in a special account to be opened by the company for the purpose in a scheduled bank as defined in clause (e) of section (2) of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 :

Provided that the provision of the sub-section shall not apply to a banking company incorporated before the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, till after the expiry of two years from the commencement of the said Act.

Sub-s. (1). See notes to s. 277G.

Sub-s. (3). The securities mentioned or referred to in s. 20 of the Indian Trusts Act II of 1882 are—promissory notes, debentures, stock or other securities of any Provincial Government or of the Central Government or of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and also securities, both the principal whereof and the interest whereon shall have been fully and unconditionally guaranteed by any such Government.

For a list of the scheduled banks see pp. 286-87 ante.

Cash reserve.

277L. (1) Every banking company shall maintain by way of cash reserve in cash a sum equivalent to at least one and a half per cent. of the time liabilities and five per cent. of the demand liabilities of such company and shall file with the registrar before the tenth day of every month [three copies of] a statement of the amount so held on the Friday of each week of the preceding month with particulars of the time and demand liabilities of each such day.

(2) For the purposes of sub-section (1) "demand liabilities" means liabilities which must be met on demand, and "time liabilities" means liabilities which are not demand liabilities.

(3) Nothing in this section or in section 277K shall apply to a scheduled bank as defined in clause (e) of section 2 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934.

(4) If default is made in complying with the requirements of section 277G, section 277H, section 277J, section 277K or section 277M or with the requirements of this section as to the maintainance of a cash reserve, every director or other officer of the company who is knowingly and wilfully a party to the default shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees for every day during which the default continues, and if default is made in complying with the requirements of this section as to the filing of the statement referred to in sub-section (1), to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees for every day during which the default continues.

In sub-s. (1) the words in square brackets have been inserted by the amending Act II of 1938 which received the assent of the Governor General on 26th February, 1938.

Cash reserve.

Where the evidence does not warrant the conclusion that an ordinary director was knowingly and wilfully a party to the default to maintain the requisite cash reserve, a conviction of such director under this section must be set aside [1].

Restriction on nature of subsidiary companies.

277M. (1) [A banking company shall not form any subsidiary company except a subsidiary company] formed for the purpose of undertaking and executing trusts, undertaking the administration of estates as executor trustee or otherwise and such other purposes set forth in section 277F as are incidental to the business of accepting deposits of money on current account or otherwise.

[(2) Save as provided in sub-section (1), a banking company shall not hold shares in any company whether as pledgee, mortgagee or absolute owner of an amount exceeding forty per cent. of the issued share capital of that company :

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall apply to shares held by a banking company before the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936.]

By the amending Act II of 1938 this section has been re-numbered as sub-s. (1) and therein the words within square brackets have been substituted for the words "A banking company shall not form or hold shares in any subsidiary company except a subsidiary company of its own". The sub-s. (2) has been added by the same amending Act.

For definition of subsidiary company see sub-s. 2 of s. 2 ante. As to the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, see notes to s. 277G.

Power of Court to stay proceedings.

277N. (1) The Court may on the application of a banking company which is temporarily unable to meet its obligations make an order staying the commencement or continuance of all actions and proceedings against the company for a fixed period of time on such terms and conditions as it shall think fit and proper and may from time to time extend the period.

(2) No such application shall be maintainable unless accompanied by a report of the registrar :

Provided, however, the Court may, for sufficient reasons, grant interim relief, even if the application is not accompanied by such report.

(3) The registrar shall for the purposes of his report be entitled at the cost of the company to investigate the financial condition of the company and for such purpose to have the books and documents of the company examined by an accountant holding a certificate issued under section 144.

Amendment. The new Part XA consisting of ss. 277F to 277N has been introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, making special provisions applicable to banking companies. See Introduction.

Scope. The fact that the directors and the chairman of a banking company are actuated by the best of motives and they think and hope that their arrangements are those best suited to meet the liabilities of the company, is no ground in law for passing an order under this section, unless the Court really is satisfied that the position of the company is embarrassed only temporarily. It was never the intention of the legislature in enacting this section that a company in an insolvent position should be allowed to continue its operations under the protection of the Court and that those who had dealings with the company should be prevented under the orders of the Court from seeking legal remedies to which they would otherwise have been entitled [1].

PART XI.

SUPPLEMENTAL

Legal proceedings, offences, etc.

Cognizance of offences. 278. (1) No Court inferior to that of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence against this Act.

(2) If any offence which by this Act is declared to be punishable by fine only is committed by any person within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay, such offence shall be punishable upon summary conviction by any Presidency Magistrate of the place at which such Court is held.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, every offence against this Act shall, for the purpose of the said Code, be deemed to be non-cognizable.

Jurisdiction. This section does not appear in the English Act, and seems to have been badly drafted, for in a very recent case a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court had seriously to consider whether a High Court has original jurisdiction to try an offence under the Companies Act [2]. Their Lordships observed: "All that section 278 lays down is that no Court of a grade inferior to that of certain Magistrates shall have power to try such offences. Sub-s. (2) refers to the Presidency towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and has no application to this High Court. It therefore follows that the Act does not mention any particular Court which would have jurisdiction to try offences under s. 85 and other sections of the Act" [3]. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, does not remedy the defect which has been overlooked by those who were responsible for the measure. The above Full Bench however held that the High Court had no original jurisdiction to try an offence under the Act. Their Lordships said: "The jurisdiction of the High Court referred to in s. 3 is obviously the jurisdiction exercised by virtue of the specific provisions of the Act and not a jurisdiction which may be invoked where merely a criminal offence is declared...... It is very difficult to say that s. 3 has specifically mentioned that the High Court would be the Court which should as a Court of first instance try persons who have been guilty of an offence committed on account of breaches of the provisions of the sections of the Act" [1].

Criminal proceedings.

In criminal proceedings also the summons must be served at the registered office of the company [2]. In Lakshmana v. Emp. [3] no opinion was expressed on the question whether a complaint signed by the registrar's clerk is properly instituted.

Sub-s. (3). It is true that offences under sub-section (5) of s. 4 and under s. 283 are non-cognizable and cannot be investigated by the police under Ch. XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure; but the mere fact that the offences were wrongly investigated and sent up by the police is not an obstacle to their being tried by a Magistrate [4].

Who can complain ?

This section is silent as to the person on whose complaint the Court will take cognizance of an offence against this Act. Cognizance is generally taken on the complaint made by the registrar of companies, for by the regulations made under sub-s. (2) of s. 248 this officer has been authorized by the Local Governments to make such complaints. But these regulations are not intended to exclude any other competent party from filing a complaint. Such an exclusion would be ultra vires because there is no provision in the Act which detracts from the ordinary power of the aggrieved person to file a complaint. A shareholder for instance is such an aggrieved person [5]. The Act as amended by Act XXII of 1936 does not also contemplate prosecutions only by the Advocate General or Public Prosecutor and under it prosecutions by private individuals are not barred. S. 141A which provides for prosecutions by the Crown is limited to cases of fraud and comes into play only after a report under s. 138 has been made [6]. In the last cited case at p. 455 Henderson J. observed: "In the absence of any specific provision in the Act itself we cannot infer from a mere omission of a similar provision (as in s. 368 of the English Act of 1929—printed in the Appendix) in the Indian Act that the intention of the legislature was to bar private prosecutions. There was no doubt at all that such prosecutions were permitted by the old Act."

Offences under other Acts.

Where allegations against an insurer amount to offences both under the Companies Act and the Insurance Act IV of 1938, he should be prosecuted under the latter Act, and any prosecution under the Companies Act should be limited to matters which are offences under this Act [6].

Application of fines.

279. The Court imposing any fine under this Act may direct that the whole or any part thereof be applied in or towards payment of the costs of the proceedings, or in or towards the rewarding of the person on whose information the fine is recovered.

Power to require limited company to give security for costs.

280. Where a limited company is plaintiff or petitioner in any suit or other legal proceeding, any Court having jurisdiction in the matter may, if it appears that there is reason to believe that the company will be unable to pay the costs of the defendant if successful in his defence, require sufficient security to be given for those costs, and may stay all proceedings until the security is given.

When security may be ordered.

The fact that the company is in liquidation is prima facie a reason for ordering security to be given 1. The amount of security is usually an amount equal to the probable amount of costs payable 2. The Court may direct security to be given for costs up to a certain stage and allow the petition to be renewed 3.

When a liquidator brings an action for call against a contributory, he will be required to give security for the defendant's costs, unless the plaintiff can show that the company is able to pay costs 4; but a liquidator taking out a misfeasance summons will not be so required 5.

Where company plaintiff in cross suit.

Where a company is plaintiff in a cross suit it may not be required to give security, for a party who is really a defendent, though nominally a plaintiff, is not to be hampered in his defence 6.

Power of Court to grant relief in certain case.

281. (1) If in any proceeding for negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust against a person to whom this section applies, it appears to the Court hearing the case that that person is or may be liable in respect of the negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust, but that he has acted honestly and reasonably, and that having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including those connected with his appointment, he ought fairly to be excused for the negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust, that Court may relieve him, either wholly or partly, from his liability on such terms as the Court may think fit.

(2) Where any person to whom this section applies has reason to apprehend that any claim will or might be made against him in respect of any negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust, he may apply to the Court for relief, and the Court on any such application shall have the same power to relieve him as under this section it would have had if it had been a Court before which proceedings against that person for negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust had been brought.

(3) The persons to whom this section applies are the following :—

(a) directors of a company ;

(b) managers and managing agents of a company ;

(c) officers of a company ;

(d) persons employed by a company as auditors, whether they are or are not officers of the company.

Amendment.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, this new section has been substitued for the original s. 281. The provisions of this section are fuller than those of the original section which was as follows :—

Power of Court to grant relief in certain cases.

281. If, in any proceedings before any Court against a director of a company for negligence or breach of trust, it appears to such Court that the director is or may be liable in respect of the negligence or breach of trust, but has acted honestly and reasonably, and ought fairly to be excused for the negligence or breach of trust, that Court may relieve him, either wholly or partly, from his liability on such terms as the Court may think proper.

Where section applies.

Although directors are not, properly speaking, trustees, they are treated as such in respect of the company's money which comes into their hands or is under their control, and are liable to make good the loss in case the money is misapplied or misappropriated, as if they were trustees. Thus directors have been held liable to replace dividends paid out of capital 1, money improperly paid to a promoter 2, and money applied ultra vires the company 3. This section however extends to a transaction in fact wholly ultra vires the company, but which the director acting on counsel's considered opinion honestly and reasonably thought to be intra vires 4. It is not however meant to cover gross neglect of a director's ordinary duties over a long series of years 5. A person ceased to be a director for not having acquired his qualification shares (see s. 85) within the time, but continued to act and be paid as a director until some time when he became aware of the defect. Subsequently having acquired the qualification shares he was re-appointed as a director. On a petition by him under this section it was held (1) that the Court had power under this section to relieve him against the penalties imposed under s. 85 and that in the circumstances the petitioner had acted honestly notwithstanding certain negligence, so he ought to be relieved from his liability ; (2) that in the absence of any evidence of the view taken by the shareholders and the creditors as to the petitioner's liability to repay to the company the remuneration received by him as director, the Court ought not to exercise its jurisdiction to relieve him of such liability to the company 1.

Sub-s. (1). Sub-s. (1) makes the Court which hears the case the only Court which has jurisdiction to give relief in respect of the proceedings which has already been commened 2.

Liability of directors.

To render a director liable for negligence, it must be in business sense culpable or gross 3. He is not liable for mistakes or errors of judgment 4. In order to debit the directors with the unrealized amounts of decrees allowed to be time barred, it is necessary for the company to show that the amounts could have been recovered from the judgment-debtors and that the failure to do this was due to the negligence of the directors 5. Where the rate of interest on loan given by a director to the company was inpugned, but no attempt was made on behalf of the company to prove that the money of which the company was in urgent need could have been raised at any lower rate, it was held by the Judicial Committee that the rate of interest was proper 5. Where in disposing of the company's property the directors are guilty of a breach of trust, the absence of dishonesty or fraud being immaterial in such a case, they are not entitled to relief under this section 6.

Negligence.

After a director's death his estate remains liable for breach of trust 7, but not for negligence unless his estate has benefited by the neglect 8.

Section need not be specially pleaded.

This section need not be specially pleaded to enable a director to avail himself of the protection afforded by it 9; but the onus of proving that he acted honestly and reasonably and ought to be fairly excused is on the director seeking relief 10.

Wilful neglect or default.

An act or an omission to do an act is wilful where the person who acts, or omits to act, knows what he is doing and intends to do what he is doing; but if that act or omission amounts to a breach of that person's duty and therefore to negligence, he is not guilty of wilful neglect or default unless he knows that he is committing or intends to commit, a breach of duty, or is recklessly careless in the sense of not caring whether his act or omission is or is not a breach of his duty 11.

"Wilful misconduct" has been defined by Lord Alverstone "as a misconduct to which the will is party as contra-distinguished from accident, and is far beyond any negligence, even gross or culpable negligence, and involves that a person wilfully misconducts himself who knows and appreciates that it is wrong conduct on his part in the existing circumstances to do, or to fail or omit to do (as the case may be) a particular thing, and yet intentionally does, or fails or omits to do it, or persists in the act, failure or omission regardless of consequences or acts with reckless carelessness, not caring what the results of his carelessness may be" 1.

Sub-s. 2. As to the Court having jurisdiction see s. 3 (ante) and notes thereto. The Court would make an order under this sub-section granting the petitioner relief from future or apprehended claims in respect of a purely technical defect, the proceedings already commenced being expressly excepted from that order 2.

Apart from this section a similar provision in the articles is effective to protect a director from liability even for gross negligence 3.

Penalty for false statement.

282. Whoever in any return, report, certificate, balance-sheet or other document, required by or for the purposes of any of the provisions of this Act, wilfully makes a statement false in any material particular, knowing it to be false, shall be punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

False statement.

A statement may be false not only because of what it states, but also because of what it conceals, omits or implies 4. In the last cited case Avory J. after citing the observations of Lord Macnaghten in Gluckstein v. Barnes 5, of Lord Chelmsford in Peek v. Gurney 6, and of Lord Halsbury in Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss 7 said : "It is true that the opinions which I have read were expressed in civil proceedings, but we think that the principles laid down in them 8 are none the less applicable here, especially in view of the fact that in Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss Lord Halsbury expressed his view with regard to criminal as well as civil liability" 9. As observed by Lord Hewart C. J. in a recent case "in order to ascertain the question whether the document (prospectus) was false in all material particulars one may ask oneself this question : 'If the facts had been revealed or even clearly indicated would any man of sense have put his money into the scheme ?'" 10.

In the last cited case a prospectus was issued which purported to invite persons to become shareholders in an old established metal dealers' and broker's business which, with a view to obtaining capital for the development of its normal trade, desired to acquire two other similar businesses. The fact was not discolsed that one of the businesses proposed to be acquired had enormous future gambling commitments arising out of an attempt to corner the pepper market, and there was no reference whatever to pepper in the prospectus : it was held that the omision of the above facts rendered the prospectus false within the meaning of s. 84 of the Larceny Act, 1861. In this connection the following observation of Lord Hewart, Chief Justice of England, is of interest in view of the fact that Courts in this country are often inclined to reject a ruling on the ground that the facts are not on all fours : "On behalf of the appellants it is contended that the judgment of Rex v. Kylsant 1 does not apply. Of course the facts of this case are not identical with the facts in case of Rex v. Kylsant. The question is not whether the facts are identical : the question is whether the well-settled principle exhibited but not for the first time laid down in that case, apply. In our opinion they clearly apply here a fortiori" 2.

Where two of the five directors of a company did not carry out their undertaking for taking up certain number of shares, but a declaration was made to the registrar that every director had paid to the company the sum necessary to be paid on their shares, it was held that the person who made the declartion was guilty of an offence under this section, and it was no defence to urge that in law the two directors had ceased to be directors and therefore the declaration filed by the accused could not refer to them 3. In the last noted case strong observations were made by the Judges on the duties and responsibilities of promoters and officers of limited companies in this country.

Balance-sheet,—when false ?

The Bombay High Court in the case noted below 1 held that the officers of a company should not be prosecuted in respect of a statement made in a balance-sheet where the points involved are really technical matters of correct and incorrect accounting and there is no proof of dishonesty 4. In this case Marten C. J. observed that the Police Courts were not the proper place to fight out disputed questions of finance in big companies or banks ; that could more properly be done in the Civil Courts, more especially as the decision of the Civil Courts is binding. The learned Chief Justice suggested the desirability of amending this section so as to put a check on persons desiring to put the criminal law in motion against officers of companies, especially banking companies, requiring the sanction of the Advocate General before any prosecution is launched under this section.

The Calcutta High Court has however held that under this section it is not necessary that the statement should be such as to deceive any one or that it should even be dishonest. Thus where after a company had begun to earn revenue, current expenditure was debited to organization expenses when it ought to have been debited in revenue accounts in the balance-sheet, the balance-sheet contained a wilful false statement and a technical offence under this section was committed 5. In a more recent case, where in the balance-sheet of a cotton mill which did not do any subsidiary banking business but received deposits from its customers merely to assist its working capital, a certain amount was shown under the heading "Deposits by others," but the amount so shown did not represent the total figure of accumulated deposits but only the incorporated net figure after deducting a loan advanced to another mill which was nowhere separately shown, and it appeared that the managing directors, responsible for the balance-sheet, had an interest in not disclosing the loan granted to the other mill, it was held by Cunliffe & Henderson JJ. that an offence of wilfully making a false statement under this section had been committed 6. In the last cited case Mr. Justice Cunliffe held that the term "wilfully" used in the Act does not contemplate a criminal intention but means merely the spontaneous action of a person who is a free agent, the matters to be determined according to the circumstances of each case. The word "wilfully" occurs in most of the penal sections under the Act and this definition of the word, it is submitted with great respect, is rather difficult to understand. The last saving clause of it however makes it less stringent. His Lordship appears, if one may be permitted to say so, to be on surer ground when he observes: "It is quite obvious that a loan and a deposit are items differing completly in principle from the balance-sheet point of view. Strictly speaking they ought to appear on different sides, for one is an asset and the other is a liability; consolidating the two and presenting them as one item to the readers, to my mind, is a striking case of non-disclosure amounting to a suppression of the truth" 1. Whether there is a false statement in a balance-sheet or a prospectus must be judged by the effect upon the ordinary investor reading the statement in an ordinarily careful manner in which an investor would so read it 2.

Persons in the position of managing directors of a company are entrusted with the money of the public and are bound to deal with it as trustees. They cannot be allowed with impunity to publish false balance-sheets in order to conceal their own improper conduct 2.

Where the balance-sheet shows a cash profit for the year by adding bad or doubtful debts, it amounts to a false statement and a very material one; the fact that no dividend was declared makes no difference 3. A person signing a false balance-sheet as a director, manager or auditor is liable to prosecutlon under this section 3.

To deceive & to defraud—distinction.

An intention to deceive constitutes the offence without proof of any intent to defraud; for "to deceive" is to induce a state of mind and "to defraud" is to induce a course of conduct 4. If a statement is demonstrably false and nobody can reasonably be expected to put it forward as true, then and then only the party responsible for such statement may be held criminally liable; any ex posto facto consideration of the view held by the directors with regard to the balance-sheet should not be a determining factor in a case under this section 5.

As to what a balance-sheet should contain see s. 132 and notes and s. 132A.

Penalty for misapplication of securities by employers.

282B. (1) All moneys or securities deposited with a company by its employees in pursuance of their contracts of service with the company shall be kept or deposited by the company in a special account to be opened by the company for the purpose in a scheduled bank as defined in clause (e) of section 2 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, and no portion thereof shall be utilised by the company except for the purposes agreed to in the contract of service.

(2) Where a provident fund has been constituted by a company for its employees or any class of its employees, all moneys contributed to such fund (whether by the company or by the employees) or accruing by way of interest or otherwise to such fund after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, shall be invested, and shall be invested only in securities mentioned or referred to in clauses (a) to (e) of section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, and all moneys belonging to such fund at the commencement of the said Act which are not so invested shall be invested in such securities by annual instalments not exceeding ten in number and not less in amount in any year than one-tenth of the whole amount of such moneys.

(3) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the rules of any fund to which sub-section (2) applies or in any contract between a company and its employees, no employee shall be entitled to receive in respect of such portion of the amount to his credit in such fund as is invested in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) interest at a rate exceeding the rate of interest yielded by such investment.

(4) An employee shall be entitled on request made in this behalf to the company to see the bank's receipt for any money or security such as is referred to in sub-section (1) and sub-section (2).

(5) Any director, managing agent, manager or other officer of the company who knowingly contravenes or permits or authorises the contravention of the provisions of this section shall be liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Sections 282A and 282B have been introduced by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. For their effect see Introduction.

Employee's security money.

Sub-s. (1). Where a person has deposited money with a bank as security for the good behaviour of an employee, the money so deposited constitutes trust money in the hands of the bank and on the liquidation of the bank the depositor is entitled to prority over other creditors of the bank. Trust moneys are entirely outside the liquidation 1. Where promissory notes are so deposited with a bank, it is impossible for the depositor to trace the subsequent disposal of these notes. That is a matter which is within the special knowledge of the bank and the burden of proof with reference to that is on the bank. Hence if the bank does not produce its accounts in Court, if cannot be heard to say that there is no evidence as to what has become of these promissory notes 1. Where realizations of assets of a bank subsequent to its liquidation are really only the previously existing assets present in the bank's strong rooms changed into different forms, the charge in respect of trust moneys deposited with the bank extends also to these subsequent realizations of assets 1. Where the depositor of the aforesaid money serves a notice on a bank demanding return of the money, there is no express revocation of the trust by the demand. On the contrary the demand is to be regarded as a demand for performance of the trust. The trust cannot be extinguished until the purpose of the trust has completely been fulfilled by the return of the trust property to the depositor subject to the lawful claims of the bank against that property 1.

Provident fund—if trust money.

Sub-s. (2). When the Alliance Bank of Simla, Ltd. went into voluntary liquidation, its employees who were members of a provident fund established by the bank for their benefit, claimed payment in full of the amounts of the balances, standing to their respective credits in the books of the bank, in priority to the unsecured creditors : it was held by Sanderson C. J. and Richardson J. that no distinction could be drawn between those members' subscriptions and the bank's contributions and the credits in respect of interests. Both the subscriptions and the contributions being trust money, the employees were entitled to priority not only in respect of the contributions made by them but also in respect of the contributions made by the bank together with interest provided by the bank. The amounts were the properties of the employees in the possession and under the control of the bank 2. Where the amount of a provident fund lying in deposit in a bank to the credit of the company has not been invested in the authorized securiies as provided by this section, the company is guilty of breach of trust, and the bank, with knowledge of this, must be held to have participated in the breach of trust 3. Vice-Chancellor Malins in Gray v. Lewis 4 observed : "All persons who obtain possession of trust funds with a knowledge that their title is derived from a breach of trust will be compelled to restore such trust funds," Where the amount of the provident fund lying in deposit in a bank to the credit of the company has not been invested in the authorized securities as provided in this section, the company is guilty of a breach of trust, and the bank with knowledge of this must be held to have participated in the breach of trust 5.

Where it is a breach of trust.

The fact that a bank is given notice that money deposited is trust money does not however make the bank a trustee thereof 5. The legal consequences of such notice is only that the bank should not participate in a breach of trust by the trustee, because a banker who receives into his possession moneys of which his customer has, to his knowledge, become the owner in a fiduciary character, contracts his duty not to part with them, even at the mandate of his customer, for purposes which he knows are inconsistent with the customer's fiduciary character and duty 6. This section imposes on a company the obligation to invest all provident fund moneys in securities mentioned in s. 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 and all such moneys belonging to the fund at the commencement of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 which are not so invested shall be invested in such securities, by annual instalments not exceeding ten in number and not less in amount than one-tenth of the whole amount of such moneys. On the coming into force of the present section, if the said moneys are not so invested as aforesaid, the obligation of the company is to invest a tenth of the said moneys in that year and in every succeeding year in the authorized securities, and the balance of the moneys can be invested in any authorized bank or banks according to the rules of the institution. In so far as the company has not invested the said sum in any authorized security, the company is guilty of a breach of trust and a bank holding the money in deposit must be held to participate in that breach of trust and the bank can therefore be compelled to restore such trust fund, i.e., in respect of so much of the provident fund as it is obligatory on the company to invest in authorized securities 1. The Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 came into force on 15th January, 1937. See Introduction (p. 1).

Where not.

Where a company has deposited its employee's security fund and provident fund in a bank prior to the coming into operation of this section and the deposit is renewed after that section came into force (i.e., after the 15th January, 1937), it cannot be said that the renewal constitutes a breach of trust on the ground that the moneys are not invested in approved securities mentioned in s. 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 as required by the present section. So far as the amount of the security deposit is concerned, there can be no breach of trust, because the bank is not a trustee in respect of the same, although the company may be a trustee and the money be trust money in its hands. In regard to the provident fund deposit there can be a breach of trust only in respect of so much of it as is required to be invested in authorized securities, namely, the annual instalments for the year or years in question, and there can be no breach of trust in respect of the balance 2.

As to the securities mentioned in s. 20 of the Indian Trusts Act II of 1882, see notes to s. 277K ante.

Penalty for improper use of word "Limited."

283. If any person or persons trade or carry on business under any name or title of which "Limited" is the last word, that person or those persons shall, unless duly incorporated with limited liability, be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees for every day upon which that name or title has been used.

Saving of pending proceedings for winding up.

2. Trichinopoly T. H. P. Fund v. O. L. Travancore National & Q. Bank [1939] M. W. N. 1069.

For the old s. 284 this new section has been substituted by the amending Act II of 1938. The old section ran as follows :

> "284. The provisions of this Act with respect to winding up shall not apply to any company of which the winding up has commenced before the commencement of this Act, but every such company shall be wound up in the same manner and with the same incidents as if this Act had not been passed, and, for the purposes of the winding up, the Indian Companies Act, 1882, shall be deemed to remain in full force."

The Incian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936 came into force on 15th January, 1937—vide Introduction (p. 1).

Operation of the new Act.

The plain and rational meaning of the old section was that this Act did not operate upon proceedings arising out of the winding up which commenced after its enforcement, i.e., 1st April, 1914, and that no part of the Act had application to the pending liquidation 1.

Saving of document.

285. Every instrument of transfer or other document made before the commencement of this Act in pursuance of any enactment hereby repealed, shall be of the same force as if this Act had not been passed, and for the purposes of that instrument or document the repealed enactment shall be deemed to remain in full force.

Former registration offices, registers, and registrars, continued.

286. (1) The offices existing at the commencement of this Act for registration of joint-stock companies shall be continued as if they had been established under this Act.

(2) Registers of companies kept in any such existing offices shall respectively be deemed part of the registers of companies to be kept under this Act.

Savings for Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912, and Provident Insurance Societies Act, 1912.

For the Acts mentioned in this section now see the Insurance Act IV of 1938.

The provisions of the Companies Act apply to the life assurance companies registered under that Act except in those matters dealt with by the Life Assurance Companies Act 2. The effect of this section and s. 22 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912 (now see s. 53 et seq. of the Insurance Act IV of 1938), is to incorporate into the latter Act the relevant provisions about winding up contained in the present Act. In the case of a petition presented by the policy-holders of a life assurance company the petition must be by at least ten policy-holders while in the case of any other company a single shareholder or creditor may present such petition [1].

Where a statutory deposit has been made by an assurance company, the policy-holders of the class in respect of which the deposit was made and the general creditors of the company whose claims arise in connection with the business of that class have in a liquidation a claim in priority to other creditors over the investments made by the company representing that deposit [2]. Where at the date of a compulsory winding up of an insurance company, the company was transacting life assurance business, bond investment and endowment certificate business and general accident insurance business, all the creditors of the company ranked pari passu against all the assets, except in so far as the receipts of either the life assurance fund or the bond investment fund could be traced into any particular asset [3].

Effect of repeal.

Proceedings for obtaining registration of a company and a grant of certificate commences, within the meaning of s. 6 of the General Clauses Act 1, when the memorandum and the articles of association are received in the registrar's office and a repeal of the Act after that date does not affect those proceedings, and the provisions of the Act repealed apply to the company, and not the later Act 2, relating to the right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under the enactment repealed. Presumption.

Shareholders are presumed to know the Act as well as the memorandum and the articles of association 3. In the absence of any proof to the contrary, it must be taken that Table A has been incorporated in the articles of association 4.

1. Business.

2. The directors shall have regard to the restrictions on the commencement of business imposed by section 103 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, if, and so far as, those restrictions are binding upon the company.

See notes to s. 103.

Directors. As regards the powers, duties and liabilities of directors see notes to s. 2, sub-s. (1), cl. (5), s. 83, s. 83A, s. 83B, s. 85, s. 86, s. 91A, s. 91B, s. 91C, s. 100 and regulations 68 to 75 of this Table.

The restrictions imposed by s. 103 do not apply to private companies.

Shares.

3. Subject to the provisions, if any, in that behalf of the memorandum of association of the company, and without prejudice to any special rights previously conferred on the holders of existing shares in the company, any share in the company may be issued with such preferred, deferred or other special rights or such restrictions, whether in regard to dividend, voting, return of share capital, or otherwise, as the company may from time to time by special resolution determine and any preference share may with the sanction of a special resolution be issued on the terms that it is or at the option of the company is liable to be redeemed.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words in italics have been added.

Classes of shares. Shares may be preferential as to capital, as to dividend or as to both, or may have peculiar privileges in the matter of voting or in other respects. These are generally called "preference" shares as distinguished from "ordinary" shares or "deferred" shares. There may be shares of more classes than three, each of which has peculiar rights and conditions attached to it such as "preference" and "second preference" shares.

As to what are "founders' shares" see notes to s. 93, sub-s. 1 (a).

Right of alteration. Where the memorandum of association provides for the division of the capital into different classes with different rights, they cannot be altered except as part of a reorganization or arrangement under s. 54 or s. 153. But it is otherwise if the memorandum itself reserves the right to alteration 1. An article like this is valid, when the memorandum is silent on the point 2.

Preference shares. A company having no authority under its memorandum or articles of association to create any preference between different classes of shares, may by special resolution alter the articles so as to authorize the directors to issue preference shares by way of increase of capital 3. If the memorandum or the articles are silent, there is no implied condition that all the shares shall rank equally (last note, last page). Where the memorandum of association provides that the preference shareholders are entitled to a cumulative dividend before any dividend is paid or capital repaid to the holders of the ordinary shares, the provision does not prevent the preference shareholders from asserting their statutory right to participate with the ordinary shareholders in any surplus assets 1.

Construction of memo. & articles.

As regards the rights of the preference shareholders ordinarily, except in respect of such matters as must by statute be provided for by the memorandum of association, it is not to be regarded as the dominant document but is to be read in conjunction with the articles 2. But where the provisions of the memorandum with regard to the rights of the preference shareholders are neither ambiguous nor in need of being supplemented, the two documents should not be read together 3.

Upon construction of the memorandum and articles of a company it has been held in England that where they contained an exhaustive delimitation of the rights of the preference shareholders, in the event of a winding up the latter would be entitled to a return of their capital but not to participate in any surplus assets 4.

Rights of holders of preference, ordinary & deferred shares.

Where there are preference shares and ordinary shares, the holders of both classes are, subject to any provision to the contrary, entitled to share pari passu in the surplus assets in the winding up, after paying up the whole of the capital 5. But a preference share prima facie only gives right to a preferential dividend and not right to a preferential payment of the amount of the share out of the capital in the case of a winding up 6.

Preference shares may either give a preferential right only as to dividend or both as to dividend and to the return of capital 7. The preferential dividend may be cumulative or payable only out of the profits of each year. Preference shares are not prima facie entitled to receive any dividend beyond the fixed preferential dividend 8. The preference shares bear the same relation to the ordinary shares as the latter do to the deferred shares. Whatever preference or postponements are intended to be created should be clearly set forth in the memorandum or the articles or in the special resolution authorizing the creation. If they are determined by the memorandum they cannot subsequently be varied 9, except where such variation is contemplated in the memorandum itself 10. But if it is provided in the articles only, the company may take power by special resolution to effect the necessary alteration 11.

Uncalled share money at the date of the winding up forms part of the assets or capital of the company. The preference shareholders being entitled in winding up to return of capital in priority to other shares, unpaid ordinary share capital can be called up to meet the amount required to pay the preference share capital and which can be repaid to the preference shareholders out of calls made upon the ordinary shareholders to the extent of the unpaid capital on the issued shares. Such payment is of course subject to the discharge of all debts owing by the company and payment of charges ranking prior to the preference shares 1. Where the memorandum of association provides: "No dividend shall be payable except out of the net profits arising from the business of the company", there can be no dividend payable to the preference shareholders from the amount of the share capital when there have been no profits, although under the articles preference shares confer the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend 1.

The provision as to the preference does not give a preference in regard to the division of capital unless it is so expressly mentioned 2; and unless the rights of the preference shareholders are clearly expressed in the memorandum, articles or special resolution authorizing the creation, they may, upon a reconstruction of the company, find themselves reduced to the position of ordinary shareholders 3.

Where the articles were altered sanctioning the issue of preference shares and providing that the dividends on them should be paid out of profits only and that in the event of winding up the holders of the preference shares should be entitled to have the surplus assets applied first in paying off the capital paid on the preference shares, secondly in paying off the arrears of the preferential dividend, it was held that all unpaid preferential dividends were "arrears" of preferential dividends, although no profits had been earned by the company, so that subject to the payment off of the preference shares the surplus assets were applicable in the first place in paying off the whole of the preferential dividend down to the commencement of the winding up 4.

If the preference capital is repayable "with interest" this means with interest from the date of the winding up 5.

If preference shares are issued when there is no power to do so, or in an irregular manner, the subscribers thereof are entitled to have their money returned and they are creditors of the company 6.

Holders of ordinary shares cannot surrender their shares and receive in exchange preference shares of similar amounts 7.

If the right to a preference is conferred in the winding up, but is not further dealt with, the preference capital is to be repaid first, then the ordinary capital, and the surplus divided among both classes in proportion to the nominal amount of share 8.

If it is provided in the memorandum or the articles that the rights of the holders of preference shares should come first, they cannot be postponed 9; but if the preference shares have been issued subject to the rights of the company to issue fresh capital having such preference and priorities as shall be agreed upon, the original preference shares may be postponed 1.

Where a company proposing to issue new preference shares ranking pari passu with its existing preference shares served notice on one of its shareholders (sued on behalf of himself and other preference shareholders) and an originating summons was issued for determination of certain questions with reference to the proposed issue, Buckley, J. refused to appoint the defendant to represent the class and said that he would not decide the questions so as to bind the class of preference shareholders unless a meeting of them was first called which nominated a person to represent the class. He however decided the question as between the company and the defendant 2.

Where the articles provided : "Shares shall be under the control of the directors who may allot or otherwise dispose of the same to such persons on such terms and conditions and at such times as the directors think fit and with full power to give to any person the call of any shares either at par or at a premium and for such time and for such consideration as the directors think fit," it was held that the powers conferred on the directors included the power to control the character of the shares 3.

Court's power.

The Court has power in a proper case to confirm a resolution for reduction of capital notwithstanding that the voting powers may be thereby affected 4.

See notes to ss. 6 and 192 and reg. 98 post.

4. If at any time the share capital is divided into different classes of shares, the rights attached to any class (unless otherwise provided by the terms of issue of the shares of that class) may subject to the provisions of section 66A of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 be varied with the consent in writing of the holders of three-fourths of the issued shares of that class, or with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution passed at a separate general meeting of the holders of the shares of the class. To every such separate general meeting the provisions of these regulations relating to general meetings shall mutatis mutandis apply, but so that the necessary quorum shall be two persons at least holding or representing by proxy one-third of the issued shares of the class.

If a class meeting held under this regulation stands adjourned under reg. 52 for want of quorum, the latter part of reg. 52 will not apply and the full quorum will be required at the adjourned meeting 5.

As to what is an extraordinary resolution see s. 81 and notes thereto.

For the provisions relating to general meetings see regs. 49 to 67 post. See notes to ss. 6 and 49 and regs. 3 and 98.

5. No share shall be offered to the public for subscription except upon the terms that the amount payable on application shall be at least five per cent. of the nominal amount of the share; and the directors shall, as regards any allotment of shares, duly comply with such of the provisions of sections 101 and 104 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, as may be applicable thereto.

See ss. 101 and 104 and notes to those sections.

6. Every person whose name is entered as a member in the register of members shall, without payment, be entitled to a certificate under the common seal of the company specifying the share or shares held by him and the amount paid up thereon: Provided that, in respect of a share or shares held jointly by several persons the company shall not be bound to issue more than one certificate, and delivery of a certificate for a share to one of several joint-holders shall be sufficient delivery to all.

One or more certificates.

The articles of a private company contained the following articles: "Art. 12. Every member shall be entitled to one certificate for all the shares registered in his name or to several certificates each for a part of such shares...". "Art. 14. Every member shall be entitled to one certificate gratis, but for every subsequent certificate issued to him the sum of one shilling or such smaller sum as the directors may determine shall be paid to the company." Held, that any shareholder of the company was entitled from time to time to require the company to issue to him in place of a share certificate for a number of shares, on payment of the appropriate amount, a number of certificates, each for one or more shares making together the number of shares included in the share certificate surrendered [1].

See ss. 29, 31 and 108 and notes to those sections.

7. If a share certificate is defaced, lost or destroyed, it may be renewed on payment of such fee, if any, not exceeding eight annas, and on such terms, if any, as to evidence and indemnity as the directors think fit.

Indemnity.

Where one of the articles provided: "If any certificate be lost or destroyed, then upon proof to the satisfaction of the directors, or in default of proof, on such indemnity, as the directors deem adequate, being given, a new certificate in lieu thereof shall be given to the party entitled to such lost or destroyed certificate," it was held by Buckland J. that the clause gave an absolute discretion to the directors as to the indemnity to be furnished with which the Court would not interfere [2].

See notes to s. 29.

8. Except to the extent allowed by section 54A of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 no part of the funds of the company shall be employed in the purchase of, or in loans upon the security of, the company's shares.

Shares once duly issued cannot be cancelled at the request of the holder of such shares, for this will amount to a reduction of capital 1. For other cases see notes to s. 55.

Lien.

9. The company shall have a lien on every share (not being a fully-paid share) for all moneys (whether presently payable or not) called or payable at a fixed time in respect of that share, and the company shall also have a lien on all shares (other than fully-paid shares) standing registered in the name of a single person, for all moneys presently payable by him or his estate to the company ; but the directors may at any time declare any share to be wholly or in part exempt from the provisions of this clause. The company's lien, if any, on a share shall extend to all dividends payable thereon.

No lien on directors' fees.

A company has usually a lien on shares and dividends due on them for realization of money due on them ; but it has no lien on fees due to a director. The company cannot, without the consent of the director, adjust the fees due to him towards interest due from him on calls on shares which had not been paid in time 2.

Company can waive the lien.

A lien conferred upon a company by its articles on all shares registered in the name of a member for his debts to the company, such member's title to transfer the same while he remains indebted being thereby made dependent on the approval of the directors, is valid 3. Such a lien may be discharged by a new arrangement between the creditor and the debtor, the terms of which are incompatible with its retention, or which show an intention to waive it 3 ; for the provisions being for the protection of the company, it can waive the lien 3.

Where an indebted shareholder applied to the company for time and the indulgence was granted in consideration of his authorizing certain shares, other than those on which a lien is claimed, to be sold on default without the delay prescribed in the articles, it was held that no limitation of the lien on the shares was contemplated by either party and that a transfer by the indebted shareholder of such shares should not be registered 3.

When the lien is lost.

The company's lien is lost if it registers a transfer of the shares subject to the lien 4. A dividend declared after execution but before registration of a transfer may however be retained under the lien 5. If a transfer is however passed by mistake which is corrected within a reasonable time, it may be validated 6. If a member pledges his shares to some third party as security for a loan and the company has notice of the transaction, the company loses its lien for all debts owing by that member to the company subsequent to the knowledge of the company of the transaction[1]. The company will be deemed to have knowledge of such transaction when the managing director[2] or other directors[3] had notice of a charge, although in their private capacity.

Money payable will include a director's fees paid to a person under mistake[4].

Assignment of lien.

A company has a lien on shares for money owing to the company where the lien is given by the articles or by agreement[5]. If the company has lien on A's shares for a debt and raises the money from B to pay the debt, A may call upon the company to assign its lien to B[6].

Priority.

If a member mortgages his shares and the mortgagee gives notice to the company and then the shareholder incurs a liability to the company, the mortgagee has priority over the company's lien[7]. But the articles may provide that any mortgagee who takes with notice of the company's lien may be postponed to that lien. The company may enforce the lien against the registered shareholder, even though he is only a trustee[8].

If the articles give the company "a first and paramount lien and charge" for the debts of the shareholders, the company cannot claim priority in respect of money becoming due from the holder to the company after notice that security has been given upon the shares to another person[9].

Where before an attachment the company had no lien on the shares for its debts, the attachment has the effect of preventing the company from giving itself a lien over the shares with a retrospective operation. In such cases the claim of the attaching creditor prevails against that of the company[10].

A provision in the articles making a shareholder's debt to the company a charge on his shares applies to the case of debtors who afterwards become shareholders[11].

Effect of death.

The lien does not cease on the death of a member, but continues available against his executors, though not themselves members[12]. Where under the articles of association a company had a first and paramount lien upon all shares registered in the name of a member for his debts, liabilities and engagements, the articles created an equitable charge on the shares, and on the death of the shareholder his widow to whom he bequeathed some of the shares took them subject to the obligation to discharge a proportionate amount of the moneys owing to the company by the testator at the time of his death[13].

Articles cannot be altered to extend the lien to fully paid up shares[14].

As to priorities of the company and third parties advancing money on the security of shares see notes to s. 33.

The provisions as to lien and the power to sell under reg. 10 are new.

10. The company may sell, in such manner as the directors think fit, any shares on which the company has a lien, but no sale shall be made unless some sum in respect of which the lien exists is presently payable, nor until the expiration of fourteen days after a notice in writing, stating and demanding payment of such part of amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, has been given to the registered holder for the time being of the share, or the person entitled by reason of his death or insolvency to the share.

11. The proceeds of the sale shall be applied in payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, and the residue shall (subject to a like lien for sums not presently payable as existed upon the shares prior to the sale) be paid to the person entitled to the shares at the date of the sale. The purchaser shall be registered as the holder of the shares, and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, nor shall his title to the shares be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the sale.

Calls on shares.

12. The directors may from time to time make calls upon the members in respect of any moneys unpaid on their shares, provided that no call shall exceed one-fourth of the nominal amount of the share, or be payable at less than one month from the last call ; and each member shall (subject to receiving at least fourteen days' notice specifying the time or times of payments) pay to the company at the time or times so specified the amount called on his shares.

13. The joint-holders of a share shall be jointly and severally liable to pay all calls in respect thereof.

Call is necessary.

Under s. 21, cl. (2) the liability of the shareholders in respect of the balance due on the shares is a debt accruing due from the time when their liability commenced, that is, from the time when they first took up the shares. This liability is not however enforceable until a valid notice has been given in accordance with the articles of association and the provisions of the Act ; the mere passing of the resolution will not constitute a valid call [1]. The mere demand by a company which has acquired the rights of another company in respect of its uncalled capital cannot take the place of a formal call [1].

[1] Pabna Dhanabhander Co. v. Foezuddin [1932] C. 716, 59 Cal. 1186, 36 C. W. N. 589.

Authority which will make the call.

As the Act is silent as to the authority which will make calls in a going company, the provision should be made in the articles. Where they empower the board of directors to make calls and fix the liability on the shareholders to pay the amount at the time and place appointed, the call can only be made by a resolution of the board indicating the amount of the call and the time and place at which and the person to whom it is to be paid [1]. Even if a notice is subsequently issued to the shareholders, it cannot cure any defect in this respect [1]. An instalment payable by the terms of issue is not a call [2].

Who can exercise the power.

Unless the power to make calls is expressly reserved to the company in general meeting, it may be exercised by the directors [3]. Directors may make calls with the sanction of a general meeting or of the liquidator in a voluntary winding up [4]. In making calls the requirements and formalities stated in the articles must be strictly observed and complied with [5]. An invalid call may however be confirmed by a duly convened and constituted board meeting [6].

Where call is invalid.

A call made by the directors when the number of directors is below the minimum prescribed in the articles [7], or at a meeting without the necessary quorum [8], is prima facie invalid. But if a director is a party to the resolution making the call, he will be estopped from denying his liability [9].

Resolution.

It is not necessary for a resolution making the call to specify the time for payment or the person to whom or the place where the call is to be paid [10]. In the last cited case it has been held that when the agents sign in the notice of call "by order of the board," there is the presumption that the agents act properly. The first proposition however appears to be doubtful. But their Lordships guardedly say that even if such a resolution is necessary it is a matter which the parties can waive. In an earlier case Madgavkar and Allison JJ. held [11] that where in their resolutions the directors omitted to mention the amount, time or place of payment, the calls were invalid and ultra vires and the company was not bound by such ultra vires acts.

A call is owing from the date of the resolution making it, although if may be payable at a future date [12].

Court's power to interfere.

As a general rule the Court will not interfere with the internal management of a company by inquiring into the necessity or propriety of making a call in a going company [13]. But it may do so in exceptional cases, as for instance, where a call was made on two only of several shareholders [14].

Making two calls at one meeting.

Where the amount of a call is limited by the articles, the directors can validly at one meeting make two calls, each for the maximum amount, payable on different dates 1. A call is owing from the day on which it is made although it be "payable" on a subsequent date 2.

Money or money's worth to be paid.

The specialty debt under the English law resulting from a call on shares can only be discharged by accord and satisfaction when the company has received money or money's worth. For this purpose the consideration given by way of payment must be something which is regarded by the patties as fairly representing the sum to be discharged. The consideration must not be a clear blind or clearly colourable or illusory 3.

Liability on shares issued at a discount.

It being ultra vires for a company to issue shares at a discount, or by way of bonus, although authorized to do so by the articles, the holders of the shares so issued are not thereby relieved from liability in a winding up to calls for the amount unpaid on their shares for the adjustment of rights of the contributories inter se as well as for payment of the company's debts and costs of the winding up 4.

Defence in an action for call.

To an action for calls it is not sufficient answer for the defendant to say that he has repudiated the contract because of misrepresentation in the prospectus. In order to succeed he must show not only that he has repudiated the contract, but that he has after discovering the misrepresentation complained and taken prompt steps to have his name removed from the register 5. A statement that "no further calls are contemplated" affords no defence to an action 6.

Injunction against forfeiture.

Where the liability of the shareholder to pay the call is questioned, the Court may restrain the company from declaring the shares forfeited during the pendency of the suit 7. In such cases the plaintiff is usually required to pay the amount of the call into Court, but this is not necessarily a condition precedent 8.

Future call.

If a share has been forfeited for non-payment of a call, a future call for the same amount may be made upon the purchaser of the forfeited shares 9. Where it is stated that "no further calls are contemplated" this does not amount to an assurance or pledge that no call at any time shall be made 10. A company may prove, in the administration of the estate of a deceased shareholder whose estate is insolvent, for the estimated value of the liability to future calls in respect of the shares standing in his name 11.

A contract allowing payment of share money by instalments is determined by the Transfer of shares before call becomes payable. If a transfer of shares has been made and registered after a call has been made, but before the amount has become payable, the transferor, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, may be liable 3. In this connection the following dictum of Lindley L. J. should be borne in mind : "The word 'share' does not denote rights only—it denotes obligation also and when a member transfers his share, he transfers all his rights and obligations as a shareholder as from the date of the transfer. He does not transfer rights to dividends and bonuses already declared, nor does he transfer liabilities in respect of calls already made but he transfers his rights to payments and his liabilities to future calls" 3.

When shares are transferred after a call has been made, the liability is not transferred to the transferee 3. The company can protect itself by refusing to register the transfer until the call is paid 4. But if the former holder pays calls, even after forfeiture, this will relieve the purchaser 5.

Set off. A debt due and owing by the company to a shareholder, but not one which is only payable at a future date, can be set off against a sum due from him upon calls while the company is a going concern 6. An agreement to set off a present liability of the company against future calls is also good 7. But a set off within three months of a winding up will be regarded as a fraudulent preference 8.

An agreement that the calls shall not be payable in cash but only by set off against goods supplied by the shareholder is ultra vires 9.

Call after death. A call made after the death of a member is payable out of his estate 10. In the case of bankruptcy of a member, the company may prove not only for calls actually made, but also for the estimated amount of future calls 11.

Payment in advance of call. The directors may, if authorized by the articles, allow shareholders to pay amounts in advance of calls and may pay interest thereon if it be for the benefit of the company 12. Such a shareholder becomes a creditor of the company ; so, if there is no profit the interest may be paid out of capital 13. But it does not follow that he is entitled to repayment of the amount so advanced 14.

An agreement by a company to treat moneys which the director pays under a guarantee of the company's overdraft as payment in advance of calls on his shares does not enable him to set off moneys so paid, after winding up commenced, against calls made on the shares by the liquidator 15.

Limitation.

Under art. 112 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) the period of limitation is 3 years from the time when the call is payable. As to the deposit and allotment moneys the limitation is 3 years from the date on which the allottee, even if he is a subscriber to the memorandum, is registered as a shareholder 1. But if the company goes into liquidation, the official liquidator can enforce a call though as against the company it is barred by limitation 2 or by the provision of the Code of Civil Procedure 3.

In Sorabji v. Iswardas 2 Sergent C. J. observed as follows : "This section [s. 61 of Act VI of 1882 (s. 156 of the Act of 1913)] corresponds to s. 38 of the English Companies Act of 1862, the effect of which was fully considered by Sir George Jessel in in re Whitehouse & Co. 9 Ch. D. 596 at p. 600. After pointing out that the section creates a new liability as regards the shareholders the Master of the Rolls held that the contribution under the section included unpaid calls made before the winding up as well as those made after the winding up. 'It is true', he says, 'that a call made before the winding up is a debt due to the company, but that does not affect the new liability to contribute.' Nor can it in this view of the section affect the liability created by the section that the debt was barred." This view was fully endorsed by Piggot and Walsh JJ. in Jagannath v. U. P. Flour Mills 4 where their Lordships said : "A question of principle has been raised apparently for the first time in this Court namely, as to whether an unpaid call, due from a shareholder to a company, which has become time-barred under art. 112, Limitation Act and has ceased to be recoverable debt by the company, may yet be recovered if at any date subsequent to its having become time-barred the company is wound up." Then after referring to ss. 125 and 151 of the Act of 1882 corresponding to ss. 159 and 187 of the present Act their Lordships went on—"Really it is not even the right of a company which is being enforced by a liquidator. It is a statutory right of the creditors of a company to enforce against the contributories of an insolvent company through the Court the obligation which the shareholders took upon themselves, when they originally subscribed, in the event of insolvency subsequently overtaking the company." But in a recent case where the purchaser of unpaid calls in execution of a mortgage decree against the company, after the company had gone into liquidation, sued the shareholder for the unpaid call, it was held by C. C. Ghose, A. C. J. and Pearson J. that Art. 112 of the Limitation Act applied and the suit was barred by limitation and that the fact that the liquidator was a party to the suit did not improve the plaintiff's position 5. See in this connection notes to s. 21 ante and Viswanath v. Holyland Cinetone, Ltd. 6.

Now the question is whether in respect of this new liability arising under s. 156 of the present Act arts. 112, 115 or 120 of the Limitation Act, will be applicable. The Bombay High Court held in 1886 that art. 120 applied 7. But the Allahabad High Court has recently held that in such a case art. 115 applies and where the shares had been forfeited time runs from the date of forfeiture 1. The Oudh Chief Court has however pointed out in a later case 2 that when a suit to recover call money has been barred by limitation, the fact that simply because the name is kept in the register as a shareholder, the forfeiture does not revive the debt and the company cannot claim that limitation should run from the date of forfeiture. See notes to ss. 156 and 187.

The power of making calls being in the nature of trust should be exercised for the general benefit of the company 3.

Jurisdiction.

A suit by a company for recovery of arrears of allotment money and call money due on share allotted is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes 4. S. 159 (2) makes an exception with regard to the liability of a contributory, no claim founded on such liability being cognizable by any Court of Small Causes sitting outside the Presidency towns. But Mr. Justice Patterson of the Calcutta High Court seems to have taken the view that a claim against a shareholder of the balance due on his shares is not of the nature of a claim cognizable by a Court of Small Causes in view of s. 159 (2) 5.

For calls in the winding up see s. 187 and notes thereto.

14. If a sum called in respect of a share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof, the person from whom the sum is due shall pay interest upon the sum at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment, but the directors shall be at liberty to waive payment of that interest wholly or in part.

Interest after forfeiture of shares.

Interest on calls in arrear can be recovered after forfeiture of the share for non-payment of calls 6 especially if there is a special contract in the articles such as this : "Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall notwithstanding be liable to pay all calls, instalments, interest and expenses in respect of such shares at the time of forfeiture together with interest thereon from the time of forfeiture until payment at......per cent. per annum" 7. But where a share has been forfeited before the day for payment for a second call arrives, there is no liability for payment of the second call 6.

Where the articles provide that forfeiture should extinguish all rights relating to the share, but that the shareholder should remain liable to pay calls owing at the time of forfeiture, interest cannot be recovered upon the arrears of call 8 in the absence of a special contract 9.

A forfeiture after notice in which interest is claimed from the date of the call and not from the date fixed for payment is invalid 1.

In the absence of a provision for interest after notice to pay on a fixed day, interest was allowed at 5 p. c. per annum in the case noted below 2.

15. The provisions of these regulations as to payment of interest shall apply in the case of non-payment of any sum which, by the terms of issue of a share, becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share, or by way of premium, as if the same had become payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified.

16. The directors may make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the holders in the amount of calls to be paid and in the times of payment.

This regulation is authorized by s. 49. In the absence of such an arrangement, calls made on one or more members only to the exclusion of the others are prima facie invalid 3.

17. The directors may, if they think fit, receive from any member willing to advance the same all or any part of the moneys uncalled and unpaid upon any shares held by him; and upon all or any of the moneys so advanced may (until the same would, but for such advance, become presently payable) pay interest at such rate (not exceeding, without the sanction of the company in general meeting, six per cent.) as may be agreed upon between the member paying the sum in advance and the directors.

Payment in advance of call.

The directors may receive payment from a shareholder of any amounts remaining unpaid on his shares 4, and may pay out of capital or any other asset interest on sums so paid up in advance of calls 4. As to the construction of an agreement to pay interest at a particular rate free of income tax see Noel v. Trust Agency Co. 5. There is nothing ultra vires in an article providing for payment of such interest out of capital 4. The money so paid will not however be regarded as a loan to the company and cannot be repaid 6.

Power is fiduciary.

The power is a fiduciary one and must be exercised bona fide for the benefit of the company 7. If the directors exercise the power for their own interest only, the transaction may be set aside 8. But the directors not being trustees for the creditors, the latter cannot complain if the power has been exercised in such a way as to diminish the fund available for payment of the company's debts 1.

Right in surplus assets.

In the winding up of a company if after payment of debts there are surplus assets for division amongst the shareholders, the amount paid in advance with interest up to the date of repayment will be repayable before the balance is divided 2.

Transfer and transmission of shares.

18. The instrument of transfer of any share in the company shall be executed both by the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain holder of the share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register of members in respect thereof.

Distinction between transfer and transmission.

"The word 'transferred' applied to transfers inter vivos and must be distinguished from transmission, which is a proper term for what happens on death" 3. "Transmission, is used to express the legal result which follows from death, but not to express the actual step which is necessary to invest the new holder. That is done by transfer", i.e. a change in the register of members 4.

Share includes rights as well as obligations.

"The word share does not denote rights only—it denotes obligations also ; and when a member transfers his share, he transfers all his rights and obligations as a shareholder as from the date of the transfer. He does not transfer rights to dividends and bonuses already declared, nor does he transfer liabilities in respect of calls already made, but he transfers his rights to future payments and his liabilities to future calls" 5.

Blank transfers.

In the case of a transfer of shares in blank, the transferee is entitled to fill in the necessary particulars including his own name as transferee and the date of the transfer, after the death of the original transferor, and the transfer so made will be a valid one 6. But a person who without inquiry takes from another an instrument signed in blank by a third party and fills up the blank, cannot, even in the case of a negotiable instrument, claim the benefit of being a purchaser for value without notice, so as to acquire a greater right than the person from whom he himself received the instrument 7. If the holder of a blank transfer, acting beyond his authority, fills up the transfer with the name of a transferee, and the transfer is registered, the transferor will be estopped and if the purchase be for value without notice, he will get the shares, but not if he in fact knew that the agent had only a limited authority 8.

The holder of a blank transfer may fill in his own name and get the transfer registered holding the legal title to the shares as security 1, and in that case he may sell the shares on failure of the mortgagor to pay after a reasonable time 1. He can also transfer the security and fill in the name of the purchaser ; but he is not entitled to mortgage the shares 2.

The transfer of a blank certificate may, in the case of a mortgage, give a good title, if there is an intent to transfer, but the duty of the transferee from an earlier mortgagee of such document cannot give a good title, unless he has a good title himself 3.

By depositing with the mortgagee a transfer in blank executed by the mortgagor together with the share certificate, a good equitable security may be given and notice to the company is not necessary for perfecting the mortgagee's title 4. But where the company itself is an incumbrancer, notice should be given to the company 5.

In the case of a mortgagee of shares by deposit of the share certificate together with a blank transfer, the fact that the mortgagee in giving notice requiring payment makes a mistake as to the amount due on the mortgage and demands too much is not a ground for invalidating the exercise of his implied power 6. If a debtor delivers to his creditor a blank transfer by way of security that does not however enable the creditor to delegate to another person authority to fill it up for purposes foreign to the original contract 7.

Transfer need not be by deed.

It is not necessary that a transfer should be by deed sealed and delivered 8. In certain cases shares may validly be transferred even without any instrument of transfer, e. g., where shares are sold to enforce a lien. But shares transferred by delivery of scrip is illegal 9. An insufficiently stamped transfer will be validated by payment of the duty and penalty 10.

In the case of a transfer the question is whether the transferor has agreed to transfer and the transferee to accept the shares 11. Where the articles do not require a deed, a transfer in blank filled up later will convey to the transferee not only the equitable, but also the legal title 12, i. e., the legal right to call upon the company to register the transfer. But until registration no legal title, strictly speaking, accrues 13, at any rate until all necessary conditions have been fulfilled to give the transferee as between himself and the company a present, absolute, unconditional right to have the transfer registered 14.

Where a shareholder has an absolute right to transfer his shares, the transfer is complete as soon as the parties sign the deed of transfer 15.

Transfer executed by transferor alone.

Where the articles, as here, provide that the instrument of transfer is to be executed both by the transferor and the transferee, a transfer executed by the transferor alone does not possibly pass the title [1]. But a transferee who has not signed the instrument of transfer may be liable if he has been registered as a shareholder and has acted as such [2].

Irregularities.

Minor irregularities may not affect the transfer, or may be condoned or the parties may be estopped [3]. Wrong distinguishing numbers will not affect the transfer [4], nor if the numbers are not inserted by mistake [5]. Non-observance of the requisite formalities is however a fatal defect [6].

Provision for pre-emption.

Where the articles provided that whenever any member ceased to be employed by the company, then that member should transfer any ordinary shares held by him to a person named by the directors on notice and that the "fair value of any ordinary share within the meaning of the clause shall be a sum equal to the proportion of the value of the assets of the company, exclusive of goodwill, appearing on the books of the company to which the said shares shall be entitled on winding up," and it was further provided that "the certificate of the directors as to such amount shall be binding and conclusive," it was held that in arriving at the value of the shares belonging to the appellant which he was transferring under the articles, the directors were entitled to write off from the value of the whole assets, exclusive of goodwill as they appeared in the last balance sheet, a sum by way of depreciation [7].

Where under the articles the directors had power at a general meeting by a three-fourths majority to determine that the shares of any member should be sold to other members and to fix the price, it was held that the company could not acquire the shares of a member at any price it liked or without ascertaining their value [8], but they could determine the price at a fair valuation, provided that the resolution passed for that purpose had not been prompted by ill-will or any predatory intention [8].

Where a company undertakes to sell the shares of a shareholder, the position of its managing director in negotiating and completing the sale is clearly one of a fiduciary character and utmost good faith should be observed in the transaction. If any advantage was obtained by the managing director as the fruit of the sale, the benefit must go to the owners of the shares [9].

A provision in the articles for a compulsory transfer of shares is not repugnant to the nature of personal property, nor obnoxious to the rule against perpetuity [10].

Construction. Articles restricting transfer of shares should be so construed as not unreasonably to prevent shareholders from fairly and reasonably exercising their powers as members 1.

Purchaser at Court sale. The position of a purchaser at a Court sale is neither better nor worse than that of a private purchaser 2.

A purchaser of shares subject to a lien is bound by it, but he may require the company to resort first to any shares remaining in the hands of the vendor 3.

If a transfer is made to a firm in its firm name, the company may reject the transfer 4.

Letter of renunciation. A letter of renunciation in favour of a nominee and acceptance by the latter of an allotment of bonus shares is not a transfer of shares within the meaning of this regulation 5.

For transfer of shares in a private company see notes to S. 2. (13).

See the new s. 34. For other cases see notes to ss. 28 and 38.

As to stamp see Art. 62 (a), Stamp Act and "Stamp Duty" in the Appendix.

Immaterial omission. Under articles which provide that "every transfer must be in writing and in the usual common form," the directors cannot refuse to register a transfer because it omits particulars which would be found in a common form, but are in the circumstances immaterial 6.

(a) a fee not exceeding two rupees is paid to the company in respect thereof ; and

(b) the instrument of transfer is accompanied by the certificate of the shares to which it relates, and such other evidence as the directors may reasonably require to show the right of the transferor to make the transfer.

If the directors refuse to register a transfer of any shares, they shall within two months after the date on which the transfer was lodged with the company send to the transferee and the transferor notice of the refusal.

Amendment.

The words in italics in this regulation have been inserted by the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. The amendment is in keeping with sub-s. (4) of the new s. 34, which may be compared.

Board's right to decline.

The board's right of declining registration requires to be exercised by a vote of the board ad hoc 1. Where registration of a transferee is under the articles subject to the approval of the transferee by the directors, the fact that the transferee is already a shareholder is of no avail ; and in the absence of evidence that the directors have acted mala fide, their refusal to register the transfer cannot be questioned 2. Where the directors in their discretion refuse to register certain transfers because they consider the transferee is unsuitable to be a member of the company in its interest, there is no obligation upon them to give their actual reasons, nor can they be exposed to the suspicion of mala fides 3. The fact that the majority of shareholders are willing to recognize the transfer is absolutely immaterial 3.

Directors' acts without authority.

If the directors do acts in a matter in which they have no authority, then these acts are null and void 4. But if they neglect the acts which are within their authority and which they ought to perform, neither the Court of law nor of equity will allow them afterwards to take advantage of their own neglect 4.

Directors' duty.

The directors cannot refuse registration of a transfer without considering the personality of the transferee 5. They are however entitled to time to consider the papers, however regular they may appear to be 6. The directors must act strictly as trustees in carrying through the transfers unfettered by any undertaking or promise to any intending purchaser 7.

Fully paid up shares. The articles of a company provided that the company was to have a first and paramount lien upon all shares other than the fully paid up shares and that the board could refuse to register any transfer of shares while the shareholder executing the transfer was indebted to the company. Such a shareholder who was indebted to the company transferred the shares and it was contended that the board could refuse to register the transfer : held, that it could not have been intended to give the company any right to refuse to register the transfer of such shares 1.

Waiver. Compliance with formalities and rules prescribed by the articles is a matter which the company may or may not insist upon 2.

Construction of articles. Where the articles provided that the company could decline to register a transferee without assigning any reason and that so long as a transferee's name was not registered the transferor would continue the owner of the shares, it was held that the articles were meant to safeguard the interests of the company and could not affect the right of a shareholder to transfer his shares or determine the rights and liabilities of the shareholder and his transferee inter se 3.

Where the articles provided inter alia that the holder of a share must give notice in writing to the company for a proposed transfer with the consequence that the shares were offered to the other members and the price was to be ascertained in a manner specified in the articles, it was held by the Court of Appeal in England (Lord Hanworth dissenting) that the share must be regarded as containing as a necessary incident the obligation to offer it through the agency of the company to the shareholders at the articles price 4.

Onus. Where by the articles a company reserves to itself the right of refusing to recognise a transfer if it appears to be against the interest of the company and an action is brought against the company in respect of non-registration of a transfer, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the refusal to recognise the transfer was not bona fide and valid 5. No doubt the discretion vested in the directors does not entitle them to act "arbitrarily" or "wantonly"; but if a shareholder challenges the undoubted right of directors to refuse registration of a transfer in their discretion, on the ground that they acted mala fide and arbitrarily, the burden lies heavily on that shareholder 6.

Shares resemble choses in action. A share in such a company as a manufacturing company carrying on its business in the United States resembles a chose in action in this respect only, that it is assignable and the assignee would be entitled to sue upon it to obtain his appropriate share in the net profits just as the original holders would be 7. Shares are "goods" within the meaning of s. 76 of the Indian Contract Act 8.

Transferor's liability. Under this form of articles the transferor cannot escape liability if he has, actively or passively, induced the directors to pass a transfer or if by collusion with the directors he has procured them in breach of their duty to pass a transfer which they ought not to have passed or has procured postponement of commencement of the winding up in order to get time to execute and tender such a transfer for registration 1.

Entry without authority. Where the secretary enters the name of the transferee in the register without authority, the directors can subsequently decline to pass the transfer 2.

Transfer before call. Where by the articles the directors have power to refuse registration of a transfer until calls due on the shares are paid, the rule will not apply to a transfer which has been lodged for registration before the call is declared 3.

A director may be competent to approve of a transfer of shares to himself 4.

21. The executors or administrators of a deceased sole holder of a share shall be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the share. In the case of a share registered in the names of two or more holders, the survivors or survivor, or the executors or administrators of the deceased survivor, shall be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the share.

Hardship. Mitakshara joint Hindu family. The adoption of this clause in its entirety in the articles of association of an Indian company causes hardship to the heirs of small investors who cannot go to the expenses of obtaining letters of administration for the small holding. Under this form of articles the directors often require letters of administration in the case of a deceased shareholder who was a member of a Mitakshara joint Hindu family. But in such a case the shares generally belong to the joint family and a person claiming by survivorship is not entitled to letters of administration to any portion of such property 5, and it is not within the legal competence of any company to lay down any condition regulating the grant of letters of administration in contravention of law 5. In a recent case where a Hindu claimed to represent the deceased by right of survivorship and the articles of the company were in the above form, Braund, J. of the Rangoon High Court has held that the company could rightly ask the claimant to produce a probate or succession certificate 6. In this case the learned Judge observed : clauses 21 and 22 of Table A while appropriate to a system such as that prevailing in England under which a legal title from a deceased person can only be traced either through probate or letters of administration are hardly so appropriate to a system under which a legal title by devolution may be obtained, apart altogether from and without either probate or letters of administration. Inspite of the above remarks and other representations the responsible authorities did not think it necessary to amend the above clauses. This is really regrettable.

A deceased member remains a member for the purposes of the articles, so long as Liability of deceased member. his name remains on the register without notice to the company of his death 1, and until his interests are transferred his representatives are liable to pay calls 2 and are entitled to receive dividends 3.

Notice. A notice sent to the registered address of the deceased shareholder will, in case the company is not aware of his death 4, have the same effect as if he were alive 1. If the company go into liquidation the legal representative and heir of the deceased shareholder will be made contributories and will be compelled to contribute to the assets of the company 5.

Position of executors. The executor will not be personally liable if he simply sends the probate to be noted without getting himself registered 6. Under articles equivalent to this and the following article the executor has the right to be registered as a member subject to the directors' absolute discretionary right to decline such registration 7. But the board's right is required to be exercised by a vote of the board ad hoc, and the mere failure to pass the proposed resolution is not a formal active exercise of the right to decline 7.

Production of probate. The production of a probate gives notice to the company of the names and addresses of the executor, but not any other provision of the will 8.

The executors are entitled to vote at a general meeting as original members 9.

22. Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death or insolvency of a member shall, upon such evidence being produced as may from time to time be required by the directors, have the right, either to be registered as a member in respect of the share or, instead of being registered himself, to make such transfer of the share as the deceased or insolvent person could have made ; but the directors shall, in either case, have the same right to decline or suspend registration as they would have had in the case of a transfer of the share by the deceased or insolvent person before the death or insolvency.

When the executor of a deceased member has the legal right to the shares of which the deceased member was the registered holder, the executor is entitled, in the absence of any power of veto conferred on the company by its articles of association, to have his name entered on the register of members if he so desires, as a right ancillary to his legal tille to the shares 10. The executors are entitled to have their names entered on

Rights of executors. the register of members without any statement that they hold the shares in a representative capacity and to have their names inserted in such order as they choose 1.

Insolvent's trustee. If the insolvent has executed a transfer by way of security only, the trustee is not entitled to be registered as owner of the shares 2.

Provision for pre-emption. There is nothing obnoxious to the bankruptcy law in articles which bona fide provide that a shareholder shall, in the event of his bankruptcy, sell his shares to particular persons at a particular price to be fixed for all persons alike or which is not shown to be less than the fair price which might otherwise be obtained 3.

See notes to s. 35.

23. A person becoming entitled to a share by reason of the death or insolvency of the holder shall be entitled to the same dividends and other advantages to which he would be entitled if he were the registered holder of the share, except that he shall not, before being registered as a member in respect of the share, be entitled in respect of it to exercise any right conferred by membership in relation to meetings of the company.

Representative must produce probate. Upon the death of a member his representative must produce probate granted by a British Court, although it will involve him in the liability for death duties 4.

His right to vote. Articles may be so framed as to entitle the representative to vote without being registered as a member, and if so, the rejection of votes tendered by such representative will invalidate the resolution passed 5.

Forfeiture of shares.

24. If a member fails to pay any call or instalment of a call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the directors may, at any time thereafter during such time as any part of such call or instalment remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring payment of so much of the call or instalment as is unpaid, together with any interest which may have accrued.

Provision for notice. Where the power of a company to forfeit shares has arisen, the articles of association usually contain provisions as to the sending of notices and the like that may be regarded as being inserted for the protection of the shareholder affected. Such provisions may properly be regarded as being directory only and capable of being waived by the individual shareholder. But no waiver by him can confer upon the company or its directors a power of forfeiture that they do not possess, as for example, a power to forfeit shares for non-payment of calls that are not yet due 6.

6. Premila Devi v. Peoples Bank of N. India [1938] P.C. 284, 43 C.W.N. 205 (213).

A notice by the directors requesting payment of call within a specified time from the date of service of the notice failing which the shares will be forfeited, has not, by its own force, the effect of forfeiting the shares of those who fail to pay the call. Something more is necessary, viz., a subsequent resolution of the directors that the shares of the defaulting members be forfeited 1. A declared intention to forfeit, not carried into effect or not duly confirmed, is no forfeiture at all. But if there is power to forfeit and a declared intention to forfeit and the shares treated by the company as well as the shareholder as forfeited, the company will be precluded from afterwards insisting that no forfeiture ever took place; and the shareholder in such a case will not be liable as a contributory 1.

The ordinary rule is that there is no binding forfeiture unless it be so declared by the directors, and a mere notice of forfeiture does not excuse the shareholder from payment of calls 1.

Effect of invalid call.

Where the directors did not appoint in their resolution or subsequently any person or place to whom or at which the money due on calls was to be paid, the calls were invalid and ultra vires 2. In the last cited case the notice of forfeiture having comprised the amount of calls which was invalid, forfeiture on the basis of the notice was held to be invalid, although the petitioner was bound to pay the money due on allotment (also comprised in the notice).

25. The notice shall name a further day (not earlier than the expiration of fourteen days, from the date of the notice) on or before which the payment required by the notice is to be made, and shall state that, in the event of non-payment at or before the time appointed, the shares in respect of which the call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

Shareholders cannot be relieved of liability.

In the absence of a special power of cancellation or forfeiture, the directors have no power to release shareholders or to cancel shares 3. The provisions in the articles as to notice &c., must be strictly followed 3. A resolution authorizing the money of those shareholders who had not paid their allotment money and are not willing to remain as members to be returned, is ultra vires and cannot operate to relieve them of their liability as contributories 3. If there is a real dispute as to whether or not a person has agreed to become a shareholder, the directors can however compromise the dispute and allow him to give up the shares 4. But a compromise by the directors of unpaid calls under guise of forfeiture is ultra vires and invalid and the company is not bound by such ultra vires acts, though they may be beneficial, unless expressly ratified by all the shareholders or unless with notice or knowledge they have acquiesced in what has been done 5.

Power to forfeit.

If power is not taken in the articles to forfeit shares, neither the directors nor the company in general meeting can make a valid declaration of forfeiture 6.

Articles will be strictly construed.

Articles authorizing forfeiture will be strictly construed [1]. Forfeiture must be preceded by all the proper notices containing all the matters prescribed by the articles and giving all the time required, and a little inaccuracy in complying with the provisions may be fatal [2]. But if the forfeiture is regular, the omission to inform the member [3], or to strike his name off the register, will not invalidate it [4]. A valid call and default are conditions precedent to and necessary for a valid forfeiture [5].

Invalid forfeiture may be restrained.

An article authorizing forfeiture of shares of a member who will bring a suit against the company is invalid [6]. A forfeiture which is invalid or oppressive may be restrained by injunction [7]. The aggrieved shareholder may also sue the company for damages [8].

If a forfeiture is ultra vires no lapse of time will make it valid [9].

Power must be exercised bona fide.

The power must be exercised bona fide for the good of the company, and not to relieve a shareholder from his liability [10]. A forfeiture collusively arranged between the directors and a shareholder is invalid [11].

Forfeiture may be valid in spite of irregularity.

Where there is an irregularity in the quorum of directors by whom a call was made or in the length of notice of the call, a forfeiture for non-payment of the call may nevertheless be valid [12]. Where a company without any resolution forfeits the shares of a person who does not challenge the forfeiture, and the company enforces the forfeiture for some time, the irregularity should be deemed to have been waived, and the company cannot set aside the forfeiture without the consent of such person [13].

Quorum of directors.

Where the articles do not prescribe the number of directors required to constitute a quorum, the number who usually act in conducting the business of the company will constitute a quorum [14]. For other cases see notes to reg. 88.

When directors may forfeit.

A charge on uncalled capital does not affect the directors' power to forfeit shares [15]. A forfeiture validly made before the commencement of a voluntary winding up cannot be cancelled by the liquidator under s. 227, sub-s. (1) [16].

The power of forfeiture may be exercised by the directors after a voluntary winding up, if they obtain sanction of the liquidator or of a general meeting 1.

Provision in articles must be followed.

Where the articles provide that before the company can work forfeiture it has to issue notice in writing to the person whose shares it proposes to forfeit, the company cannot make a member liable for forfeiture otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the articles 2.

What constitutes a valid forfeiture.

To constitute a valid forfeiture there must be power to forfeit, intention to forfeit and a notice of that intention, and further the intention must be carried out. A default in payment of calls does not ipso facto bring about a forfeiture 3. Even where the articles provide that a forfeiture shall take place ipso facto on default of payment of a call, the defaulting shareholder cannot insist on the clause being acted upon, it being ineffective 3.

A right of forfeiture in order to be effectively exercised must be pursued with the greatest exactness by the proper parties, that is, by the directors properly appointed and by the requisite number of them, and in the proper manner and for proper cause and bona fide for the purpose for which it was conferred 4.

Temporary injunction.

Where in an action to rescind a contract to take shares, the company has given notice to forfeit the shares for non-payment of calls, the Court will, on the plaintiff giving the usual undertaking in damages and paying into the Court the amount of the call with interest, restrain the company from forfeiting the shares until the trial of the action 5.

Surrender or forfeiture.

Where the articles authorize forfeiture or surrender of shares, the directors may validly make forfeiture 6 or accept surrender in case where the circumstances are such that they would have power to forfeit 7. But a collusive forfeiture is an abuse of the power and a fraud 8.

Where surrender is good.

The principle applicable to cases of surrender is that a surrender is good if it amounts to a forfeiture. It is not open to a shareholder to surrender at will his shares and to the company to accept such surrender, unless the act can be brought within the rules relating to forfeiture of shares 9. To hold that a company can, by a resolution of its directors, accept surrender of shares would be to allow the company to reduce its capital at its pleasure 9.

Dictum of Cozens-Hardy L.J.

"Every surrender of shares, whether fully paid or not, involves a reduction of capital which is unlawful, except when sanctioned by the Court under the Companies Act. Forfeiture is statutory exception and is the only exception. For I regard a surrender under circumstances which would justify a forfeiture as merely equivalent to forfeiture" 1.

Dictum of Collins M. R.

"There is no reference in the Act to surrender of shares; but these have been admitted by the Courts upon the principle, as I understand it, that they have practically the same effect as forfeiture, the main difference being that the one is proceeding in invitum and the other a proceeding taken with the assent of the shareholder who is unable to retain and pay future calls on the shares" 2.

Powers are usually taken in the articles to annul forfeiture; but it cannot be exercised without the consent of the shareholder 3.

Forfeiture is recognized by the Act 4.

26. If the requirements of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which the notice has been given may at any time thereafter, before the payment required by the notice has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect.

Technicalities to be strictly observed.

"In the matter of the forfeiture of shares," observed their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in a recent case 5, "technicalities must be strictly observed. And it is not, as is sometimes apt to be forgotten, merely the person whose shares are being forfeited, who is entitled to insist upon the strict fulfilment of the conditions prescribed for forfeiture. For the forfeiture of shares may result in a permanent reduction of the capital of a company... The creditors are therefore entitled to see that the power of forfeiting shares is exercised strictly" 5.

Forfeiture by directors' resolution.

If the articles provide, as here, for forfeiture by resolution of the directors, the Court will assume that the resolution was duly passed if the forfeiture is found properly entered in the book, although there is no minute of the resolution 6. It has been held in a case in the Madras High Court 7 that the shareholders possess the general power of cancelling the resolution of the directors forfeiting shares; but see notes to s. 76. A provision in the articles of association authorizing forfeiture is enforceable and cannot be regarded as a penalty. Wnere there is a provision for forfeiture on the happening of certain events, it operates as an extinction of all interests incidental to the shares, if the events happen 8.

Forfeiture upon contingency.

Presumption of entry. An entry of forfeiture in the books raises merely a presumption that it has been properly made after a resolution to that effect, but the presumption is inapplicable where there is positive evidence to the contrary 1.

If upon a valid forfeiture, everything necessary has been done on the part of the shareholder, he will not be prejudiced by the default of the company in not taking his name off the register before the winding up 2. A forfeiture of shares by two out of six directors may be valid. Where shares have been forfeited by a valid resolution of the directors, it is immaterial that the name of the owner has not been removed from the register of members 3.

See notes to regs. 24 and 25.

27. A forfeited share may be sold or otherwise disposed of on such terms and in such manner as the directors think fit, and at any time before a sale or disposition the forfeiture may be cancelled on such terms as the directors think fit.

Re-issue of forfeited shares. A company has usually power to re-issue forfeited shares. It may accept as consideration a sum less than that paid up before the forfeiture 4. Any payment made by the former owner, even after forfeiture, goes in reduction of the amount payable by the new owner 5.

Right to vote. A purchaser of forfeited shares cannot, as a rule, vote until all arrears of calls are paid 6.

Company cannot get the amount twice over. A company cannot get the amount of the share twice over. Where a company in pursuance of its articles has forfeited shares for non-payment of calls, and the articles provide that notwithstanding forfeiture the ex-shareholder shall be liable to pay the amount of the calls, and the shares are subsequently re-alloted to another person, the person is entitled on the winding up of the company to be credited with all sums paid by the previous holder, whether in respect of moneys paid by him as a shareholder in respect of the shares, or as debtor in respect of his liability under the articles to pay calls notwithstanding forfeiture 7. A company is not bound to treat the forfeited shares as if nothing has been paid upon them, this being in effect an issue of shares at a discount 8.

Right to make call. Where shares are forfeited and sold to another "discharged from all calls due prior to the date" of the share certificate, the company may nevertheless make calls on the purchaser for the balance due including the amount previously called but not paid 7.

Where value of shares falls. The language of the articles of a bank clearly implied an interval between forfeiture and disposal of a share. The value of the share fell to nothing by the time the bank decided to take action. In a suit for value of such share, it was held that there was no obligation on the part of the directors to sell or ascertain the value of a forfeited share the moment it was forfeited and that the decision that the value of the share should be the value at the time of bringing the suit was by no means incorrect and was certainly not in any way perverse or unreasonable 1.

28. A person whose shares have been forfeited shall cease to be a member in respect of the forfeited shares, but shall, notwithstanding, remain liable to pay to the company all moneys which, at the date of forfeiture, were presently payable by him to the company in respect of the shares, but his liability shall cease if and when the company received payment in full of the nominal amount of the shares.

New liability after forfeiture.

This regulation imposes, on forfeiture, a new obligation or a new debt and as the shareholder thenceforth ceases to be a member, his liability to pay future calls is gone, and all that is left is this new liability to pay the company "all moneys which at the date of forfeiture were presently payable by him to the company in respect of the shares." Such a person is liable with regard to unpaid calls, not as a contributory, either as a present or past member, but as a debtor to the company. This gives the company a fresh cause of action and the period of limitation for a suit to enforce this new obligation begins to run from the time the shares are forfeited and the proper article applicable is art. 115 of the Limitation Act 2. The time from the liquidator filing the list of contributories including the shareholder's name to the date on which the Court held that he was wrongly entered in the list of contributories cannot be excluded under s. 14 of the Limitation Act 2.

Effect of forfeiture.

After forfeiture the shareholder ceases to be a member of the company, he ceases to be liable to pay any further moneys in his capacity as shareholder, and any further liability on his part must be based on some separate contract making him liable to pay these moneys after he had ceased to be a shareholder 3.

Effect of fraud.

If a person is induced by a fraudulent prospectus to apply for an allotment of shares and his shares are afterwards forfeited for non-payment of calls, he ceases to be a shareholder and becomes a mere debtor to the company, and if he has done nothing to affirm the contract, he may repudiate it and defend an action for calls on the ground of fraud 4.

Defaulter's bankruptcy.

Where the company sustains loss on sale and re-allotment of the forfeited shares and the defaulter becomes bankrupt, the company's proof in the bankruptcy must be limited to the actual loss, and payments of uncalled capital by the new allotees must enure for the defaulter's benefit and release him to that extent from his liability under the contract 5.

After forfeiture not contributory.

It seems that the shareholder may be sued in the ordinary way for the arrears of call after forfeiture 1, but he cannot be put upon the list of contributories 2, as he has already ceased to be a shareholder 3. It is not open to the official liquidator to take advantage of any irregularity in the procedure of the directors in forfeiting shares so long as the directors were acting intra vires and bona fide, as he stands in the shoes of the directors 4.

29. A duly verified declaration in writing that the declarant is a director of the company, and that a share in the company has been duly forfeited on a date stated in the declaration, shall be conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated as against all persons claiming to be entitled to the share, and that declaration, and the receipt of the company for the consideration, if any, given for the share on the sale or disposition thereof, shall constitute a good title to the share, and the person to whom the share is sold or disposed of shall be registered as the holder of the share and shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase money (if any), nor shall his title to the share be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceeding in reference to the forfeiture, sale or disposal of the share.

Object.

The object of this regulation is to give the purchaser a good title so that it may not be attacked on the ground of any irregularity in the forfeiture 5.

30. The provisions of these regulations as to forfeiture shall apply in the case of non-payment of any sum which, by the terms of issue of a share, becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share, or by way of premium, as if the same had been payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified.

Clog on equity of redemption.

Forfeiture for debts generally, as distinct from those due from a member as a contributory, would amount to an illegal reduction of capital 6. A lien being an equitable charge in the nature of a mortgage, the power to forfeit the shares of a member on his failure to redeem on a week's notice is a clog on the equity of redemption and as such invalid and ultra vires 6.

Conversion of shares into stock.

31. The directors may, with the sanction of the company previously given in general meeting, convert any paid-up shares into stock, and may with the like sanction re-convert any stock into paid-up shares of any denomination.

Stock is simply a set of shares put together in a bundle 1. It is expressed in money instead of as so many shares. A company cannot make an original issue of stock 2. Stock not fully paid up is wholly unlawful and confers no rights on the holders 3. They may be entitled to claim as creditors for the amount they have paid 3.

What is stock.

See ss. 29 and 51 and notes thereto.

32. The holders of stock may transfer the same, or any part thereof in the same manner, and subject to the same regulations, as, and subject to which, the shares from which the stock arose might previously to conversion have been transferred, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; but the directors may from time to time fix the minimum amount of stock transferable, and restrict or forbid the transfer of fractions of that minimum, but the minimum shall not exceed the nominal amount of the shares from which the stock arose.

33. The holders of stock shall, according to the amount of the stock held by them have the same rights, privileges and advantages as regards dividends, voting at meetings of the company, and other matters, as if they held the shares from which the stock arose, but no such privilege or advantage (except participation in the dividends and profits of the company) shall be conferred by any such aliquot part of stock as would not, if existing in shares, have conferred that privilege or advantage.

34. Such of the regulations of the company (other than those relating to share-warrants), as are applicable to paid up shares shall apply to stock, and the words "share" and "shareholder" therein shall include "stock" and "stockholder."

Share-warrants.

35. The company may issue share-warrants, and accordingly the directors may in their discretion, with respect to any share which is fully paid-up, on application in writing signed by the person registered as holder of the share, and authenticated by such evidence (if any) as the directors may from time to time require as to the identity of the person signing the request, and on receiving the certificate (if any) of the share, and the amount of the stamp-duty on the warrant and such fee as the directors may from time to time require, issue under the company's seal a warrant, duly stamped, stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to the shares therein specified, and may provide by coupons or otherwise for the payment of dividends, or other moneys on the shares included in the warrant.

2. Home & Foreign Investment Co. [1912] 1 Ch. 72.
3. Alison's case [1873] 15 Eq. 395, 9 Ch. App. 1.

36. A share-warrant shall entitle the bearer to the shares included in it and the share shall be transferred by the delivery of the share-warrant, and the provisions of the regulations of the company with respect to transfer and transmission of shares shall not apply thereto.

37. The bearer of a share-warrant shall, on surrender of the warrant to the company for cancellation, and on payment of such sum as the directors may from time to time prescribe, be entitled to have his name entered as a member in the register of members in respect of the shares included in the warrant.

38. The bearer of a share-warrant may at any time deposit the warrant at the office of the company, and so long as the warrant remains so deposited, the depositor shall have the same right of signing a requisition for calling a meeting of the company, and of attending and voting and exercising the other privileges of a member at any meeting held after the expiration of two clear days from the time of deposit, as if his name were inserted in the register of members as the holder of the shares included in the deposited warrant. Not more than one person shall be recognised as depositor of the share-warrant. The company shall, on two days' written notice, return the deposited share-warrant to the depositor.

39. Subject as herein otherwise expressly provided, no person shall, as bearer of a share-warrant, sign a requisition for calling a meeting of the company, or attend, or vote or exercise any other privilege of a member at a meeting of the company, or be entitled to receive any notices from the company ; but the bearer of a share-warrant shall be entitled in all other respects to the same privileges and advantages as if he were named in the register of members as the holder of the shares included in the warrant, and he shall be a member of the company.

40. The directors may from time to time make rules as to the terms on which (if they shall think fit) a new share-warrant or coupon may be issued by way of renewal in case of defacement, loss or destruction.

Alteration of Capital.

41. The directors may, with the sanction of the company in general meeting, increase the share capital by such sum, to be divided into shares of such amount, as the resolution shall prescribe.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the words "an extraordinary resolution of the company" after the words "sanction of", the words in italics have been substituted.

The intention to make the specific increase of capital must be embodied in the notice and the resolution [1].

See s. 50, sub-s. 1 (a) and notes thereto.

42. Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the resolution sanctioning the increase of share capital, all new shares shall, before issue, be offered to such persons as at the date of the offer are entitled to receive notices from the company of general meetings in proportion, as nearly as the circumstances admit, to the amount of the existing shares to which they are entitled. The offer shall be made by notice specifying the number of shares offered, and limiting a time within which the offer, if not accepted, will be deemed to be declined, and after the expiration of that time, or on the receipt of an intimation from the person to whom the offer is made that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the company. The directors may likewise so dispose of any new shares which (by reason of the ratio which the new shares bear to shares held by persons entitled to an offer of new shares) cannot, in the opinion of the directors, be conveniently offered under this article.

Declaratory suit.

A suit by a shareholder for a declaration that the allotment of new shares to certain persons is not legal and the allottees have no power as shareholders on the ground that the resolution authorizing the increase of capital by issuing new shares was invalid and ineffective does not lie, if no consequential relief such as a prayer for rectification of the register of members by removing the names of the new shareholders or for an injuction is sought [2].

43. The new shares shall be subject to the same provisions with reference to the payment of calls, lien, transfer, transmission, forfeiture and otherwise as the shares in the original share capital.

Agreement between company & vendor.

An agreement between a company and the vendor providing that on any future increase of capital the company will allot to the vendor a certain proportion of the new shares and will pay to him a sum equal to the nominal amount of the shares so allotted, such sum to be immediately applied in paying up in full the shares so allotted, is good so far as the obligation to the allotment goes, but is bad so far as it purports to relieve the allotee from liability to pay up the nominal amount of the shares allotted [3].

See notes to s. 50, sub-s. 1 (a).

44. The company may, by ordinary resolution,—

(a) consolidate and divide its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares ;

(b) by sub-division of its existing shares or any of them, divide the whole or any part of its share capital into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum of association, subject, nevertheless, to the provisions of paragraph (d) of sub-section (1) of section 50 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 ;

(c) cancel any shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, in the first line for the words "special resolution" the words in italics have been substituted, and Cl. (d) has been omitted. Cl. (d) was as follows :

(d) reduce its share capital in any manner and with, and subject to, any incident authorised, and consent required, by law.

These powers should be taken in the articles of association, otherwise they cannot be exercised. See ss. 50 and 55.

44A. The company may, by special resolution, reduce its share capital in any manner and with, and subject to any incident authorised and consent required, by law.

This new regulation has been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. See s. 55 and notes.

General Meetings.

45. The statutory general meeting of the company shall be held within the period required by section 77 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913.

For cases relating to the statutory general meeting see notes to s. 77.

46. A general meeting shall be held within eighteen months from the date of its incorporation and thereafter once at least in every year at such time (not being more than fifteen months after the holding of the last preceding general meeting) and place as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, or, in default, at such time in the month following that in which the anniversary of the company's incorporation occurs, and at such place as the directors shall appoint. In default of a general meeting, being so held, a general meeting shall be held in the month next following, and may be called by any two members in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings are to be called by the directors.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the words "once in every year" the words in italics have been substituted.

See s. 76 and notes thereto for cases relating to general meetings.

One member is not meeting. One shareholder only present in person does not constitute a general meeting even if he holds a number of proxies [1]. But a company present by a representative appointed under s. 80 will be treated as a member personally present [2].

Exception. Where a company has shares of several classes and all the shares of one class are held by one person, a resolution signed by that person will be a resolution of a meeting of holders of shares of the class for the purpose of an article requiring the sanction of such a resolution to the issue of further shares of the class [3].

Waiver. A company may, it seems, by holding the annual general meetings at other dates waive a provision such as that contained in the last sentence of this regulation [4].

Where the articles of an insurance company provided that the meeting of the policy-holders was to be held at the registered office of the company, and the directors refused permission to hold the meeting there, a meeting held at another place was held to be perfectly regular as the change of venue was caused by the company itself; for a party cannot take advantage of its own wrong [5].

For fuller notes see those under ss. 76 and 79.

47. The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary.

48. The directors may, whenever they think fit, call an extraordinary general meeting, and extraordinary general meetings shall also be called on such requisition, or in default, may be called by such requisitionists, as provided by section 78 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. If at any time there are not within British India sufficient directors capable of acting to form a quorum, any director or any two members of the company may call an extraordinary general meeting in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings may be called by the directors.

Meaning of first sentence. "'The directors may, whenever they think fit'—that means, I apprehend, that the directors may do it at a meeting properly convened; I do not think it means that any director may, without consulting the others, call an extraordinary general meeting" [6].

Postponement. When a general meeting has been convened, the directors cannot postpone it in the absence of express provision in the articles to that effect [7].

Effect of irregularity. A meeting convened by a board not properly constituted may be irregular and the resolutions invalid 1. A meeting summoned by the secretary without authority of the directors, duly assembled at a board 2, or without any authority from any director is also invalid 3.

Principle of "internal management." Upon the principle that the Court will not interfere with the internal management of a company, the Court will not direct a meeting for general purposes when the directors or the requisite number of shareholders do not think it advisable to summon a general meeting 4.

Injunction. As regards restraining a general meeting, it must be a very strong case indeed which will justify the Court to do so 5.

As to the holding of an extraordinary general meeting on requisition see s. 78 and notes.

Proceedings at General Meeting.

49. Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 81 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, relating to special resolutions, fourteen days' notice at the least (exclusive of the day on which the notice is served or deemed to be served, but inclusive of the day for which notice is given) specifying the place, the day and the hour of meeting and, in case of special business, the general nature of that business, shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, to such persons as are, under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or the regulations of the company, entitled to receive such notice from the company ; but the accidental omission to give notice to or the non-receipt of notice by any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any general meeting.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words in italics after "but the" have been inserted for the words "non-receipt of notice," and those in italics elsewhere have been inserted.

For cases relating to proceedings at general meetings see notes to s. 76.

Where the regulation does not apply. It has been held in England that this regulation does not apply to meetings of the subscribers to the memorandum of association 6, for which a reasonable notice only is necessary 6. The number of the directors and the names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by a majority of such subscribers 7.

Sufficiency of notice.

The notice must give substantial information as to what is proposed to be done at the meeting. Resolutions passed upon insufficient notice may be invalid 1. As to what is sufficient notice see the cases noted below 2. If proper and sufficient notice of the intention to propose a resolution is given, nothing more is required and the resolution is not invalidated if owing to an amendment at the first meeting, the resolution passed is not identical with that of the notice 3.

Although the regulation is sufficiently complied with if the notice states the general nature of the business, it is nevertheless desirable, where the business is of great importance, such as a proposed substitution of new articles for Table A, to supplement the notice with an explanatory circular 4.

"It is settled that the notice, which specifies the business to be done or the objects of the meeting, is to be a fair notice intelligible to the minds of ordinary men—the class of men who are shareholders in the company and to whom it is addressed. The Court does not scrutinize these notices with a view to exercise criticism or to find out defects, but it looks at them fairly" 5. The Court is however entitled to look at the notice as part of the res gestæ to see if the proceedings are irregular 6.

Shareholders are presumed to know the Act of the legislature and also the terms of the memorandum and articles of association. Notice must be read in reference to these 7.

When the notice did not disclose the contents of the agreement which formed the subject of the resolution, it was held that such a resolution, although adopted by the requisite majority, was invalid and incapable of being made valid by acquiescence on the part of the shareholders 8. But it is competent for the shareholders acting together to waive the formalities required by s. 81 as to notice of intention to propose a resolution as an extraordinary resolution 9. If every member is present at the meeting, any resolution passed unanimously which is not ultra vires the company is valid and binding on the company, irrespective of what notice, if any, of the meeting was given 10.

Where notice was given of a resolution that three retiring directors should be re-elected with such amendments as should be determined at the meeting, and an amendment to the resolution was carried appointing two additional directors, it was held that the notice sufficiently indicated the business transacted 11.

Notice issued without authority is invalid.

The resolutions of a general meeting convened by de facto directors are not invalidated by any irregularity in the constitution of the board 12. But a notice issued by the secretary without the authority of a resolution of the board is invalid 13. It may however become a good notice if adopted and ratified by a board meeting held prior to the general meeting ; for the ratification of an act purporting to be done by an agent on behalf of the principal dates back to the performance of the Act [1].

Members entitled to receive notice.

Subject to the limitation in the articles all shareholders on the register are entitled to receive notice, and if any person entitled to attend is not regularly summoned, such meeting is irregular and its proceedings invalid [2]. But a member who was present at a meeting cannot question its regularity [3].

No notice need be issued on members residing abroad [4]. A notice must give a sufficiently full and frank disclosure of facts upon which the shareholders are asked to vote [5].

In the absence of any provision in the articles the executors or administrators of a member, when not themselves registered as members, are not entitled to notice [6]. It is not necessary to send a notice addressed to a deceased member or to his legal personal representative [6].

Where not.

Members who have no registered address and in respect of whom there has not been furnished to the company any address in this country for the service of notice are not entitled to receive notices of general meetings, and the fact that a member has not been served with notice of a particular meeting does not invalidate a resolution passed at the meeting [7].

See notes to s. 76.

As to what the notice of an extraordinary general meeting should contain see notes to ss. 78 and 79.

In the corresponding regulation of Table A of the English Act only seven days' notice is provided for. Unless it is specifically provided in the articles that the day of service is to be excluded, in the number of days, such day is not to be excluded [8]. The days will probably be calculated from midnight to midnight [9].

50. All business shall be deemed special that is transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting with the exception of sanctioning a dividend, the consideration of the accounts, balance-sheets and the ordinary report of the directors and auditors, the election of directors and other officers in the place of those retiring by rotation, and the fixing of the remuneration of the auditors.

Special business —notice.

An ordinary general meeting may transact special business if the notice provides for it [10]; but unless the purport of the special business to be transacted is stated in the notice convening the meeting, the meeting is invalid [11]. It is not sufficient in a notice of an extraordinary general meeting to state merely that special business will be transacted [12]. If special business is to be transacted the notice must specify its nature [13].

Under this form of regulation the business of the statutory meeting is special business[1].

Remuneration for past services of directors cannot be voted at an ordinary general meeting unless special notice is given of the intention to propose such a resolution[2].

51. No business shall be transacted at any general meeting unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business; save as herein otherwise provided, two members in the case of a private company and five members in the case of any other company personally present shall be a quorum.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the words "three members" the words in italics have been substituted.

A person appointed under s. 80 to represent another company will be deemed to be a "member personally present"[3]. Sometimes one member may form a quorum[4].

Quorum.

Resolutions for voluntary winding up of companies are invalid unless passed and confirmed at meetings at each of which there is present the necessary quorum[5]. But two meetings are no longer necessary; see the new sub-s. (2) of s. 81.

The presence of non-members at a meeting without their taking any part in the proceedings does not invalidate the meeting[6].

Non-members.

A resolution passed at a meeting at which there is no quorum[7], or at a meeting not properly convened is invalid[8]. But the minutes will raise a presumption of its validity[9].

52. If within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if called upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved; in any other case, it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week at the same time and place, and, if at the adjourned meeting a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting, the members present shall be a quorum.

This regulation with regulation 1 does not enable a single member present in person to constitute an adjourned meeting[10].

53. The chairman, if any, of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the company.

General meeting.

Where a general meeting is held in accordance with the Court's order, amendments may be rejected by the chairman, if they are contrary to the terms of the order[11].

Chairman's authority.

The chairman at a general meeting has prima facie authority to decide all incidental questions which arise at such meeting and necessarily requires decision at the time, and the entry by him in the minute book of the result of a poll or of his decision of all such questions, although not conclusive, is prima facie evidence of the result or of the correctness of that decision and the onus is thrown on those who impeach the entry [1].

See notes to s. 76.

54. If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting, or is unwilling to act as chairman, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman.

55. The chairman may, with the consent of any meeting at which a quorum is present (and shall if so directed by the meeting), adjourn the meeting from time to time and from place to place, but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place. When a meeting is adjourned for ten days or more, notice of the adjourned meeting shall be given as in the case of an original meeting. Save as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary to give any notice of an adjournment or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting.

Right of adjournment.

At common law there is a right of adjournment of a public meeting and the chairman can exercise it [2]. But this must be done for proper conduct of business and not for its frustration. A chairman has no power to stop a meeting at his will and pleasure. If he attempts to do so, the meeting can appoint another chairman and resolve to go on with the unfinished business [3].

In the absence of a special provision a chairman is not bound to adjourn a meeting. He cannot adjourn it of his mere motion [4]. But where the articles empower the chairman to adjourn a meeting with the consent of the meeting, the chairman has a discretion to adjourn and he can exercise that discretion only with the consent of the meeting, while if the meeting desire an adjournment the chairman is not bound to adjourn [5].

The mere absence of a provision for adjournment in the articles does not give rise to an inference that a power to adjourn is prohibited, for the law gives the right to every meeting to adjourn itself provided the adjournment is for a bona fide purpose [6]. Although discussions regarding the articles are out of order in a shareholder's meeting, yet such discussions do not vitiate the bona fides of the meeting because there is no difference between bona fides in fact and bona fides in law or constructive bona fides[1].

An adjourned meeting is the same meeting and merely a continuation of it. The proxies appointed for the meeting are available at an adjourned meeting[2].

Notice. Where it is necessary to give notice of an adjourned meeting, when business was begun but not completed at the meeting from which the adjournment took place, the notice need not state the purpose for which the meeting was called[3].

56. At any general meeting a resolution put to the vote of the meeting shall be decided on a show of hands, unless a poll is (before or on the declaration of the result of the show of hands) demanded [in accordance with the provisions of clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 79 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913], and unless a poll is so demanded, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has, on a show of hands, been carried, or carried unanimously, or by a particular majority, or lost, and an entry to that effect in the book of the proceedings of the company shall be conclusive evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of, or against, that resolution.

Amendment. In this regulation the words within square brackets have been substituted for the words "by at least three members" by the amending Act II of 1938 which received the assent of the Governor General on 26th February, 1938. The articles of a company shall be deemed to include this regulation ; see s. 17 (2).

Proper mode of declaring company's will. A resolution of the majority of members present at a general meeting is the proper mode of declaring the will of the corporation ; but if all the shareholders, and not a majority only, expressly assent, the absence of a resolution may be immaterial[4]. As to what is an act of the corporation binding the corporation and what constitutes a meeting of the corporation see the case noted below[5].

Show of hands. As regards the importance of a regular show of hands recently stressed by Lord Blanesburgh in the House of Lords, see notes to s. 81 ante, p. 203.

Chairman's right. Declaration of the chairman as evidenced by an entry in the minute book is conclusive evidence of the fact that a resolution has, on a show of hands, been carried. In any case the declaration of the chairman is prima facie evidence[6]. Where on a show of hands there are two resolutions before a meeting of shareholders—one for the reduction of capital and another for the conversion of the preference shares into ordinary shares—and where there is a right to a poll, the chairman may put the resolutions en bloc, if no shareholder requires him to put them separately[7].

The chairman of a general meeting has prima faice authority to decide all incidental questions which arise at such meeting. The entry by him in the minute book of the result of a poll or of his decisions of such questions although not conclusive is prima facie evidence of that result or the correctness of the decisions and the onus of displacing that evidence is on those who impeach the entry 1.

Conclusive evidence. The words "conclusive evidence" mean evidence which is not to be displaced and is conclusive as between the parties bound by the minutes 2.

The chairman has discretion in moving that "the question be now put" 3.

Amendment of resolution. An amendment fairly arising on a resolution which is specified in the notice of the meeting must be put to the meeting, and the chairman has no right to refuse it 4.

Where an amendment which a party has a right to move has been rightly and properly dealt with by the chairman, the validity of the resolution as passed remains unaffected 5.

Taking of poll.

Proxies cannot be used on a show of hands 6. A poll is a mere continuation of the meeting at which it was demanded 7. The chairman is justified in closing the doors during the taking of the poll, if it is not an ordinary meeting but a meeting in which special precautions are necessary in view of the conflict between two groups 7.

At common law a person entitled to vote at a meeting has the right to demand a poll 8. Where there is such a right it can be exercised immediately after the chairman's declaration on the result of the show of hands 9.

Demanding poll.

Where the power of demanding a poll is by the articles given to shareholders qualified to vote and holding so many shares, the power is exercisable only by the shareholders present in person; for the holder of proxies is not the holder of the shares included in the proxy 10. A proxy authorizing a person to vote does not authorize him to demand a poll 11, unless the articles otherwise provide.

Where members holding a specified number of shares have the right to demand a poll under the articles and there is a definition clause stating that the singular includes the plural, one member holding the requisite number of shares can demand a poll 12.

Who can vote on poll.

Under this form of articles members not present at the meeting cannot vote on the poll, even if taken subsequently 13. Under an article providing that the poll shall be taken "in such manner as the chairman shall direct," the poll may be taken then and there 14.

If the articles contemplate voting in person the chairman can direct the taking of a poll by voting papers 1.

Separate polls.

Where resolutions are voted upon separately and polls are demanded, there must be separate polls 2. Any qualified person may demand a poll 3.

Validity of votes.

Where an article provided that votes tendered at a meeting and not disallowed at that meeting or an adjournment thereof should be deemed valid for all purposes, in the absence of fraud or mala fides votes not so disallowed could not be afterwards challenged in legal proceedings 4.

Where an article provides that no objection should be made to the validity of any vote except at the meeting and that every vote, whether given in person or by proxy, not disallowed at any meeting, should be deemed valid for all purposes, the decision of the chairman who in the bona fide exercise of the power conferred upon him by the articles refuses to disallow a vote by proxy to which objection is taken at the meeting is final and will not be reviewed by the Court 5.

Right to inspect voting papers.

Where the articles give the shareholder the right to inspect the papers relating to the voting, the Court should ordinarily give them an opportunity of doing so. Such an opportunity need not however be given when it appears that the inspection would not yield any useful result 6.

Meeting under Court's order.

Where a meeting is held under the order of the Court, the chairman is bound to carry out the instructions given by the Court and has a discretion of his own for matters lying outside the scope of such instructions 7. In the last cited case Fawcett J. held that inspection of ballot papers could not be obtained without an express order of the Court. Strong grounds must be shown and the Judge must be satisfied that the application for it was made bona fide.

See notes to s. 81.

57. If a poll is duly demanded, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of the poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the meeting at which the poll was demanded.

Time of taking poll.

In this form of articles the poll may be taken then and there 8. A shareholder must be present personally or by proxy. This principle is not overridden by this regulation 9.

The taking of a poll is not a meeting of the company in the strict sense, but is in law a continuation of the meeting at which the poll was directed to be taken 9. Where there is a breakdown of the arrangement of the poll on the fixed date, that does not put an end to the taking of the poll, because there must be at least a reasonable opportunity to the voters of having the poll taken. The chairman should in such circumstances appoint another date for the poll because if the poll is demanded it must be taken even though the chairman refuses to grant the poll 1. The Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the shareholders against the company in respect of the infringement of their rights when the interests of justice require it 1.

58. In the case of an equality of votes, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, the chairman of the meeting at which the show of hands takes place, or at which the poll is demanded, shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

59. A poll demanded on the election of a chairman or on a question of adjournment shall be taken forthwith. A poll demanded on any other question shall be taken at such time as the chairman of the meeting directs.

Votes of Members.

60. On a show of hands every member present in person shall have one vote. On a poll every member shall have one vote in respect of each share or each hundred rupees of stock held by him.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, for the words "On a poll every member shall have one vote for each share of which he is the holder", the words in italics have been substituted.

For cases relating to votes and proxy see notes to s. 76.

Who can vote upon a show of hands.

Unless a poll is demanded, votes of members who are personally present will be counted by a show of hands 2. A member present only by proxy has no right to vote upon a show of hands 3. A company present by a representative under s. 80 will be deemed to be present in person 4. During a state of war an alien enemy cannot vote 5.

Where on a show of hands there are two resolutions before a meeting of shareholders--one for reduction of capital and the other for conversion of preference shares into ordinary shares—and where there is a right to poll, the chairman may put the resolutions en bloc, if no shareholder requires him to put them separately 6.

Vote is a right to property.

A shareholder's vote is a right to property and he is entitled to exercise it as he pleases even in a manner adverse to what others may think the interests of the company 7, provided his vote be bona fide and not contrary to public policy 8. "Unless otherwise provided by the regulations of the company", observed Lord Davey in Burland v. Earle 9, "a shareholder is not debarred from voting or using his voting power to carry a resolution by the circumstance of his having a particular interest in the subject matter of the vote."

Right of voting.

Where shares have been transferred to a mortgagee and are registered in his name, he has, as legal owner of the shares, the right of voting which may be exercised as he thinks best, irrespective of any direction by the mortgagor 1. The right can only be determined by an express contract not to exercise it, and in the case of debentures it may be exercised for the debenture-holders 1. A mandatory injunction may however be granted to enforce an agreement by the mortgagee of share to vote in accordance with the wishes of the mortgagor 2.

Executor's vote.

Vote given by an executor on behalf of a deceased member must be disallowed unless he has got himself registered as a member, and it is not possible to distinguish the case of a liquidator or receiver 3.

No subsequent ratification.

A vote is good or bad at the time when it is recorded and no subsequent ratification can cure the defect 3.

Director's right to vote.

Although a director is not entitled to vote as a director in respect of any contract in which he is interested 4, yet he is entitled so to vote as a shareholder at a general meeting 5.

A single shareholder may sue the company to enforce his right to have his vote recorded 6.

Casting vote.

"Where the number of votes on a show of hands is equal, the chairman has no casting vote by common right" 7, but the casting vote has been given to the chairman on a show of hands by reg. 58.

See notes to s. 76 and s. 81.

61. In the case of joint-holders, the vote of the senior who tenders a vote, whether in person or by proxy, shall be accepted to the exclusion of the votes of the other joint-holders ; and for this purpose seniority shall be determined by the order in which the names stand in the register of members.

Right of splitting.

Joint-holders are entitled to have their holdings split into two or more joint holdings with the names in different order so as to enable all to attend and vote 8.

62. A member of unsound mind, or in respect of whom an order has been made by any Court having jurisdiction in lunacy, may vote, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, by his committee or other legal guardian, and any such committee or guardian may, on a poll, vote by proxy.

63. No member shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls or other sums presently payable by him in respect of shares in the company have been paid.

Right after forfeiture. As to whether after forfeiture the new holder's right to vote is affected by a call made on the last holder see the case noted below 1.

64. On a poll votes may be given either personally or by proxy : Provided that no company shall vote by proxy as long as a resolution of its directors in accordance with the provisions of section 80 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, is in force.

The proviso is not in Table A of the English Act. For cases relating to proxy see notes to regs. 65 to 67.

No inherent rights. There is no inherent right of shareholders to vote by proxy, such right being by contract to be construed from the articles 2. Where proxies are allowed by the articles the chairman must count the vote of a person holding proxy as a single vote 3.

65. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the appointor or of his attorney duly authorised in writing, or, if the appointor is a corporation either under the common seal, or under the hand of an officer or attorney so authorised. No person shall act as a proxy unless he is a member of the company.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the words in italics have been substituted for the words "either he is entitled on his own behalf to be present and vote at the meeting at which he acts as proxy, or he has been appointed to act at that meeting as proxy for a corporation."

Subsequent shareholder. Under articles which provided that "no person shall be appointed or have authority to act as a proxy who is not a shareholder", a proxy in favour of a person who was not a shareholder when it was signed, but was a shareholder at the date of the meeting, was valid 4.

Non-member's vote. An article which provides that every vote not disallowed at the meeting shall be valid will validate a vote, not objected to at the meeting, given by a proxy who is not a shareholder 5.

Corporation's right. The requirements as to appointment of proxies by corporations being under seal applies only to corporations having a common seal according to English law 5. A corporation may give a proxy under the English law 6. See notes to s. 80.

66. The instrument appointing a proxy and the power-of-attorney or other authority (if any), under which it is signed or a notarially certified copy of that power or authority, shall be deposited at the registered office of the company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in the instrument proposes to vote, and in default the instrument of proxy shall not be treated as valid.

Lodgment of proxy paper.

This regulation provides for the previous lodgment of the proxy paper. Where the articles provide "that the instrument appointing a proxy shall be deposited at the registered office of the company, not less than two clear days before the day for holding the meeting", proxies lodged after the date of an original meeting, but more than two days before the day fixed for an adjournment thereof, cannot be used for the purpose of voting at the adjourned meeting 1.

Where no time is fixed.

If the articles do not provide that proxy papers shall be deposited at the office before the meeting, the vote of the proxy is to be accepted even if he cannot produce the proxy paper at the time 2.

Where two proxies.

Where one proxy is lodged before the expiry of the time and another proxy in favour of another person is lodged after the expiry of the time, the first proxy is not revoked 3.

Filling up names &c.

So long as a proxy is properly stamped at execution, its operative parts, e. g., the name of the proxy and the date of the meeting may be filled in afterwards by any person properly authorized to do so 4, even though at the time of execution the date of the meeting has not been fixed 5. The secretary may fill in the date in the proxy form after it has been returned by the shareholder 6. Undated proxies are valid 7.

Cancellation of stamp.

Any cancellation which renders the stamp on proxy incapable of being used is sufficient. It is not necessary that the person cancelling the stamp should write his name and the date across the stamp 8.

Costs may be paid out of company's fund.

The cost of obtaining signature of proxy papers and of stamp may be paid out of the company's funds 9 if reasonably necessary in the interest of the company. But the principle will not apply if it is done to serve the interests of the directors personally 9.

Director's name.

Directors' names may be inserted as proxies 3 unless there is some provisions in the articles to the contrary 10.

Stamps.

Where a proxy empowers any person to vote at any one general meeting of a company, it may be stamped with an adhesive stamp of two annas 11. For this purpose revenue stamp only is to be used 12, or in the case of a company having a large number of shareholders coloured impression may be obtained from the Collector of Stamps 1. The instrument of proxy to vote "at any ordinary or extraordinary general meeting of the company" and not merely at the particular meeting is valid 2. But in that case it would be chargeable for stamp duty as a power of attorney under art. 48 of the Indian Stamp Act. The stamp on a proxy to be used at a creditor's meeting is the same as in the case of a general meeting of the members of a company 3.

Proxy is agent for voting.

A person to whom a member gives a proxy is that member's agent for the purpose of voting. The authority of an agent may be revoked expressly or by implication ; but unless and until it is so revoked that authority continues. If a man is present and allows another to act for him, presumably he approves what that other does. But even where a proxy had not been validly revoked in accordance with the articles, the shareholder who had given the proxy is free to attend at the meeting and vote personally ; and when he has done this the vote tendered by the proxy will be rejected. "It would be strange", observed Lord Hanworth, M. R., "if a person in the position of an agent could say to his principal 'you have entrusted to me a power which I will not allow to pass back to you, although you demand the right to exercise it' " 4. Where persons who voted on the amendments, but did not vote on the substantive proposition, but whose votes on the latter were recorded by their proxies, it was held that the votes were good 5.

Unstamped proxies.

Those proxies which are unstamped or upon which the stamps have not been cancelled must be excluded. Any votes recorded on the authority of such proxies go out 6.

See notes to s. 76.

The time provided in Table A of the English Act is forty-eight hours. This limit of 72 hours seems to be unsuitable to this country. It ought to have been reduced to twenty-four hours by the recent amending Acts.

67. An instrument appointing a proxy may be in the following form, or in any other form which the directors shall approve :—

Company, Limited.

"I of in the district of , being a member of the Company, Limited, hereby appoint of as my proxy to vote for me and on my behalf at the [ordinary or extraordinary, as the case may be] general meeting of the company to be held on the day of and at any adjournment thereof."

Signed this day of Attestation.

If the articles require that a proxy paper shall be attested, an unattested proxy paper will be rejected 7.

Where form is settled by the Court.

Where the form of proxy was settled by the Court, but a certain word was entered by the member signing the proxy and he added other words, but the added words were too vague to have any meaning, it was held that such votes were good 1.

Directors.

68. The number of the directors and the names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by a majority of the subscribers of the memorandum of association.

Number of directors.

Where the articles provide that until otherwise determined by a general meeting the number of directors shall not be less than five nor more than nine, it is open to the shareholders to vary the number without altering the articles 2. The articles of a company provided that until otherwise determined by a general meeting the number of directors should be not more than three or more than seven : held, a resolution at a general meeting that the number of directors should be increased to more than seven was valid and no "special resolution" was necessary 3. In the case of a similar article where the articles of association of the company adopted articles 83 and 85 of the Table A of the English Act of 1908 (corresponding to regs. 83 and 84 of the present Act) it was held distinguishing Blair Open Hearth Furnace Co. v. Reigart 4 that the power of appointing additional directors had not been delegated to the directors so as to exclude the inherent power of the company in general meeting to appoint directors 5.

A company may be director.

Directors are not necessarily individual persons, and, if the articles so provide, another company may be appointed director 6.

Meeting of subscribers.

There must be a majority of the subscribers in order to determine who shall be the first directors 7. A reasonable notice only is necessary for the meeting of the subscribers in which such determination is to take place 8.

For this purpose a meeting may not be necessary if all the subscribers concur in making the appointment by a resolution in writing 9.

Power of subscribers.

The power given to the subscribers remains in force notwithstanding the first ordinary general meeting after registration has been held without any directors being appointed at that meeting 10. Reg. 49 does not apply to a meeting of the subscribers of the memorandum of association, and there being no special provision in Table A relating thereto, a reasonable notice only of such meeting is necessary 10.

First directors' power.

The first directors may appoint one of their number to the office of manager at a salary on condition that the latter vacates his office of director 11.

Additional directors.

additional directors, and a majority of the governing directors appointed additional directors, it was held by Bennett, J. that the power must be exercised by all the governing directors, and that the rule of corporation law that when a duty is delegated to a body of persons those persons can act at a meeting by a majority had no application to the case of the articles of association of a company incorporated under the Companies Act 1.

Where partners of a firm are appointed directors.

Where the articles provided that the partners for the time being of a firm "shall be the first managers of the company", it was held that the individuals who were partners of the firm at the time when the company was incorporated remained managers until death, resignation, disqualification or removal, quite irrespective of any changes in the constitution of the firm 2.

Directors not whole time servants.

Unless there is a provision in the articles as to the amount of time a director shall devote to the company, he cannot be compelled to attend to his duties and the company cannot prevent him from becoming a director of a rival company 3.

"The principle will be found", observed Lord Blanesburgh, "in the case usually cited in relation to it although reported only in the Weekly Notes 3, where it was held that it not appearing from the regulations of the company that a director's services must be rendered to that company, and to no other company, he was at liberty to become a director even of a rival company, and it not being established that he was making to the second company any disclosure of information obtained confidentially by him as a director of the first company he could not at the instance of that company be restrained in his rival directorate. What he could do for a rival company, he could, of course, do for himself. And in the present case that principle is not affected by the agreements of each appellant with Levers to devote all his time during business hours to the Niger service" 4.

Fiduciary position of directors.

Directors are "fiduciary donees of their powers" and as such are bound to exercise them so as not to give themselves an advantage over other shareholders 5. They must not make secret profit out of their office 6. "A director is precluded from dealing on behalf of the company with himself and from entering into engagements in which he has a personal interest conflicting or which may possibly conflict with the interest of those whom he is bound by fiduciary duty to protect, and this rule is as applicable to the case of one of several directors as the managing or sole director" 7.

Director's right of indemnity.

Directors are entitled to be indemnified by the company for all debts, expenses and liabilities incurred in the ordinary course of business, and for money borrowed and applied for those purposes 8. A director is also entitled to contribution from such of his co-directors as have concurred in ultra vires transactions 9. The right is available against the estate of a deceased contributory 9.

Directors are not responsible to third persons for the acts of sub-agents of the company properly appointed, unless they have derived benefit from a fraud 1.

De facto directors.

A person dealing with a company is entitled to assume that the directors who are carrying on the business are directors de jure whether they have been duly appointed or not 2; but a person who has notice of the irregularity cannot claim the benefit 3.

Where bankers have been put upon inquiry with regard to the appointment of a new director and are guilty of negligence in not investigating the position, they are not entitled to assume that a notice of appointment of an additional director is a valid notice 4.

Directors not trustees.

Directors are not trustees for individual shareholders and may purchase the shares of the latter without disclosing pending negotiations for the sale of the company's undertaking 5.

Knowledge of common director.

As to the knowledge of a common director to companies the following observation of Mellish L. J. should be borne in mind: "I cannot think that because he was a common director to the two companies, we are on that account to say that one company has notice of everything that is within the knowledge of the common director and which knowledge he has acquired as director of the other company" 6. But where A company guarantees the losses incurred on behalf of B company and C is owner of A company and director of B company, C is bound to communicate to A company his knowledge of the losses incurred by B company 7.

Dispute.

If owing to disputes on the governing body the affairs of a company cannot be carried on, the Court will interfere by injunction and the appointment of a receiver, until a fresh governing body is appointed 8.

The liabilities of the directors are extinguished by the dissolution of the company, unless it is set aside by the Court 9.

For other cases see notes to ss. 2 (5), 83A, 83B, 85, 86 and 91A.

69. The remuneration of the directors shall from time to time be determined by the company in general meeting.

Power to fix director's remuneration—by whom exercisable.

The decision of what remuneration the directors are to have for their services is not a part of the business of the company so as to make the powers of the company as to the remuneration of the directors exclusively exercisable by the latter. When the remuneration of a director has been fixed by the company under this regulation, the company has power to reduce his remuneration when it thinks fit 10. A company with power from time to time to fix the remuneration of the directors can discriminate between directors with regard to the amount of their remuneration [1]. If the remuneration is provided in the articles it cannot be changed without a special resolution [2].

Division of remuneration and time of payment.

Where the articles provide that there should be allowed to each of the directors out of the company's funds a certain sum per annum as remuneration to be paid at such times as the directors may determine, it is a condition precedent to the right of a director to sue for remuneration in respect of a year's service that the directors should determine the time of payment [3], or how the remuneration is to be divided [4]. No individual director can sue the company for his fees until the directors have made a formal division of the amount available [5].

Directors can not get travelling allowance.

A director is not entitled to any remuneration beyond what has been sanctioned by the articles for doing an act which would be his duty as a director to do [6]. Directors are not entitled to get travelling expenses unless the payment is expressly authorized by the articles or by the company in general meeting [7], even though they be entitled to be indemnified against all expenses [8].

Quantum meruit.

A director who after vacating his office continues to act as a director, is not entitled to a quantun meruit for his services, and if paid, the company can recover the amount [9]. The obligation to pay on a quantun meruit basis does not however depend on an inference of fact from the conduct of the parties, but on an inference which the law imposes on the parties where work has been done or goods have been delivered under what purports to be a binding contract but is not so in fact. The law imposes on the party accepting such service or such goods the obligation to pay for them [10].

Term of service.

Remuneration "at the rate of" so much per annum voted at the general meeting accrues from the date of the meeting [11] and can be recovered for broken part of a year [12]. But if the terms on which the directors are appointed provide for so much per annum as remuneration, a director is entitled to remuneration only for each complete year of service [13]. Articles not being a contract between the company and the directors, an alteration of the articles cannot retrospectively affect the terms as to services already performed [14].

In a voluntary winding up the directors continue as such after the passing of the resolution for winding up [15]. So where a full year's service is required to entitle a director to remuneration, service after commencement of the winding up may count to make up the year [16].

Resolution to forego remuneration.

If a director take part in a resolution of the board determining that no remuneration is to be paid to the directors for a particular year, he cannot claim any remuneration for that year 1. Such resolution may however be rescinded by a subsequent resolution and if this is done, remuneration will be payable as from the date of the rescinding resolution 2. Neither uselessness of the director's services, nor that they have diminished, can be successfully pleaded as a bar to the claim.

Remuneration is not due in the character of member.

The remuneration is not due to a director in his character of a member of the company and is provable as a debt on winding up in competition with the ordinary creditor 3. Payment to a person for special skill and attention is none the less a provable debt, because the person is a director, or because under the articles a director must be a member 4.

Director's fees.

There is no presumption that the directors' fees are to be paid out of profits 5. The meaning of the words "profits" in an article providing remuneration of the directors by a percentage of profits was discussed in Frames v. Bultfontein Mines Co. 6.

Set-off.

Where a company owed to its directors his fees and the directors owed to the company interest on his share calls, the company could not adjust the fees with interest without the director's consent 7. "By common law there is no right of set off between parties mutually indebted, in the absence of an agreement to that effect. And the rule of equity follows the law, unless there are special circumstances connecting the debts besides the mere fact of mutuality on which the relief can be founded" 8. As to lien see notes to reg. 9 ante.

Cestui que trust of a director.

A director's remuneration is not profit derived from his qualification shares. Where he is a trustee for those shares his cestui que trust is not entitled to the amount of the remuneration 9.

Directors who in a debenture-holder's action are appointed receivers and managers at a remuneration continue as directors and are nevertheless entitled to their renumeration as directors 10.

Remuneration at a percentage of 'profits.'

Where a director, managing director or manager, is entitled to be paid a percentage of "profits," it is a question of construction what "profits" means. Prima facie it means profits arising from the carrying on of the company's business as a going concern and the percentage is not payable on profits made by the sale of the whole undertaking of the company in winding up 11, but is payable on profits in kind earned while the company is a going concern, even though not converted into cash until the winding up 12. As income tax payable by the company is part of its profits 13, the percentage is to be calculated on the profits before deduction of the tax 14.

If a director's remuneration for extra work, e.g., as overseas director, has not been determined by the general meeting, he cannot receive it, although he has performed the duties in accordance with the agreement signed and sealed by the directors, but must repay to the company on its counter claim the money paid to him under the agreement 1.

The fact that some of the directors are remunerated as receivers and managers in a debenture-holder's action does not disentitle them to their remuneration in addition as directors from the time when they were appointed receivers and managers until commencement of the winding up 2.

Balance-sheet no acknowledgment.

A balance-sheet adopted and signed by directors pursuant to s. 133 is not an acknowledgment or written promise by the company or its agents to pay the director's fees 3.

For other cases relating to the directors' remuneration see notes to s. 83A.

70. The qualification of a director shall be the holding of at least one share in the company, and it shall be his duty to comply with the provisions of section 85 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913.

Qualification.

A company cannot alter the qualification for its directors except by passing a special resolution 4. A director must hold his qualification shares in such a way that the company may safely deal with him as owner of the shares 5. Shares held jointly with any other person may be a sufficient qualification 6. A director who is entered on the register as holder of shares as liquidator of another company is not qualified 7.

For other cases see notes to ss. 84 and 85.

Powers and duties of Directors.

71. The business of the company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the company, and may exercise all such powers of the company as are not, by the Indian Companics Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the company in general meeting, subject nevertheless to any regulation of these articles, to the provisions of the said Act, and to such regulations being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations or provisions, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if that regulation had not been made.

The articles of a company shall be deemed to contain this regulation ; see s. 17 (2).

Managing. Managing the business of the company includes institution of suits on its behalf when it becomes necessary in the course of management 1.

Director's duty. A director's duty requires him to act with such care as is reasonably to be expected from him having regard to his knowledge and experience. He is not bound to bring any special qualification to his office, but if he is acquainted with the particular business carried on by the company he must give the company the advantage of his knowledge. He is not responsible for damages occasioned by errors of judgment 2.

Company bound by his acts. A company is bound by the acts of the directors, however irregular they may be, provided they are authorized by the company's constitution 3. Where at a meeting of the directors of a company one of the body was authorized by a power of attorney to be executed by two of the directors to appoint or dismiss servants of the company and pursuant to the power of attorney the general manager was dismissed by the director so authorized, it was held that the order of dismissal was valid though some of the directors continued to recognize him as such 4.

They are trustees but not for individual members. The directors are trustees of the powers committed to them, as for instance, the power of approving transfer of shares, of allotting shares, of employing the funds of the company, of making calls or receiving payments in advance of calls, or forfeiting shares, and as trustees they may be rendered liable for their misuse 5. They are not however trustees for individual members 6.

Directors' powers. This form of articles clearly delegates to the directors power to do every thing that the company can do except where the authority of a general meeting of the company is expressly prescribed, and such delegation would include power to issue preference shares 7. The directors can do all acts necessary for management of the company 8, including giving gratuity to its servants 9. But when the undertaking of the company is sold, neither the directors nor the majority of the shareholders can give such gratuity against the wishes of the minority 10.

It is within the powers of the directors to compromise a suit in the interest of the company even if the suit is ill-founded 11. An action by the company should be commenced only by the directors 12.

The powers vested in a board of directors by the articles cannot be interfered with by the shareholders as such. If the shareholders are dissatisfied with what the directors do, their remedy is to remove them in the manner provided by the articles. But so long as a board of directors exists and particular powers are vested in it by the articles, the directors are entitled to exercise those powers without interference by the shareholders 1.

Company in general meeting cannot take the conduct of business out of their hands.

Unless the articles require the directors to conform to directions given by the company in general meeting, the latter cannot, except by special resolution, take the conduct of the business out of the hands of the directors or to compel them to adopt a particular line of action, such as sealing a draft deed or effecting a sale of the company's property 2. But the expression "business of the company" does not include the fixing of the directors' own remuneration 3. Directors cannot by contract deprive themselves of the power to control a manager so as to confer power on him to the exclusion of themselves 4.

Authority is circumscribed by memo. & articles.

Where the authority of the directors is defined by the memorandum or the articles of association they have no power to go beyond this or to undertake any transaction outside the scope of the company's business. But not only do their acts bind the company when done within the scope of their authority, but also where, however irregular, they belong to a class of acts which is authorized by the constitution of the company. A company is bound by its dealings with strangers who act bona fide with the company. A company is liable for all acts done by its directors even though unauthorized, provided that such acts are within the apparent authority of the directors and not ultra vires 5. See notes to s. 83A, ante.

Ratification of directors' acts.

If the act of the directors is not ultra vires it can be ratified by the company; but such ratification of acts done by the directors in excess of their authority given to them by the articles does not extend to give validity to acts of similar character done subsequently 6. Power given by the articles to directors to raise a loan justifies a mortgage 7.

Indemnity clause in articles.

Where the articles provided that "no director shall be liable for any loss, damage or misfortune whatever which shall happen in execution of the duties of his office or in relation thereto unless the same happens through his dishonesty", it was held that the provision was not illegal and that the articles were intended to relieve the directors, who acted honestly, from liability for damages occasioned even by their negligence when such negligence was not dishonest 8.

Outsider acting in good faith.

A bank acting in good faith and without notice of any irregularity is not bound before honouring the cheques to inquire into the state of the accounts between the company and its managing director 9.

Liability to pay preliminary expenses.

It has been held in England that under this form of articles the company cannot be sued if the directors do not pay the preliminary expenses, even though it has taken benefit of the work done under a contract made before its formation [1]. For a discussion of the Indian law in this respect see pp. 102-103.

For other cases see notes to ss. 83A and 100.

72. The directors may from time to time appoint one or more of their body to the office of managing director or manager for such term, and at such remuneration (whether by way of salary, or commission, or participation in profits, or partly in one way and partly in another) as they may think fit, and a director so appointed shall not, while holding that office, be subject to retirement by rotation, or taken into account in determining the rotation of retirement of directors, but his appointment shall be subject to determination ipso facto if he ceases from any cause to be a director, or if the company in general meeting resolve that his tenure of the office of managing director or manager be determined.

Managing director's position.

A managing director is an ordinary director entrusted with special powers [2]. He is not a clerk or servent so as to be entitled to salary in preference to other creditors [3]. Persons dealing bona fide with a managing director are entitled to assume that he has all the powers which according to the constitution of the company a managing director can have [4]. Where a company undertakes to sell the shares belonging to a shareholder, the position of the managing director in negotiating and completing the sale is one of fiduciary character. Utmost good faith should be observed in such cases [5]. If any advantage is obtained by the managing director as the fruit of the sale, the benefit must go to the owner of the shares [5].

Appointment.

Directors cannot appoint a managing director [6] or delegate their powers and duties to other persons [7] in the absence of provisions in the articles empowring them to do so [8]. Where powers are delegated under the provisions of the articles, the directors are absolved from liability for relying on the delegates [9]. This regulation does not expressly authorize any delegation of powers, but the authority is implied under this regulation [10]. Such delegation may certainly be obtained under reg. 91 post. But the appointment or delegation must be made at a meeting where proper quorum is present excluding the interested directors [11].

Where the power is given to the directors to appoint a managing director for such period as they think fit and to revoke the appointment, they can by agreement appoint a managing director for life, and unless they reserve power in the agreement to revoke the appointment, the company cannot dismiss the managing director, and if it does so he will be entitled to damages 1. Where a managing director is appointed by agreement for a certain number of years at a certain salary and before the expiration of the period a resolution supported by the managing director is passed for voluntary winding-up of the company as by reason of its liabilities it cannot continue its business, the managing director is entitled to damages for breach of the agreement 2. If a life director is appointed managing director without specification of the term for which he will hold the office, he will be liable to be removed by the directors 3.

When it is admittedly desirable that a managing director should be appointed, but the directors are unable, owing to internal friction and faction, to make the appointment under the powers conferred by the articles, the company in general meeting has power to make the appointment 4.

By an agreement between a company and a person, who was then a director of the company, the latter was appointed managing director for a term of ten years. Art. 91 of the company's articles of association provided that a managing director should "subject to the provisions of any contract between him and the company be subject to the same provisions as to......removal as the other directors of the company and if he cease to hold the office of director he shall ipso facto and immediately cease to be a managing director." Art. 105 gave the company the power to remove a director before the expiration of his period of office. It was held by the House of Lords (Viscount Maugham and Lord Romer dissenting) that it was an implied term of the said agreement that the company should not remove the managing director from his position as director during the term of years for which he was appointed managing director, that the wrongful removal of him from his position as director and managing director was the company's act none the less because it required two acts and not one only for its accomplishment and that in respect of the breach of agreement the managing director was entitled to the damages (12,000 l.) awarded by the trial judge 5. If a person enters into an arrangement which can only take effect by the continuance of an existing state of circumstances, there is an obligation on his part to do nothing of his own motion to put an end to that state of circumstances under which alone the arrangement can be operative 6. The agreement with the managing director of a company provided: "The managing director shall not, at any time, while he shall hold the office or afterward solicit, interfere with or endeavour to entice away from the company any person, firm or company who at any time during or at the date of the determination of the employment of the managing director were customers of or in the habit of dealing with the company." Shortly after determination of the agreement the defendant (managing director) opened a business of a similar nature. In an action by the company to enforce the contract the Court of Appeal (reversing the decision of Farwell J.) held that the covenant was not wider than was reasonably necessary for the protection of the plaintiff company's trade, and was therefore enforceable by injunction 1.

Under ss. 21 and 57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 a limited company cannot be restrained by injunction from dispensing with the services of the managing agents, even when the contract of service provides that the managing agents are only to be removed in a specified manner and after a specified period. Nor can the shareholders be restrained by injunction from considering the question of such removal at an extraordinary general meeting of the company. The remedy of the managing agents for dismissal, if wrongful, lies in a suit for damages 2. Where in pursuance of the articles of association acted upon by the company a member was appointed its managing director and acted for 11 years in that capacity, the articles constituted an implied contract between the member and the company. In a suit by the managing director, who was removed by the company by a special resolution, for a declaration that he is still the managing director, it was found that the resolution removing him from office was ultra vires, consequently managing director was held entitled to the declaration and the same could not be refused on the ground that the company might subsequently remove him from office by a valid resolution 3.

Powers.

Where there are no provisions in the articles or in the contract appointing managing agents that the powers thereby conferred on them should be subject to the control or assent of the directors, the latter have no right to interfere otherwise than as representing the company in virtue of their general power of management 4.

Where general power of attorney from a company in favour of the managing director or manager is relied upon, it would be necessary to show from the articles or the memorandum of association that the directors can give such a power of attorney 5.

Where the articles provided that "deeds, hundis, cheques, certificates and other instruments shall be signed by the managing director, the secretary and the working director on behalf of the company and shall be valid", a mortgage purporting to be executed by the company but signed not by the managing director but by the other two officials mentioned above was invalid notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagee might have acted in good faith and the money might have been applied to the purposes of the company. The mere fact that the services of the managing director was no longer available to the company would not make the execution valid 6.

Duties.

The duties of a managing director are of a higher standard than of an ordinary director, and where by any act of the managing director, which is inspired by motives of personal gain, the company suffers loss, the managing director is liable to make good such loss 7.

A company is not responsible for acts done by its managing director, when he is acting in his private capacity and not in pursuance of any authority given by the company 1. The manager or managing director of a mill company has no implied authority to purchase on behalf of the mill the liability of a stranger and still less that of his own manager or managing partner in a private transaction of his own 2.

Arrears of salary.

Arrears of salary due to a managing director are not debts due to him in his character as a member within the meaning of s. 156, sub-s. 1 (vii) 3.

Outsiders dealing bona fide with managing director.

Persons dealing bona fide with a managing director are entitled to assume that he has all such powers as he purports to exercise, if they are powers which according to the constitution of the company a managing director can have 4. All persons dealing with a company must ascertain the limitations imposed by the articles, but they are not bound to draw any direct or obvious inferences from the provisions thereof, nor is there any obligation cast upon them to see that such directors are properly appointed, or that they have acted exactly in accordance with the manner therein prescribed 5.

A bank acting in good faith may credit to the managing director's own overdrawn account sums drawn from the company's accounts by cheques signed by the managing director 6.

The grant of a permanent lease may be within the scope of the apparent authority of a managing director 7. Outsiders are entitled to presume that the managing director has acted regularly within the scope of his authority in the manner provided in the articles 7.

A company suing for a declaration that they are the managing agents of another company must ask consequential relief of injunction to restrain the other company to interfere with the discharge of their duties as managing agents, otherwise no declaration will be granted by the Court 8.

Retirements.

If there is no provision in the articles of the managing director's exemption from retirement by rotation, he ceases to be the managing director on his failure to be re-elected after retirement, even if the directors have purported to appoint him for a fixed period 9. But where it is an implied term of the agreement between the company and the managing director that the latter should not be removed from the position of director during the term of years for which he was appointed, he cannot be removed from the position of managing director during that term, even by altering the articles of association 10.

of the company (otherwise than by the issue of share capital) shall not at any time exceed the issued share capital of the company without the sanction of the company in general meeting.

This regulation limits the director's authority to borrow. It requires that the directors shall so restrict their borrowing that the amount for the time being remaining undischarged shall not exceed the limit specified. The intention of the regulation is not satisfied by treating it as a direction that beyond the specified limit further borrowings, though not prohibited, are to be expended in reduction of existing loans 1. Where however the loans, although in excess of the authority of the directors are not ultra vires, the money having been received and applied for its purposes, the official liquidator of the company cannot, during the winding up proceedings, reduce the balance outstanding at the date of liquidation by disputing the liability of the company to pay the whole sums advanced 1. The words "for the time being" do not mean "when the claim is made." The regulation in terms fixes the limit at any time 2.

74. The directors shall duly comply with the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force, and in particular with the provisions in regard to the registration of the particulars of mortgages and charges affecting the property of the company or created by it, and to keeping a register of the directors, and to sending to the registrar an annual list of members, and a summary of particulars relating thereto and notice of any consolidation or increase of share capital, or conversion of shares into stock, and copies of special resolutions and a copy of the register of directors and notification of any changes therein.

75. The directors shall cause minutes to be made in books provided for the purpose—

(a) of all appointments of officers made by the directors;

(b) of the names of the directors present at each meeting of the directors and of any committee of the directors;

(c) of all resolutions and proceedings at all meetings of the company, and, of the directors, and of committees of directors; and every director present at any meeting of directors or committee of directors shall sign his name in a book to be kept for that purpose.

2. T. R. Pratt (Bombay) Ltd. v. E. D. Sassoon & Co. [1936] B. 62, 37 Bom. L. R. 978, 161 I.C. 126.

Responsibility of a director. A director who is present at a board meeting at which the minutes of a previous meeting are confirmed, even though he be a party to this confirmation, is not thereby made responsible for what was done at such previous board meeting 1.

Notice. As to notice of matters referred to in minutes read at a meeting in which a director was present see the cases noted below 2.

See notes to s. 83.

The Seal.

76. The seal of the company shall not be affixed to any instrument except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors, and in the presence of at least two directors and of the secretary or such other person as the directors may appoint for the purpose ; and those two directors and secretary or other person as aforesaid shall sign every instrument to which the seal of the company is so affixed in their presence.

Seal without authority. A document will be regarded as a forged one if the seal is affixed to it without the authority of a resolution of the board 3. If the seal be affixed under the authority of a board meeting at which a quorum is not present, the execution will, as between the company and persons who had not notice of the irregularity, be good 4 ; but if the seal has been wrongfully affixed the company will not be bound 5. Negligence of a company for the purpose of an estoppel must be such negligence as is immediately connected with the act by which the loss arises 6. As affixing the seal is not a matter in which normally a single director would have power to act without the authority of the board, a person is not relieved from the obligation to inquire whether the formalities required by the article has been complied with 7.

Any person who has power to manage the affairs of the company has power to affix the seal 8. A contract to refer to arbitration any dispute which might arise between a company and an individual is not illegal, because it is not under the company's seal 9.

An agreement 10 or a mortgage deed 11 does not require seal. If a document under seal is not necessary, then a mere defect in the manner of affixing the seal will not render the document invalid (see notes 10 & 11.)

Disqualifications of Directors.

77. The office of director shall be vacated if the director—

(a) fails to obtain within the time specified in sub-section (1) of section [85] of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or at any time thereafter ceases to hold, the share qualification, if any, necessary for his appointment ; or

(b) is found to be of unsound mind by a Court of competent jurisdiction ; or

(c) is adjudged insolvent ; or

(d) fails to pay calls made on him in respect of shares held by him within six months from the date of such calls being made ; or

(e) without the sanction of the company in general meeting accepts or holds any office of profit under the company other than that of a managing director or manager or a legal or technical adviser or a banker ; or

(f) absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the directors or from all meetings of the directors for a continuous period of three months, whichever is longer, without leave of absence from the board of directors ; or

(g) accepts a loan from the company ; or

(h) is concerned or participates in the profits of any contract with the company ; or

(i) is punished with imprisonment for a term exceeding six months :

Provided, however, that no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any company which has entered into contracts with, or done any work for, the company of which he is director, but a director shall not vote in respect of any such contract or work, and if he does so vote, his vote shall not be counted.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the original clauses (e) and (f) have been re-lettered as clauses (h) and (i) respectively and for clauses (a) to (d) the new clauses (a) to (g) have been substituted. The original clauses (a) to (d) were as follow :

(a) ceases to be a director by virtue of section 85 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 ; or

(b) holds, or any partner of his, or the firm of which he is a member, holds, any other office of profit under the company except that of managing director or manager ; or

(c) is adjudged insolvent ; or

(d) is found lunatic or becomes of unsound mind ; or.

In cl. (a) the figure within square brackets has been substituted for the figure "84" by the amending Act II of 1938, as figure "84" was a mistake.

See the new s. 86 I.

Directors appointed for a definite period.

A company whose directors are appointed for a definite period has no inherent power to remove them before the expiration of that period. If the articles contain no power to remove directors before the expiration of their period of office, but if they authorize the shareholders by special resolution to alter any of the articles, there must be a separate special resolution altering the articles so as to give power to remove directors before a resolution can be passed to remove any of them 1.

Resignation.

Subject to the articles of association a director is entitled to resign his office and cannot withdraw his resignation without the company's consent 2. After his resignation has been accepted by the board a director ceases to be liable for any report made or dividend declared, even though he be named as a director in the report 3. Where the articles provide that the office of a director should ipso facto be vacated if by notice in writing to the company he resigns his office, oral resignation is sufficient. "I see no reason in law," observed Bennett J., "why the contract of service between the company and its directors should not be terminated by the same means as that by which the contract of service between two individuals may be terminated, and I see no ground in law for saying that where a written contract has been made for service which requires a written notice on either side before it can be terminated, it cannot be terminated by word of mouth by mutual consent between the parties 4.

Absence from board meeting.

Where the articles provide that a director's office will be vacated on his absenting himself from board meeting for a certain period, the expression "absenting himself" means being absent voluntarily or deliberately 5. Time does not begin to run until a meeting has been held which he should have attended 6.

Happening of a specified event.

Where the articles provide that a director shall vacate his office on the happening of a specified event, the office falls vacant on the happening of such an event and the company cannot waive the event or condone the act 7.

Cl. (a). See s. 85 and notes thereto.

Insolvency.

Cl. (c). In order that a director should be insolvent within the meaning of this regulation it is not necessary that there should be a definite act of insolvency done on a particular day from which it can be said that the insolvency dates ; it is sufficient if there is evidence from which the Court can find that the director is insolvent 8. If a director becomes financially insolvent and asks his creditors to accept a composition, he is to be regarded as an insolvent within the meaning of the regulation 9.

Holding any other office of profit.

Cl. (e). Where the articles provided that a director should ipso facto vacate his office if he accepted or held any other office under the company except that of the managing director or manager, a resolution appointing two of the directors to act as solicitors of the company did not disqualify them 1. But if a director hold the office of a paid trustee of a debenture deed, that will disqualify him 2. A secretary, if elected as a director, may act as such if he cease to receive the salary of the post of secretary 3.

Participation in profits of a contract.

Cl. (h). In the absence of a provision in the articles a director is precluded from partaking any benefit from a contract which requires the sanction of his board 4, and if he makes any profit he must account to the company 4. It makes no difference that the profit is one which the company itself could have obtained 5.

Meaning of "profits."

As to the meaning of the expression "profits of any contract" see the cases noted below 6. A director's office is vacated if he is concerned in any such contract, although no profits arise therefrom 7. A director is entitled to be heard on the question whether his office has been vacated 8.

When does the disqualification cease.

The disqualification ceases as soon as the transaction is completed, and the director may be re-elected 9.

See notes to s. 83 B.

Rotation of Directors.

78. At the first ordinary meeting of the company, the whole of the directors shall retire from office, and at the ordinary meeting in every subsequent year, one-third of the directors for the time being or, if their number is not three or a multiple of three, then the number nearest to one-third shall retire from office.

The articles of a company other than a private company which is not the subsidiary company of a public company shall be deemed to contain this regulation ; see s. 17(2).

Retirement of directors.

Where besides the governing director and the managing director (who were not to retire according to the articles of association of the company) the number of ordinary directors was reduced to two only, neither of the latter was bound to retire from office at the ordinary general meeting 10.

Effect of failure to hold general meeting. Where by the provisions of the articles directors retire from office at an ordinary general meeting, failure to hold such a meeting will prevent their re-election, their retirement dating from the last day in the year in which a general meeting could have been held 1. The word "directors" does not include de facto directors or subscribers to the memorandum of association. It applies only to directors who have been duly appointed under the articles. 2.

Additional directors. Where additional directors are appointed in accordance with provisions similar to those under reg. 85, the whole number of directors of whom a proportion is to retire does not include the additional directors who hold office until the ordinary general meeting 3.

See notes to reg. 82.

79. The directors to retire in every year shall be those who have been longest in office since their last election, but as between persons who became directors on the same day those to retire shall (unless they otherwise agree among themselves) be determined by lot.

Regulations 78 to 82 shall be deemed to be contained in the articles of all companies other than private companies which are not subsidiaries to public companies; see s. 17(2).

80. A retiring director shall be eligible for re-election.

See notes under reg. 79.

81. The company at the general meeting at which a director retires in manner aforesaid may fill up the vacated office by electing a person thereto.

See notes under reg. 79.

Recommended by board. If the company can, under the articles, only appoint persons recommended by the board, the recommendation must be made by a properly constituted board meeting 4. It is not enough that a majority of the board being present assent to the appointment 4.

Amendment. Where a notice stated that certain resolution would be passed "with such amendments as should be determined upon" including a resolution to appoint three named persons as directors, it was competent for the company to add three other persons by way of amendment 5.

Poll. At an election of directors, if a poll is demanded, a return of the poll must be taken to be good unless the question is raised before a proper tribunal 6.

Illegal agreement. Where under the articles directors are to be appointed at a general meeting, an agreement made by the directors by which directors are to be imposed upon the shareholders by another company is illegal 7.

Intention to propose —written notice.

Where the articles provided that a member could not be elected a director unless written notice of the intention in that behalf were given to the company not less than 14 days before the day of election of directors, a notice given 14 days before the adjourned meeting was held to be sufficient [1].

82. If at any meeting at which an election of directors ought to take place, the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the meeting shall stand adjourned till the same day in the next week at the same time and place, and, if at the adjourned meeting the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the vacating directors or such of them as have not had their places filled up shall be deemed to have been re-elected at the adjourned meeting.

See notes under reg. 79.

Where inapplicable.

This regulation does not apply to de facto directors [2], nor where no meeting is held at all in breach of the regulations and s. 76 [3].

Where position not filled up.

If for any reason the first or the adjourned meeting does not proceed validly to fill up the places of the vacating directors, they will continue in office [4]. In such a case there is no vacancy to which a successor can be elected [5].

S. 42, Specific Relief Act.

Where the articles provided that the directors should be elected annually at a general meeting, it was held by B. B. Ghose and Garlick JJ. that so long as the general meeting was not held, the directors elected at the previous general meeting would continue in office [6]. It was further held in this case that a declaration could not be made under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877 to the effect that the directors elected in the previous year were no longer directors of the company and that all acts done by them were illegal and void, because the plaintiff did not in such a suit claim to be entitled to any legal character or to any right as to any property which had been denied. It was also held that such a declaration ought not to be made by the Court in the exercise of its discretion [7].

83. Subject to the provisions of sections 83A and 83B of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 the company may from time to time in general meeting increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation the increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

The words in italics have been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936.

84. Any casual vacancy occurring on the board of directors may be filled up by the directors, but the person so chosen shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

The election of a person as a director by the directors entitles him to hold office till the next general meeting, while if he is elected at a general meeting, he is entitled to hold office for three years under reg. 78 1.

As to what are casual vacancies see the case noted below 2.

A casual vacancy means in general any vacancy occurring by death, resignation or bankrupcy and not by effluxion of time 3.

A casual vacancy may be filled up either by the directors or by the general meeting 4.

85. The directors shall have power at any time, and from time to time, to appoint a person as an additional director who shall retire from office at the next following ordinary general meeting, but shall be eligible for election by the company at that meeting as an additional director.

Additional directors.

Under this form of articles the directors only have the power of appointing additional directors 5. But if the company in general meeting has a concurrent power 6 under the articles or if owing to deadlock there is no board capable of making the appointment 7, a general meeting can elect additional directots.

Art. 148 of the articles of association of a company was in terms similar to reg. 82 ante and art. 151 was a combination of regn. 83 and the present regulation. Under art. 151 the board of directors co-opted six persons as directors who were under that article to hold office only until the next following ordinary general meeting at which they were to retire, bur could be re-elected. At such ordinary general meeting only two out of the retiring directors were re-elected, but nothing was said about the co-opted directors and no election in their place was mooted or effected. It was held, (1) the vacancy created by the retirement of a co-opted director was precisely the same as that created by the retirement of the shareholders' director and therefore Art. 148 applied to the co-opted directors ; (2) the provisions of art. 148 not being mandatory the six co-opted directors must be deemed to have been re-elected within the meaning of art. 148 by virtue of a notional adjourned meeting and a notional re-appointment 8. It is however submitted with great respect that art. 148 (corresponding to reg. 82) seems to apply only to directors elected by the shareholders or appointed by the articles of association and not to directors co-opted by the board of directors as the power to do this latter act is given by a subsequent article as a temporary measure.

Where the articles provided, "The governing directors shall have power from time to time and at any time to appoint and remove at will additional directors", on the construction of the articles it was held that this power was to be exercised by all the governing directors and the words "governing directos" were not equivalent to a "majority of the governing directors." The rule of corporation law (laid down in Grindley v. Barker 6 T. R. 388) that when a duty is delegated to a body of persons those persons can act at a meeting does not apply to the case of articles of associations of companies incorporated under the Companies Act [1].

See notes to s. 83 B and to regulations 68 and 72 ante.

86. The company may by extraordinary resolution remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead; the person so appointed shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

Removal of directors.

A company, whose directors are appointed under its articles for a definite period, has no inherent power to remove them before the expiration of the period without first altering the articles; even a special resolution for removal will not be effective [2].

Where the articles provide that a company may remove any director "for negligence, misconduct or any other reasonable cause", it is the general meeting which can judge whether the cause is reasonable or not, and in the absence of a fraud the Court will not interfere with the decision of the general meeting [3].

Exclusion.

A director who has been excluded from board meetings by his co-directors has the right to compel them to admit him [4].

Proceedings of Directors.

87. The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise regulate their meetings, as they think fit. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may, and the secretary on the requisition of a director shall, at any time, summon a meeting of directors.

Directors cannot act without a meeting.

Lord Justice Fry said 1 : Directors cannot think without meeting. Lord Justice Cozens-Hardy observed : "It was laid down by the Court of Exchequer in D' Arcy v. Tamar 2 that directors must act together at a board and that it is not sufficient to procure the separate authority of a sufficient number of directors to constitute a quorum" 3. Jessel M. R., said : Where "six directors out of seven met in a different capacity and for a different purpose (at a general meeting of shareholders), such a meeting does not make them a board of directors" 4.

Notice of meeting.

In law a meeting of directors is not duly convened unless due notice is given to all the directors 5. So notice of a board meeting must be given to the directors 6 and a director has no power to waive his right to notice 7. But if a director is abroad, a meeting without notice to him will be valid 8. A meeting without notice to all the directors is invalid 9. Even a majority of the directors cannot act at a meeting of which notice has not been given to the whole body 10. A short notice may suffice, if the directors can attend 11. Even a verbal notice will do, and if the party objecting to the shortness of notice does not intervene at once, it will not prevail 11.

In default of notice to all the directors, the meeting is irregular. No notice may, however, be necessary if the absent directors had knowledge of the meeting otherwise. From the mere fact that there is nothing on the record to show that notice was given, the Court cannot assume that the notice was not given. It is for the party alleging that the meeting was irregular to prove to the satisfaction of the Court that notice was not in fact given to the absent directors. Generally the Court is entitled to assume that everything has been done regularly and in due course, in the absence of evidence to the contrary 12.

Contents of notice.

It is not necessary to state in the notice the business to be transacted at the meeting 13. But if the articles require that a certain business or class of business should be transacted at a meeting of directors specially convened for the purpose, the notice must specify the business 14.

Effect of irregularity.

An irregularity in a meeting of directors for want of notice to all the directors for confirming a transfer of shares does not invalidate a transfer duly made. It is sufficient if at the date of the winding up there is upon the register a transferee who is legally liable to the company in respect of the shares 15.

Meeting—what is. Where there were only two directors, and one did not attend a meeting duly summoned, but the other meeting him shortly after in the passage of his office proposed the election of a third director and, an objection being made, declared that by his casting vote as chairman he carried the resolution, it was held to be valid 1. But where one director met another at a railway station and proposed resolutions to which the other objected, they were held not to be valid 2.

Agenda. At a board meeting the directors can take the items of business in such order as they think proper, and not necessarily in the order on the agenda paper 3.

Ratification. If the previous meeting is informal, a subsequent meeting can ratify the business done at the former meeting 4.

Resolution signed by all directors. It seems that a provision in the articles that a letter signed by all or a majority of the directors shall have the same effect as a resolution of the board, is valid 5.

Exclusion from meeting. A director cannot exclude a co-director from a board meeting 6. The excluded director can get an injunction restraining his exclusion 7.

As to the chairman's casting vote see notes to reg. 90.

88. The quorum necessary for the transaction of the business of the directors may be fixed by the directors, and unless so fixed shall (when the number of directors exceeds three) be three.

Where articles do not fix quorum. Where the articles do not prescribe a quorum the number who usually act in conducting business of the company will constitute a quorum 8, or a majority of the directors may form a quorum 9. Unless a quorum is present the business transacted is void 10.

What is quorum. The quorum must not be a quorum of persons not competent to vote 10, e.g., directors who are interested in the contract under discussion 10; and the objection will not be removed by dividing the business into two resolutions and each director voting only on the resolution affecting the other, or reducing the quorum to one to make the other alone to form a quorum 11.

Presumption. Where the articles provide, as here, that the quorum may be fixed by the directors, an outsider is entitled to assume that the directors have acted with a proper quorum 12.

Committee. Under this form of articles the directors may appoint a quorum of one or delegate powers to a committee consisting of one director only 1.

Exclusion. The presence of a quorum does not prevent a lawfully constituted director from attending the board meeting or does not allow a portion of the board to exclude others 2.

If the number in office is less than a quorum. If the number remaining in office is less than a quorum it is doubtful whether they can act 3. It has however been held by the Rangoon High Court that where one of the two directors is debarred from acting, the other director can alone act for the company 4.

89. The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body, but, if and so long as their number is reduced below the number fixed by or pursuant to the regulations of the company as the necessary quorum of directors, the continuing directors may act for the purpose of increasing the number of directors to that number, or of summoning a general meeting of the company, but for no other purpose.

Directors' powers. If the articles provide that the continuing directors may act (not in the restricted manner as in this regulation) notwithstanding vacancies, a number less than the minimum allowed by the articles can bind the company 5.

Meaning of "continuing." This regulation does not validate the acts of an original board less in number than the minimum prescribed by the regulations—"continuing" means continuing after there has once been a board competent to transact business 6.

A director may be liable to pay for the shares allotted to him or for any calls made thereon by a resolution to which he was himself a party as a director, although the resolution was not passed by a board properly constituted according to the company's articles of association. In such cases he will be estopped from denying his liability 7.

90. The directors may elect a chairman of their meetings and determine the period for which he is to hold office ; but if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting.

Appointment of chairman. The appointment of a chairman made in contravention of the articles is void, and is not confirmed by mere acquiesence ; consequently where there is no provision for a casting vote of a chairman, a resolution carried by his casting vote is inoperative 8.

8. Clark v. Workman [1920] 1 I. R. 107.

The mere appointment of a permanent director as chairman will not make him a permanent chairman 1.

Chairman's liability.

Where certain sums were received by the chairman on behalf of the company and in the capacity of its chairman and the sums were actually expended on matters connected with the company, the chairman could not be made personally liable for the sums so received 2.

91. The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit ; any committee so "formed" shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on them by the directors.

The word within inverted commas was substituted for the word "found" by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1914.

Delegation of power to a committee.

Unless the articles authorize it the directors cannot delegate their powers to a committee 3. The committee under this regulation may consist of a single director 4. By making such delegation the directors lose their power to act in the matter 5 or to control the company's affairs 6. No single director can bind the company unless powers have been delegated to him by the board under some provisions in the articles 3.

Where a resolution of the board of directors has authorized one of the directors to attend to all affairs and Court proceedings, the director so authorized can file petitions in insolvency as such petitions involve proceedings in Court 7.

Presumption.

Delegated authority will be presumed where one or two directors act in a matter within the scope of the ordinary business of the company 8. By the articles of a company the directors had power to delegate to one or more of their body such of the powers conferred on the directors as they might consider requisite for carrying on of the business of the company, and to determine who should be entitled to sign the contracts and documents on the company's behalf. A document purporting to be a guarantee was given to the plaintiffs executed by the company in this form : "The F. E. B., Ltd., signed N. P." N. P. was a director of the company and during the negotiations for the giving of the guarantee he had written to the plaintiffs signing the letters "for and on behalf of the company, N. P. Chairman." Upon these facts in an action on the guarantee it was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to presume that the directors had authorized N. P. to sign contracts on behalf of the company and that the company was liable on the guarantee 9.

is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the members present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting.

93. A committee may meet and adjourn as they think proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present, and in case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

94. All acts done by any meeting of the directors or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

If a person, who had ceased to be a director by the expiry of the period for which he was elected, enters into an agreement as director on behalf of the company with a third party and the other shareholders agree to ratify and carry out the terms of the agreement, the irregularity is cured by this regulation and the company is estopped from challenging the validity of the agreement on the ground that the director was not duly appointed [1]. See s. 86 and notes thereto.

Dividends and Reserve.

95. The company in general meeting may declare dividends, but no dividends shall exceed the amount recommended by the directors.

The articles of all companies shall be deemed to contain this regulation ; see s. 17(2).

Meaning of dividend.

Dividend means the sum paid and received as the quotient forming the share of the divisible sum payable to the recipient [2].

Power to declare dividend.

Where by the articles power is given to the directors to declare a dividend with the sanction of a general meeting and also to set aside out of profits a sum as a reserve fund before declaring a dividend, the shareholders in general meeting cannot declare a dividend [3].

Company is not bound to divide the whole profits.

Unless the memorandum or the articles of association make a clear provision that the whole of the company's profits shall be divided among the shareholders, the company is not bound to do so [4]. Whether the whole or a portion or what portion shall be divided among the shareholders, are questions of internal management of a company and the Court has no jurisdiction to interfere [5]. If the directors in their discretion think that a dividend should not be declared, the Court will not be easily induced to override their decision. The law in this respect was clearly laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the following words : "Their Lordships are not aware of any principle which compels a joint stock company while a going concern to divide the whole of its profits amongst its shareholders. Whether the whole or any part should be divided, or what portion should be divided and what portion retained, are entirely questions of internal management which the shareholders must decide for themselves, and the Court has no jurisdiction to control or review their decisions, or to say what is a 'fair' or 'reasonable' sum to retain undivided, or what reserve fund may be properly required. And it makes no difference whether the undivided balance is retained to the credit of profit and loss account, or carried to the credit of a rest or reserve fund, or appropriated to any other use of the company. These are questions for the shareholders to decide subject to any restrictions or directions contained in the articles of association or bye-laws of the company"........."If the company may form a reserve fund or retain a balance of undivided profits, it must, it would seem, have power to invest the moneys so retained" 1. Except in the case of fraud shareholders cannot insist on the payment of dividends even where the profits are amply sufficient, if the directors decline to declare a dividend 2.

Principle of keeping accounts.

Final dividend cannot be declared except at an annual general meeting at which accounts up to the prescribed date and reports thereon are submitted 3. For the principles upon which the accounts of a trading company should be kept for the purpose of showing how dividends ought to be paid, see the judgment of Chitty J. in the case noted below 4.

When payment can be enforced.

Until a dividend is declared no class of shareholders are entitled to bring an action to enforce payment 5. A shareholder who has with full notice or knowledge of the facts received part of the proceeds of an ultra vires act committed by the directors—such as payment of a dividend out of capital—and who still retains the money, cannot, either individually or as suing on behalf of the general body of shareholders, maintain an action against those directors, nor can he do so even if after action and before trial he repays the moneys he has wrongfully received 6.

Capitalization of profits.

A company may, if its memorandum or articles of association so provide, capitalize profits by issuing fully paid up shares to the members, thereby transferring the sum capitalized from the profit and loss account or reserve account to the share capital 7.

When this is done the question arises whether the profits thus capitalized and distributed among the shareholders are to be regarded as income or capital. If a testator bequeaths the income of his shares in a limited company to a life tenant and the capital to the residuary legatee, it has been decided by the House of Lords that even where the accumulated profits are distributed by the company as bonus dividend which is applied in part payment of new shares allotted, the so-called bonus dividend is capital and the life-tenant is not entitled to the bonus or the new shares 8. The principle of this decision was applied by the House of Lords in cases where the question was whether dividends of a limited company declared out of its current annual profits and distributed in the form of shares of the company was income of the recipient for the purposes of super-tax, i.e., whether it was part of the recipient's "total income from all sources" within s. 66 of the Finance Act (Eng.) 1909-10 or whether it was exempt from super-tax by reason of its having become capital [1]. In Swan Brewery Co. v. Rex [2], where the company passed the necessary resolution to increase its capital by issuing new shares and transferred accumulated profits to the credit of share capital account, it was held by the Privy Council that the allottees were liable to pay income-tax on these shares. In Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Blott, [1], the Swan Brewery Company's case was distinguished by the majority on the ground that the Australian Act under which it was decided, the word "dividend" was defined to include "advantage" and that it was held therein that the new shares which had been issued to the shareholders and paid out of accumulated reserve were "advantages" and so taxable [3]. It was also held in Blott's case by Viscounts Finlay and Cave that the reasoning on which the judgment in Swan Brewery Company's case rested was inconsistent with the decision in Bouch v. Sproule (last note, last page). But in Blott's case Lord Sumner was clearly of opinion that "what was said by the Judicial Committee as to the effect in law and business of a distribution of bonus shares was part of the decision and cannot be distinguished from the present case. That case did not turn on the special definition of dividend in the taxing statute of Western Australia" [4]. He along with Lord Dunedin held that Bouch v. Sproule did not touch the question of income-tax [5]. In Blott's case Lord Haldane said that the company was dominant on the question whether the money in question was to be capital or income for all purposes [6].

Blott's case was followed by the House of Lords in Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. Fisher's Executors [7] in which the bonus was distributed in the form of debenture stock instead of preference shares as in Blott's case and the debenture-stock was redeemable by the company after six years. In Fisher's Executors' case Viscount Cave L.C. quoted with approval the following observation of Lord Haldane made in Blott's case at pp. 184-85: "My Lords, for the reasons I have given I think that it is, as matter of principle, within the powers of an ordinary joint-stock company with articles such as those before us to determine conclusively against the whole world whether it will withhold profits it has accumulated from distribution to its shareholders as income, and as an alternative not to distribute them at all, but apply them in paying up the capital sums which shareholders electing to take up unissued shares would otherwise have to contribute. If this is done, the money so applied is capital and never becomes profits in the hands of the shareholders at all. What the latter gets is no doubt a valuable thing. But it is a thing in the nature of an extra share certificate in the company. His new shares do not give him an immediate right to a larger amount of the existing assets. These remain where they were. The new shares simply confer a title to a larger proportion of the surplus assets, if and when a general distribution takes place as in a winding-up. In these assets the undistributed profits now allocated to capital will be included, profits which will be used by the company for its business but henceforth as part of its issued share capital. Such a transaction appears to me one purely of internal management with which, for the reasons explained by Lord Davey is Burland v. Earle [(1902) A.C. 83, 93], no Court can interfere."

These cases have recently been followed by the Judicial Committee in what looks like an extreme case 1. In this case the reserve fund was capitalized and distributed in the form of a special capital bonus by debentures credited as fully paid up. They were repayable at the option of the company at any time after three months' notice and were in fact all redeemed at various dates prior to the end of 1933. The respondents were assessed to super-tax for the year ending 31st. March, 1932. Their Lordships held that by the transaction in question no income, profit or gain aecrued or arose to or were received by the assessee within the meaning of s. 4, Income Tax Act, 1922 and that as regards the point in issue there was no ground for distinction between the Imperial Act and the Indian Act. Their Lordships observed that the personal motive or purpose of the individual shareholders, even if they held a controlling interest in the company, was irrelevant, if it was made out that the company had in fact capitalized the accumulated profits, and for this their Lordships quoted as authority, the following observations of Lord Sumner himself in Fisher's Executors case (supra at p. 411) : "In any case desires and intentions are things of which a company is incapable. These are mental operations of its shareholders and officers. The only intention that the company has is such as is expressed in or necessarily follows from its proceedings. It is hardly a paradox to say that the form of company's resolutions and instruments is their substance."

The effect of this decision of the Privy Council in Commissioners of Income Tax, Bengal v. Mercantile Bank of India, 1 has however been nullified by amendment introduced by the Income-Tax (Amendment) Act VII of 1939. Under the new section 6A introduced into the Indian Income-Tax Act XI of 1922 "dividend' includes—(a) any distribution by a company of accumulated profits, whether capitalised or not, if such distribution entails the release by the company to its shareholders of all or any part of the assets of the company ; (b) any distribution by a company of debentures or debenture-stock, to the extent to which the company possesses accumulated profits, whether capitalised or not……" The new section 6C of the said Act says : " 'Income' includes anything included in 'dividend' as defined in Clause 6A………" Therefore, as pointed out by Dr. Radha Binod Pal in his great work, "The Law of Income Tax in British India," First Edition (1940), these definitions would now obviate the possibility of evasion of taxation that became possible in the case of Commissioners of Income Tax, Bengal v. The Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd. (the Yule Case) (1936) 63 I. A. 457. For a fuller discussion of the question see the above-mentioned work, pp. 473 to 486.

Where a dividend, profit or bonus of 210,000 l. was credited to the appellant from the undistributed profits of the company and he was allotted 210,000 fully paid shares in proportion to his holding in the company, it was held by the Judicial Committee that, that sum should be included in the assessment of his taxable income for the purpose of Special Tax and Unemployment Relief Tax (Assessment) Act, 1933 respectively both of which provided that "any dividend, interest, profit or bonus credited, paid or distributed to him by the company from any profit derived in or from Victoria (Australia) or elsewhere by it" should be deemed to form part of a person's assessable income 2. "Their Lordships are therefore of opinion that Blott's Case 1 is not only distinguishable from the present case, in view of the difference of the statutory provisions under consideration, but that the reasoning of the speeches is Blott's case 1 above referred to is helpful in illustrating the contrast between the two cases" 2.

In a recent case in England where a dividend was declared by an investment company and a cheque handed to a shareholder upon condition that the cheque should be immediately endorsed back to the company by way of loan, it has however been held that this was not a distribution of income by the company within the terms of the Finance Act, 1922, s. 21 as amended by the Finance Act, 1937, s. 14, and that the transaction was really a capitalization of the sum in question and not a distribution liable to be included in the assessment of the shareholder to sur-tax 3.

Distribution of capital bonus—duty. Where in accordance with its memorandum of association and pursuant to a resolution passed at a general meeting, a company distributed to its ordinary shareholders out of its capital reserve and by way of capital bonus a number of fully paid shares and stock units which it held respectively in other companies, each of the transfers to the various holders of the ordinary shares of the company was a transfer operating as a "voluntary disposition inter vivos" and liable to advalorem duty 4.

Debt. Declaraiton of a dividend creates a debt from the company and limitation begins to run immediately 5.

To whom payable. A company does not hold its dividends as a trustee for the shareholders 6. Dividends are payable to those persons whose names are on the register of members at the time of the declaration 7.

96. The directors may from time to time pay to the members such interim dividends as appear to the directors to be justified by the profits of the company.

Meaning of "member." The word "member" in this regulation includes the personal representative of a deceased shareholder whose name remains on the register of members 8.

Interim dividends. Where the articles provide, as here, for payment of interim dividends, a mere resolution of the board to pay does not create a debt as between the company and the shareholder, and the directors are entitled to rescind the resolution subsequently 9.

For meaning of the word "interim" see the case noted below 10.

97. No dividends shall be paid otherwise than out of profits of the year or any other undistributed profits.

The articles of all companies shall be deemed to contain this regulation ; see s. 17(2).

Meaning of the article.

"The law is much more accurately expressed by saying that dividends cannot be paid out of capital than by saying that they can only be paid out of profits. The last expression leads to the inference that the capital must always be kept up and be represented by assets which if sold would produce it and this is more than is required by law 1. Perhaps the shortest way of expressing the distinction which I am endeavouring to explain is to say that fixed capital may be sunk and lost and yet that the excess of current receipts over current payments may be divided 2, but that the floating or circulating capital must be kept up, as otherwise it will enter into and form part of such excess in which case to divide such excess without deducting the capital which forms part of it will be contrary to law" 3. There is no rule of law that profit of one year's trading could not be divided merely because on the profit and loss account there was a debit balance on the trading of former years 4.

"The statutes do not expressly prohibit payment of dividends out of capital, but their provisions are wholly inconsistent with return of capital to shareholders" 3. Dividends must not be paid out of capital 5, i.e., under the guise of paying dividends the company must not return any part of the subscribed capital to the members 6.

"The two propositions (1) that dividends must not be paid out of capital, and (2) that dividends may only be paid out of profits are not identical but diverse. The first is the requirement of the statutes and cannot be dispensed with ; the latter is in Table A or the articles of the particular company and is one of the regulations of the company which has to be construed. A company which has a balance to the credit of its profit and loss accounts is not bound at once to apply that sum in making good an estimated deficiency in value of its capital assets. It may carry it to a suspense account or to reserve, and if the assets subsequently increase in value the amount neither has been, nor will be, part of the capital. If therefore a part of that balance is used in paying a dividend that dividend is not paid out of capital, because the same has never become capital, although it still remains a question whether it has been paid out of profits or not. It has been pointed out by Lindley L. J. in Lee v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co. 7 that there is nothing in the statute requiring a company to keep up the value of its capital assets to the level of its nominal capital. The requirement is merely negative that dividend shall not be paid out of capital, and the balance to the credit of profit and loss account does not automatically become part of the capital assets, because the value of the actual capital assets has depreciated to an amount equal to or exceeding that balance" 8. "The real question for determination therefore is whether there are profits available for distribution, and this is to be answered according to the circumstances of each particular case, the nature of the company and the evidence of competent witnesses. There is no single definition of the word 'profits' which will fit all cases. Take for instance Professor Marshall's definition 1. 'When a man is engaged in business his "profits" for the year are the excess of his receipts from his business during the year over his outlay for his business; the difference between the value of his stock and plant at the end and at the beginning of the year being taken as part of his receipts or as part of his outlay according as there has been an increase or decrease in value.' I am precluded from adopting this in its entirety by authorities which are binding on me, because in the definition 'stock and plant' obviously include both fixed and circulating capital as defined at p. 134 of the same treatise, as for instance the judgment of Lindley L. J. in Verner v. General & Commercial Investment Trust 2, where he says 'Perhaps the shortest way of expressing the distinction which I am endeavouring to explain is to say that fixed capital may be sunk and lost, and yet the excess of current receipts over current payments may be divided, but that floating or circulating capital must be kept up.' I do not understand his lordship to be laying down a general and universal rule that in every company fixed capital may be sunk and lost, but that there are companies in which that may be the case. All the authorities however agree, I think, that circulating capital must be kept up" 3.

Lord Justice Fletcher-Moulton explained the meaning of the word "profits" in a later case 4. " 'Profits' implies a comparison between the state of business at two specific dates usually separated by an interval of a year. The fundamental meaning is the amount of gain made by the business during the year. This can only be ascertained by a comparison of the assets of the business at the two dates" 5.

"If the total assets of the business at the two dates be compared, the increase which they show at the later date as compared with the earlier date (due allowance of course being made for any capital introduced into or taken out of the business in the meanwhile) represents in strictness the profits of the business during the period in question" 6.

In the same case Lord Justice Farwell observed : "Money which has in fact resulted from the profits made in trading is none the less profit because it is carried over to a suspense account or reserve fund : if it is lost in the trading of subsequent years, there is an end of it ; but so long as it remains in status quo, it remains as undistributed profits ; see Lindley L. J. in Bridgewater Navigation Co. [1891] 2 Ch. 317" 7.

Profit does not necessarily mean any amount actually netted. It only means that, that is the amount by which the credit side exceeds the debit side in the accounts as appearing in the company's books. Till an account is finally settled this sort of profit may be merely on paper. Until a business is actually wound up any statement as to profit is partly fact and partly an estimate. In most cases it is impossible to attain exactitude in ascertaining the profits of a business because such profits are naturally dependent upon the valuation of the assets of the concern. The proper ascertainment of profits in the case of a company is of great importance only in order to avoid the possibility of payment of dividend wholly or partly out of capital which is strictly forbidden. If that is guarded against and there is no idea of declaring a dividend, showing of profit on paper may not be so vitally mistaking the position of the company after all 1.

What are net profits.

"Net profits" of the business for a year is the excess of the receipts for the year over the current expenses and outgoings of the same year, i. e., the fund which for that year is capable of being lawfully applied by the company to the payment of dividend. As a matter of law that fund could only be arrived at after deducting the excess profits duty which is a debt of the company to the Crown 2.

"So long as such a company", observe their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, "is a going concern and is not restricted as to the profits out of which it may pay dividends, it may distribute as dividend to its shareholders the excess of its revenue receipts over expenses properly chargeable to revenue account. The balance to the credit of profit and loss account may in many cases be divided as dividend even if the company's capital account is in debit and such a distribution by way of dividend would prima facie be 'income or profits' of the trust share and belong to the tenant for life" 3.

Ambiguous.

"Dividends presuppose profits of some sort and this is unquestionably true. But the word 'proff' is by no means free from ambiguity" 4. The question of what is profit available for dividends depends upon the result of the whole account fairly taken for the year, capital as well as profit and loss, and though dividends may be paid out of earned profits in proper cases notwithstanding a depreciation of capital, a realized accretion to the estimated value of one item of capital assets cannot be deemed to be profit divisible amongst the shareholders without reference to the whole accounts fairly taken 5. But where sufficient assets would be left to answer the paid up capital, a realized profit on capital asset can be divided unless forbidden by the articles 6.

"It is clear I think that an appreciation in total value of the capital assets, if duly realized by sale or getting in of some portion of such assets, may in a proper case be treated as available for purposes of dividend" 7.

House of Lords reserved their opinion.

Although the question of the payment of dividend out of capital was discussed by the Court of Appeal in the case of the National Bank of Wales 8, the House of Lords reserved their opinion on this important question 9. Lord Halsbury said: "What are profits and what is capital may be a difficult and sometimes an almost impossible problem to solve" 10.

In the same case 11 Lord Macnaghten gave the following warning: "I do not think it desirable for any tribunal to do that which Parliament has abstained from doing--that is, to formulate precise rules for the guidance or embarrassment of business men in the conduct of business affairs" 12.

Previous decision.

But the observations of their Lordships in Dovey v. Cory cannot be considered as having overruled or qualified 13 the previous decisions of the Court of Appeal in the cases noted below 14.

Dividend may be paid out of current profits.

An ordinary trading company may lawfully pay a dividend out of current profits without setting aside a sum sufficient to cover depreciation in the value of the fixed capital 1. "It is not possible for the Court to say that the law prohibits a limited company, even a limited banking company, from paying dividends unless its paid up capital is intact" 2.

Lord Justice Kay held: "Any income received may be divided, whether part of the capital is lost or not. At present I do not know of any law to prevent this, and it might be difficult to provide such a law without unduly interfering with the liberty of commercial proceedings" 3.

The Companies Act does not, nor does the general law, prohibit a company from distributing the clear net profits of its trading in any year unless its paid up capital is intact or until it has first made good all trading losses incurred in previous years 4.

Again Lord Justice Lindley observed: "There is no law which compels limited companies in all cases to recoup losses shown by the capital account out of the receipts shown in the profit and loss account, although care must be taken not to treat capital as if it were profit" 5. Directors are not bound to set aside a portion of the profits as a sinking fund 6, but it is safe for them to make some provision for making good the loss of fixed capital before paying away profits as dividend 7.

If there is a reserve fund also an interest adjustment account or suspense account sufficient to cover the bad and doubtful debts, a company would be justified in declaring a dividend out of profit; and under such circumstances the company would be justified in carrying to profit and loss account interest on bad and doubtful debts not actually realised 8.

Meaning of "capital."

"Moreover when it is said and said truly that dividends are not to be paid out of capital, the word 'capital' means the money subscribed pursuant to the memorandum of association or what is represented by the money. Accretions to that capital may be realized and turned into money, which may be divided amongst the shareholders, as was decided in Lubbock v. British Bank of South America [1892] 2 Ch. 199" 9. As to the distinction between the fixed capital and circulating capital see notes to s. 6, sub-s. (I) (v).

Income v. corpus.

Moneys paid in respect of shares in a limited company may be income or corpus of a settled share according to the procedure adopted, i. e., according as the moneys are paid by way of dividend before liquidation or are paid by way of surplus assets in a winding up. Each process might appear to involve some injustice, the former to the remainder man the latter to the tenant for life 10.

Each case depends upon its circumstances.

The question whether a company has profits available for distribution must be answered according to the circumstances of each particular case, the nature of the company and the evidence of competent witnesses 1. Although in some cases fixed capital may be sunk and lost without precluding a payment of dividend, circulating capital must be kept up 1.

Profit may be carried to suspense account or reserve fund.

"A company which has a balance to the credit of its profit and loss account is not bound at once to apply that sum in making good an estimated deficiency in value of its capital assets. It may carry it to suspense account or to reserve, and if the assets subsequently increase in value, the amount neither has been nor will be part of the capital. If, therefore, a part of that balance is used in paying a dividend, that dividend is not paid out of capital, because the sum has never become capital although it still remains a question whether it has been paid out of profits or not" 2.

In the undernoted case where the directors of a company owing and operating steam trawlers sold some of their vessels for sums largely exceeding the values at which they stood in the balance sheet, carried the proceeds to suspense account and distributed them as cash bonuses to the shareholders, it was held that not having been capitalized by the issue of bonus shares increasing the total capital, the payments were income 3.

Keeping assets up to nominal capital is not necessary.

This subject was first elaborately discussed by eminent Judges in Lee v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co. 4, where it was held that a company was under no obligation to keep the value of its assets up to the nominal amount of its capital, and the payment of a dividend was not to be considered a return of capital merely on the ground that no provision had been made for keeping the assets up to the nominal amount of capital.

Case of "wasting property."

There is nothing in the Companies Act to prohibit a company formed to work a wasting property as, e.g., mine or a patent, from distributing as dividend the excess of the proceeds of working above the expenses of working, nor to impose on the company any obligation to set apart a sinking fund to meet the depreciation in the value of the wasting property. If the expenses of working exceed the receipts, the accounts must not be made out so as to show an apparent profit and so enable the company to pay a dividend out of capital, but the division of the profits without providing a sinking fund is not such a payment of dividends out of capital as is forbidden by law 5.

"If a company is formed to acquire and work a property of a wasting nature, for example a mine, a quarry or a patent, the capital expended in acquiring the property may be regarded as sunk and gone, and if the company retains assets sufficient to pay its debts, it appears to me that there is nothing whatever in the Act to prevent any excess of money, obtained by working the property over the cost of working it, from being divided amongst the shareholders and this in my opinion is true although some portion of the property itself is sold, and in some sense the capital is thereby diminished" 6.

"There is nothing in the Act which says that dividends are only to be paid out of profits. There is a provision to that effect in Table A, and that rather favours the view that the matter of how profits are to be divided and dealt with, and out of what fund dividends are to be declared, is a matter of internal regulation" 1.

Payment of dividend, not object.

"But still there is this firmly fixed that capital assets of the company are not to be applied for any purpose not within the objects of the company and paying dividend is not the object of the company, the carrying on the business of the company is its object" 2.

When capital is lost.

"Having stated shortly what are the provisions of the Act of Parliament relating to this matter, I may safely say that the Companies Acts do not require the capital to be made up if lost. They contain no provision of the kind. There is not even any provision that if the capital is lost the company shall be wound up, and I think this omission is quite reasonable. The capital may be lost, yet the company may be a very thriving concern" 3.

Company is not debtor to capital.

"The notion that a company is debtor to capital, although it is a convenient notion it does not deceive men, is apt to lead one astray. The company is not a debtor to capital, the capital is not a debt of the company" 4. "The amount credited," observe their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, "upon a share may, as between one shareholder and another, while the company is a going concern, determine the proportion of profits receivable by him as dividend, and in a winding up, his proportion of surplus assets, but it has no influence to extend or increase the aggregate amount available for division in due course of administration amongst the whole body of shareholders nor does it make the company a debtor for any sum at all" 5.

Expenditure, chargeable to revenue or capital.

"It is not open to doubt that under ordinary circumstances where a trader in order to effect a saving in his working expenses dispenses with the services of a particular agent or servant, and makes payment for the cancellation of the agency or service agreement, such a payment is properly chargeable to revenue ; it does not involve any addition to or withdrawal from fixed capital ; it is purely a working expense" 6.

"The broad principle applicable to a case like the present is stated by Viscount Cave L. C. in British Insulated &c. Cables v. Atherton 7. But when an expenditure is made not only once and for all, but with a view to bringing into existence an asset or an advantage for the enduring benefit of a trade, I think that there is very good reason (in the absence of special circumstances leading to an opposite conclusion) for treating such an expenditure as properly attributable not to revenue but to capital" 8.

"It should be remembered, in connection with this passage, that the expenditure is to be attributed to capital if it be made 'with a view' to bringing an asset or advantage which is to be for the 'enduring' benefit of the trade. I agree with Rowlatt J. that by 'enduring' is meant 'enduring in the way that fixed capital endures'. An expenditure on acquiring floating capital is not made with a view to acquiring an asset that may be turned over in the course of trade at a comparatively early date. Nor, of course, need the advantage be of a positive character. The advantage may consist in the getting rid of an item of fixed capital that is of an onerous character, as was pointed out by this Court in Mallet v. Stavely Coal & Iron Co. 1" 2.

What is within shareholders' discretion.

"The Act does not say what expenses are to be charged to capital and what to revenue. Such matters are left to the shareholders. They may or may not have a sinking fund or a deterioration fund, and the articles of association may or may not contain regulations on those matters. If they do, the regulations must be observed; if they do not, the shareholders can do as they like, so long as they do not misapply their capital and cheat creditors" 3.

Warning of Lord Justice Lindley.

The following warning of Lord Justice Lindley should always be borne in mind: "You must not have fictitious accounts. If your earnings are less than your current expenses, you must not cook your accounts, so as to make it appear that you are earning a profit and you must not lay your hands on your capital to pay dividend. But it is I think a misappehension to say that dividing the surplus after payment of expenses of the produce of your wasting property is a return of capital in any sense as is forbidden by the Act" 4.

Depreciation.

Depreciation of capital assets such as building and fixed plant must be taken into account before arriving at the profits of the year; so if the articles declare that dividend shall only be payable out of profits, no dividend can be declared until such depreciation has been allowed 5.

Of course "a company may be formed upon the principle that no dividends shall be declared unless the capital is kept undiminished or a company may contract with its creditors to keep its capital or assets up to a given value 6.

Single item of gain.

Apart from a special provision in the articles, a single item of gain by redemption of debenture stock cannot be dissociated from the loss of capital assets, and the amount of the discount is not distributable as dividend 7. If an amount does not arise out of the company's business, it is not distributable in dividend 7. Where the issue of loan capital was not one of the objects or part of the business of the company, but was a power to be exercised incidentally to or in furtherance of, its objects, the discount was not divisible as net profit as it did not arise out of the company's business 8.

Dictim of Cotton, L.J.

"If the Court sees that the directors of the company have acted fairly and reasonably in ascertaining whether this is a division of profit and not of capital, and then in what is really a matter of internal arrangement (if it is done honestly and does not violate any of the provisions of the articles) the Court is very unwilling to interfere, and in my opinion ought not to interfere, with the discretion exercised by the directors, who have the management of the company, or with the powers exercised by the company within the articles" 9.

Recoupment.

Where a company has paid for things, properly chargeable to capital, out of revenue, it can recoup the revenue account at a subsequent time out of capital and may, if necessary, raise fresh capital for the purpose under their borrowing powers[1]. Payment of dividend out of the so-called debenture capital is not illegal[2] as it is no capital at all but money raised by borrowing[3]; and for this purpose it is permissible to revalue the assets[4]. Where depreciation in investments has been debited to revenue account, the investment rising in value, the appreciation may be credited to revenue[5]. But earnings after the commencement of winding up are capital and not income[5]. A company which applies its profits in writing off a corresponding amount of the value of the goodwill instead of carrying them to a goodwill depreciation reserve fund, but which has not finally and unreservedly capitalized these profits, may write back to profit account so much of the depreciation written off goodwill as proves to be in excess of the proper requirement[6].

Sale of capital assets.

If there has been a sale of capital assets with the result that the assets including the purchase money exceed the aggregate amount of the paid up capital and the company's liability to outside creditors, the company can treat the excess as profit and distribute it in dividend although it has been called "capital reserve fund"[7].

Dividend may be paid out of estimated as opposed to realized profits.

Dividends may be paid out of estimated profits, although not actually realized[8], unless the articles provided that dividends should only be paid out of realized profits[9]. "Realized profits" must be taken in its ordinary commercial sense as meaning at least "profits tangible for the purpose of division"[9]. Directors who treat estimated profits as realized and in fact pay dividend out of capital on the chance that sufficient profits might be made, will however be jointly and severally liable, as upon breach of trust[9]. But where debts owing to a company were under-estimated for motives of prudence, the difference between the estimated and ascertained value, when known, represents undrawn profits[10].

Payment out of premium.

Premiums obtained on the issue of shares are profits[11]. There is no principle of law which prevents a company from paying dividends out of assets representing premiums on the issue of shares.[12]

Directors' liability.

In order to charge directors for dividends paid out of capital it is not necessary to establish fraud[13]. But if there is no fraud and the directors acted in the honest belief that there were profits, when in fact there were none, they will not be liable even if the payment of dividend is ultra vires[14]. If dividend is declared without proper investigation of the financial position of the company and no profit and loss account is prepared, but only an account of receipts and payments, making no allowance for risks, the directors will be liable if they fail to show that the dividend was properly declared [1].

It is settled by authorities that (1) directors are quasi trustees of the company's, capital; (2) that directors who improperly pay dividends out of capital are liable to repay such dividends personally upon the company being wound up; (3) that the acquiescence of the shareholders does not affect the creditors in such a case; and (4) that such an act is a breach of trust and the remedy is not barred by the Statute of Limitation [2]. But in this connection the observations of Lindley, M. R. should be borne in mind: "It was stated in the judgment of this Court in Lagunas Nitrate Co. v. Langunas Syndicate [3], that if directors act within their powers—if they act with such care as is reasonably to be expected from them having regard to their knowledge and experience—and if they act honestly for the benefit of the company they represent, they discharge their equitable as well as their legal duty to the company. We believe this statement of the law to be correct and we adopt it as our guide" [4].

Although improper payment of dividend will be restrained by injunction on an action brought by a shareholder, a simple creditor cannot bring such an action on the ground that the fund for payment of his debt is thereby diminished [5], nor can a debenture-stock holder, unless he can show that he has a presently enforceable security [6], maintain such an action even though the assets of the company are insufficient to provide for payment of the so-called loan capital [6].

Directors who are knowingly parties to the payment of dividend out of capital are liable to proceedings by action, or in the case of winding up, by misfeasance summons under s. 235 [7]. Where the directors fall short of the standard of care which they ought to apply to the affairs of the company, the onus is upon them to show that the dividends have been paid out of profits [8].

Who can sue & obtain injunction.

An individual member can maintain an action in his own name without bringing it on behalf of other persons and himself to restrain the corporation from doing an ultra vires act [9]. But if a dividend has been paid out of capital no individual shareholder, who has received his dividend with knowledge of all the facts and still retains it, can maintain an action against the directors to compel them to pay to the company the amount wrongly distributed as dividend [10].

Preference shareholders may obtain an injunction to restrain a proposed payment of an interim dividend in excess of that authorized by the articles [11], or of any ordinary dividend in prejudice of their rights [12].

Language of previous Acts.

The language of Table A of the English Act of 1862 as also of the Indian Act of 1882 was "out of the profits arising from the business of the company." The language of the present article is much wider.

98. Subject to the rights of persons (if any) entitled to shares with special rights as to dividends, all dividends shall be declared and paid according to the amounts paid on the shares, but if and so long as nothing is paid upon any of the shares in the company, dividends may be declared and paid according to the amounts of the shares. No amount paid on a share in advance of calls shall, while carrying interest, be treated for the purposes of this article as paid on the share.

How dividends are to be distributed.

In the absence of such an article members are entitled to dividend in proportion to their shares and not in proportion to the amount paid thereon [1], for the interests of shareholders in respect of their shares as regards dividends and everything else are equal [2]. But in the same company if there are shares of £50 and £1 respectively, each £50 share will be treated for this purpose as fifty £1 shares [3]. Surplus assets remaining after payment of all debts and return of all paid up capital will be divided on the same principle [4].

Table A of the Act of 1882.

Table A of the Act of 1882 following that of the English Act of 1862 provided: "The directors may, with the sanction of the company in general meeting, declare dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to the shares."

Income-tax.

If a class of shares is entitled to a dividend, it is subject to deduction of income tax. In the absence of express words, the preference shareholders are not entitled to have their preference dividends free of income tax [5]. But see Bai Lalita v. Tata Iron & Steel Co. [6] where Beaumont, C. J. after refering to ss. 18 and 19 of the Income-Tax Act XI of 1922 observes: "It is therefore in my opinion clear that in the case of a company the tax has to be paid by the company direct and not on behalf of the shareholders, and this is rendered clear by the provisions as to return of income and assessment of companies contained in ss. 22 and 23 of the (Income-Tax) Act." Where no income-tax was payable by the company because of deductions made on account of arrears of depreciation allowed under s. 10(2) (vi) of the Income-tax Act, 1922, and there was no burden to adjust, the company was not justified in making any deduction in respect of income-tax from the dividends paid [6]. Where under the contract between the company and the preference shareholders, as embodied in the articles of association, the company had to pay a full dividend of 7½ p. c. in every year when profits permitted, in any year in which the company was liable to income-tax, it could deduct tax at the standard rate leaving the shareholders to claim a refund from Government in a proper case under s. 48 of the Income-tax Act, 1922 and where no tax was payable by the company, there was no right to deduct [6]. "Section 20 (Income-tax Act, 1922) provides", observes Beaumont C. J. in the last cited case, "that the principal officer of a company shall, at the time of distribution of dividends, furnish to every person receiving a dividend a certificate to the effect that the company has paid or will pay income-tax on the profits which are being distributed, and on such certificate a shareholder may recover a refund of income-tax under section 48 where the company has been charged at a rate greater than that applicable to his total income for the year. The provisions of section 20 are no doubt mandatory, but in my opinion, they only apply where the company is liable to tax, and I cannot think that the officers of the company in this case were justified, as against their preference shareholders, in giving year after year a certificate that income-tax had been or would be paid on the profits being distributed when in fact no income-tax was being charged on such profits. The penalty imposed by section 51 on a failure to furnish a certificate under section 20 only arises where the failure is without reasonable cause or excuse and the fact that the certificate would be untrue would seem to provide reasonable cause for not issuing it."

Where an assessee's income in assessment included dividends declared by a company registered in India whose profits were found to include specified sums to which in accordance with s. 4, sub-s. (1) of the Income-tax Act, 1922 the said Act did not apply being profits or gains which had neither accrued, nor been received in India, and the company had been assessed in respect of profits to which the Act did apply, it was held that the whole of the dividends so received by the assessee were exempted from taxation to ordinary income-tax in accordance with s. 14, sub-s. 2(a) of the Income-tax Act 1. The underlying principle of cl. (a) of sub-s. (2) of s. 14 is that the dividend represents merely the shareholders' share in income of the company 1.

Rights of preference share-holders.

If it is provided in the memorandum or the articles of association that the rights of the holders of preference shares should come first, they cannot be postponed 2; but if the preference shares are issued subject to the rights of the company to issue fresh capital having such preference and priorities as shall be agreed upon, the original preference shares may be postponed 3.

A declaration that the profits are to be applied first in paying a dividend on the preference shares and secondly on the ordinary shares, gives the preference shareholders cumulative dividend 4, unless it is provided that the profits of each year are to be distributed among the preference shareholders on the basis mentioned 5.

Where preference shareholders are given a fixed preferential dividend at a specified rate, their right to any further dividend is impliedly negatived 6.

For other cases see notes to s. 192.

Where a clause in the memorandum of association provided that the preference shares should entitle the holder to a fixed cumulative dividend at 7 p. c. on the amount for the time being paid up and to the repayment of capital before any dividend was paid to the holders of ordinary shares and to a further dividend calculated as therein mentioned, it was held that the company could pay dividend on ordinary share capital subject only to the fixed cumulative dividend of 7 p. c. on the preference shares and that the latter were entitled in the event of a winding up to rank pari passu with the holders of ordinary shares in any surplus assets of the company 7.

A guarantor of preference dividends who has made payments pursuant to the guarantee can claim only to be subrogated to the rights of preference shareholders and cannot claim to be repaid as a creditor by the company 1.

Arrears of dividend.

Arrears of dividend cannot be paid up to the date of the winding up unless such dividends have in fact been declared, or unless the articles contain express provisions to the effect 2. Where there were arrears of dividend on preference shares, they remained arrears of dividend and could only be paid out of profits, and neither did the arrears, nor the interest, became a debt due from the company different in character from the obligation to pay current dividends 3. The cause of action for recovery of such arrears is governed by art. 116 or art. 120 of the Limitation Act IX of 1908 3. The word "registered" in art. 116 of the Limitation Act includes a deed registered under the Companies Act and is not confined to a deed registered under the Registration Act XVI of 1908 3.

As to distribution of arrears of dividend to the ordinary shareholders see the cases noted below 4.

Payment in cash.

Shareholders can insist upon payment of dividend in cash unless there is an express agreement to accept shares or debentures 5.

Payable elsewhere.

Where the dividends were by agreement between the parties to be paid in Australia, the company was deemed to have discharged its obligation by paying in Australian currency that which was in Australia legal tender for the nominal amount of the dividend warrant 6.

Payment by cheque.

Where the articles provide that dividend may be paid by cheque or warrant sent by post to the registered address of each shareholder, the posting of the warrant amounts to payment and if the warrant is lost, the shareholder's remedy is to sue upon the lost warrant. But where the dividend warrant is lost the company can demand an indemnity before issuing another 7.

Only members on the register on the date of declaration are entitled.

As between a company and its members, and subject to the articles, only those members who are on the register when the dividend is declared are entitled to participate in it. But as between the vendor and purchaser of shares, where the contract for sale is silent as to dividends, the purchaser is entitled to dividends declared on the shares either before or after the date fixed for completion of the contract but unpaid at the date of the contract, although the dividend is declared in respect of a period antecedent to such date 8.

If the memorandum or the articles give a preferential right in respect of dividend, the dividend is prima facie cumulative, i. e., if the money applicable to dividend in one year is not sufficient to pay the preference dividend, the money so applicable in future years has to make up the deficiency including arrears, before anything is paid as dividend to the holder of other shares 1. A provision that the profits are to be applied first in paying a dividend on the preference shares and secondly on the ordinary shares, gives the preference shareholders a cumulative dividend 2, unless any other clause in the articles shows that the profits of each year are to be distributed between the preference and ordinary shareholders on the basis named 3. But a declaration that a preferential dividend is to be paid "out of the net profits of each year" and after such payment a dividend on the ordinary shares, does not give a right to claim cumulative dividend 4.

See notes to s. 6, and regs. 3 and 4.

99. The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the company such sums as they think proper as a reserve or reserves which shall, at the discretion of the directors, be applicable for meeting contingencies, or for equalizing dividends, or for any other purpose to which the profits of the company may be properly applied, and pending such application may, at the like discretion, either employed in the business of the company or be invested in such investments (other than shares of the company) as the directors may from time to time think fit.

In general a company is entitled to place profits to a depreciation or to a reserve fund, and dissentient shareholders, in the absence of a declaration of dividend or bonus or a winding up, cannot challenge the decision of the majority 5.

Carrying profits to reserve.

A company may, without any special authority in the articles, carry profits to reserve and use the reserve in the business 6, or invest it in securities 7. But if the articles expressly provide that the profits are to be applied in particular proportions among the different classes of shareholders and contain no provision for a reserve fund, they cannot be carried to reserve 8. As to the new provision for reserve funds to be maintained by banking companies see s. 277K.

Right of preference shareholders.

The right of the preference shareholders to dividend is, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, subject to the directors' right to carry sums to the reserve 9. In such a case "it will be the duty of the directors to fix the amount of the fund to be retained with reference to the general interest of all classes of shareholders and not to favour any one class at the expense of the others" 10.

Profits carried to reserve.

Where the articles specify a particular method of placing amounts to reserve, the provisions must be complied with 1. Profits carried to a reserve fund remain profits unless and until they are effectually capitalized 2 and may be distributed as dividends 3, though there is a loss on the capital account 4. But as to the right of debenture-holders to intervene see Tilt Cove Copper Co. 5.

Specific provision in the articles.

Where the articles provide that after allowing for all charges the profits should be applied in payment of dividends, the directors cannot apply any portion of the profits in creating a reserve fund 6. The articles may be so framed as to prevent the application of the reserve fund to the payment of dividends 7.

100. If several persons are registered as joint-holders of any share, any one of them may give effectual receipts for any dividend payable on the share.

101. Notice of any dividend that may have been declared shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned to the persons entitled to share therein.

102. No dividend shall bear interest against the company.

Accounts.

103. The directors shall cause to be kept proper books of account with respect to—

(a) all sums of money received and expended by the company and the matters in respect of which the receipts and expenditure take place ;

(b) all sales and purchases of goods by the company ;

(c) the assets and liabilities of the company.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the above regulation 103 has been substituted for the original regulation 103 which was as follows :—

103. The directors shall cause true accounts to be kept—

(a) of the sums of money received and expended by the company, and the matter in respect of which such receipt and expenditure takes place ; and

(b) of the assets and liabilities of the company.

104. The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the company or at such other place as the directors shall think fit and shall be open to inspection by the directors during business hours.

By the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, the above regulation has been substituted for the original regulation 104 which was as follows :—

104. The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the company, or at such other place or places as the directors think fit, and shall always be open to the inspection of the directors.

105. The directors shall from time to time determine whether and to what extent and at what times and places and under what conditions or regulations the accounts and books of the company or any of them shall be open to the inspection of members not being directors, and no member (not being a director) shall have any right of inspecting any account or book or document of the company except as conferred by law or authorised by the directors or by the company in general meeting.

The articles of all companies shall be deemed to contain this regulation ; see s. 17(2).

As a rule the shareholders have no right to inspect the accounts of the company 1.

Rights of shareholders and directors.

In the absence of any special provision a director has, but a mere shareholder has not, a right to inspect documents held by the company's solicitor on its behalf 2.

In Bank of Bombay v. Suleman Somje 3 the Judicial Committee considered the position of a member of a corporation who had no statutory rights of inspection and no express contractual rights. His rights depended upon common law. Their Lordships said : "The privilege of inspection is now confined to cases where a member of a corporation has in view some definite right or object of his own and to those documents which would tend to illustrate such right or object." They further say that if none of the plaintiffs had any special interest different from that of his fellow members or any definite purpose or object in obtaining the inspection asked for other than to see if by possibility the company's affairs may be better administered than are at present, their suit failed.

Where the members have under the articles a contractual right of inspection, that cannot be reduced by the power given to make rules into a mere right to claim inspection subject to the committee's approval. But a right of inspection does not carry with it a right to take copies. There must however be some other circumstance to make it necessary to imply such a term as to make the statutory right to inspect otherwise of no avail or practically useless. The extent of the right to take copies under the common law depends on the interest of the member 4.

There is no provision in the Act entitling a member to inspection by proxy, even though she be a woman ; nor can a shareholder beforehand seek to obtain information which can be supplied at the general meeting and ask the Court to stop the meeting till the information is supplied 5.

In case of winding up. Provision in the articles giving a right to inspect the books of the company ceases to apply when the company goes into voluntary liquidation 1, but it may be otherwise if the winding up be for the purposes of re-construction 2.

As to inspection of documents after the order for a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court see s. 241 and notes.

106. The directors shall as required by sections 131 and 131A of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, cause to be prepared and to be laid before the company in general meeting such profit and loss accounts, [income and expenditure accounts], balance sheets, and reports as are referred to in those sections.

The above regulation has been substituted for the original regulation 106 by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. The original regulation 106 was as follows:

106. Once at least in very year the directors shall lay before the company in general meeting a profit and loss account for the period since the preceding account or (in the case of the first account) since the incorporation of the company, made up to a date not more than six months before such meeting.

The words within square brackets were added by the amending Act II of 1938.

See ss. 131 and 132 and notes thereto.

107. The profit and loss account shall in addition to the matters referred to in sub-section (3) of section 132 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, show, arranged under the most convenient heads, the amount of gross income, distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived, and the amount of gross expenditure distinguishing the expenses of the establishment, salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account, so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting, and, in case where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated, with the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year.

The words in italics have been inserted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936.

The articles of all companies shall be deemed to contain this regulation; see s. 17(2).

This regulation is not in Table A of the English Act.

Writing back to profit account. Mr. Justice Russel has said in the following case—"Unless there is anything in the Companies Act or in the constitution of the company to prohibit it, the shareholders may, if they think fit, write back to profit account so much of the depreciation written off goodwill as has proved to have been in excess of proper requirement" 3.

As to what is profit see notes to reg. 97, and as to the requirements of this regulation see the second proviso to sub-s. (2) of s. 17.

108. A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the company in general meeting made up to a date not more than six months before such meeting. The balance-sheet shall be accompanied by a report of the directors as to the state of the company's affairs, and the amount which they recommend to be paid by way of dividend, and the amount (if any) which they propose to carry to a reserve fund.

See s. 131 and notes.

Director's liability for report.

A director is not necessarily personally responsible for reports and balance-sheets stated to be issued "by order of the directors" 1. As to a person who, though named as a director but has resigned, see the case of Dovey v. Cory 2.

Balance-sheet contained in an annual report sent by the company to the shareholders and filed with the registrar stating the total amount of the company's indebtedness under its debentures for principal and interest, although not sent to the debenture-holders, is a sufficient acknowledgment of the liability under the debentures 3.

109. A copy of the balance-sheet and report shall, [fourteen] days previously to the meeting, be sent to the persons entitled to receive notices of general meetings in the manner in which notices are to be given hereunder.

The word within square brackets was substituted for the word "seven" by the amending Act II of 1938.

110. The directors shall in all respects comply with the provisions of sections 130 to 135 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force.

This regulation is not in Table A of the English Act.

Audit.

111. Auditors shall be appointed and their duties regulated in accordance with sections 144 and 145 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, or any statutory modification thereof for the time being in force.

See notes to ss. 144 and 145. As to the misfeasance of auditors see notes to s. 235.

supplied by him to the company for the giving of notices to him.

(2) Where a notice is sent by post, service of the notice shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing, prepaying and posting a letter containing the notice and, unless the contrary is proved, to have been effected at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post.

The articles of all companies shall be deemed to contain this regulation and regulations 113 to 116; see s. 17(2).

For definition of "British India" see s. 3 (7) of the General Clauses Act X of 1897.

Notice in the case of a deceased member.

Where under the articles notice of a general meeting is to be given to "members" and such notice may be served upon any "member" either personally or by sending it prepaid by post addressed to "such member" at his registered address, it is not necessary, in the case of a deceased member, either to send a notice addressed to him at his registered address or to serve his legal representatives, unless they have themselves become "members" by formal registration 1.

Where the company through its officers has actual knowledge of the death of a shareholder, it cannot however rely upon a notice addressed to the deceased member for basing upon it a resolution forfeiting unclaimed dividend; for such resolution must be strictissima juris 2. But if the company has no knowledge of his death, a notice served on him in the manner prescribed is effective 3. See reg. 116 post.

Notice sent by post.

For ordinary purposes a notice sent by post will be deemed to have been served 4, even if in fact it never reached the addressee. But making over a letter to a postman outside the pillar box is not posting 5. The regulation however does not apply so as to affect the member with notice of a misrepresentation (which notice was in fact given by the document), if the document does not reach his hands 6.

Date of service.

Provisions in the articles regulating the date on which a notice is deemed to be served must be considered; but an article which provides that the day of service of a notice is to be counted in the relevant number of days must be disregarded 7.

Substituted service.

An article like this does not validate an order for substituted service of legal proceedings on a member, if the registered address is not in fact his residence or place of business 8.

Presumption.

The words "unless the contrary is proved" in clause (2) make the presumption a rebuttable one 9.

The last portion of the regulation, viz., "No other persons shall be entitled to receive notices of general meetings" has been omitted by the amending Act II of 1938.

APPENDIX B.

*Table A in the First Schedule to the Indian Companies Act VI of 1882.

TABLE A.

Shares.

(1) If several persons are registered as joint holders of any share, any one of such persons may give effectual receipts for any dividend payable in respect of such share.

(2) Every member shall, on payment of eight annas or such less sum as the Company in general meeting may prescribe, be entitled to a certificate under the common seal of the Company, specifying the share or shares held by him, and the amount paid up thereon.

(3) If such certificate is worn out or lost, it may be renewed on payment of eight annas or such less sum as the Company in general meeting may prescribe.

Calls on Shares.

(4) The directors, may from time to time make such calls upon the members in respect of all moneys unpaid on their shares as they think fit, provided that twenty-one days' notice at least is given of each call; and each member shall be liable to pay the amount of calls so made to the persons and at the times and places appointed by the directors.

(5) A call shall be deemed to have been made at the time when the resolution of the directors authorising such call was passed.

(6) If the call payable in respect of any share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof, the holder for the time being of such share shall be liable to pay interest for the same at the rate of five per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment.

(7) The directors may, if they think fit, receive, from any member willing to advance the same, all or any part of the moneys due upon the shares held by him beyond the sums actually called for and, upon the moneys so paid in advance, or so much thereof as from time to time exceeds the amount of the calls then made upon the shares in respect of which such advance has been made, the Company may pay interest at such rate as the member paying such sum in advance and the directors agree upon.

Transfers of Shares.

(8) The instrument of transfer of any share in the Company shall be executed both by the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain a holder of such share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register book in respect thereof.

(9) Shares in the Company shall be transferred in the following form :—

I, A B, of , in consideration of the sum of rupees paid to me by C D of , do hereby transfer to the said C D the share (or shares) numbered standing in my name in the books of the Company, to hold unto the said C D, his executors, administrators and assigns, subject to the several conditions on which I held the same at the time of the execution thereof ; add I, the said C D, do hereby agree to take the said share (or shares) subject to the same conditions. As witness our hands the day of .

(10) The Company may decline to register any transfer of shares made by a member who is indebted to them.

(11) The transfer books shall be closed during the fourteen days immediately preceding the ordinary general meeting in each year.

Transmission of Shares.

(12) The executors or administrators of a deceased member shall be the only persons recognised by the Company as having any title to his share.

(13) Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of the member or in consequence of the marriage of any female member, may be registered as a member upon such evidence being produced as may, from time to time, be required by the Company.

(14) Any person who has become entitled to a share in consequence of the death, bankruptcy or insolvency of any member or in consequence of the marriage of any female member, may, instead of being registered himself, elect to have some person to be named by him registered as a transferee of such share.

(15) The person so becoming entitled shall testify such election by executing to his nominee an instrument of transfer of such share.

(16) The instrument of transfer shall be presented to the Company, together with such evidence as the directors may require to prove the title of the transferee, and thereupon the Company shall register the transferee as a member.

Forfeiture of Shares.

(17) If any member fails to pay any call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the directors may, at any time thereafter, during such time as the call remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring him to pay such call together with interest and any expenses that may have accrued by reason of such non-payment.

(18) The notice shall name a further day on or before which such call and all interest and expenses that have accrued by reason of such non-payment are to be paid. It shall also name the place where payment is to be made, the place so named being either the registered office of the Company or some other place at which calls of the Company are usually made payable. The notice shall also state that, in the event of non-payment at or before the time and at the place appointed, the shares in respect of which such call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

(19) If the requisition of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which such notice has been given may at any time thereafter, before payment of all calls, interest and expenses due in respect thereof has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect.

(20) Any share so forfeited shall be deemed to be the property of the Company and may be disposed of in such manner as the Company in general meeting thinks fit.

(21) Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall notwithstanding be liable to pay to the Company all calls owing upon such shares at the time of the forfeiture.

(22) A solemn declaration in writing, made before a Magistrate, that the call in respect of a share was made and notice thereof given, and that default in payment of the call was made and that the forfeiture of the share was made by a resolution of the directors to that effect, shall be sufficient evidence of the facts therein stated as against all persons entitled to such share and such declaration and the receipt of the Company for the price of such share shall constitute a good title to such share, and a certificate of proprietorship shall be delivered to the purchaser, and thereupon he shall be deemed the holder of such share discharged from all calls due prior to such purchase; and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, nor shall his title to such share be affected by any irregularity in the proceedings in reference to such call.

Conversion of Shares into Stock.

(23) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company previously given in general meeting, convert any paid up shares into stock.

(24) When any shares have been converted into stock, the several holders of such stock may thenceforth transfer their respective interests therein, or any part of such interest, in the same manner and subject to the same regulations as and subject to which any shares in the capital of the Company may be transferred, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(25) The several holders of stock shall be entitled to participate in the dividends and profits of the Company according to the amount of their respective interests in such stock; and such interests shall, in proportion to the amount thereof, confer on the holders thereof, respectively, the same privileges and advantages for the purpose of voting at meetings of the Cpmpany and for other purposes as would have been conferred by shares of equal amount in the capital of the Company; but so that none of such privileges or advantages, except the participation in the dividends and profits of the Company, shall be conferred by any such aliquot part of consolidated stock as would not, if existing in shares, have conferred such privileges or advantages.

Increase in Capital.

(26) The directors may, with the sanction of a special resolution of the Company previously given in general meeting, increase its capital by the issue of new shares; such aggregate increase to be of such amount, and to be divided into shares of such respective amounts, as the Company in general meeting directs, or, if no direction is given, as the directors think expedient.

(27) Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the meeting that sanctions the increase of capital, all new shares shall be offered to the members in proportion to the existing shares held by them, and such offer shall be made by notice specifying the number of shares to which the member is entitled and limiting a time within which the offer, if not accepted, will be deemed to be declined; and after the expiration of such time, or on the receipt of an intimation from the member to whom such notice is given that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the Company.

(28) Any capital raised by the creation of new shares shall be considered as part of the original capital, and shall be subject to the same provisions, with reference to the payment of calls, and the forfeiture of shares on non-payment of calls, or otherwise, as if it had been part of the original capital.

General Meetings.

(29) The first general meeting shall be held at such time, not being more than six months after the registration of the Company, and at such place as the directors may determine.

(30) Subsequent general meetings shall be held, once at the least in every year, at such time and place as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; and if no other time or place is prescribed, a general meeting shall be held on the first Monday in February in every year, at such place as may be determined by the directors.

(31) The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary.

(32) The directors may, whenever they think fit, and they shall, upon a requisition made in writing by not less than one fifth in number of the members of the Company, convene an extraordinary general meeting.

(33) Any requisition made by the members shall express the object of the meeting proposed to be called, and shall be left at the registered office of the company.

(34) Upon the receipt of such requisition the directors shall forthwith proceed to convene an extraordinary general meeting. If they do not proceed to convene the same within twenty-one days from the date of the requisition, the requisitionists, or any other members amounting to the required number, may themselves convene an extraordinary general meeting.

Proceedings at General meeting.

(35) Seven days' notice at the least, specifying the place, the day and the hour of meeting, and, in case of special business, the general nature of such business, shall be given to the members in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but the non-receipt of such notice by any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any general meeting.

(36) All business shall be deemed special that is transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting, with the exception of sanctioning a dividend, and the consideration of the accounts, balance-sheets and the ordinary report of the directors.

(37) No business shall be transacted at any general meeting except the declaration of a dividend, unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business. Such quorum shall be ascertained as follows, that is to say:—If the persons who have taken shares in the Company at the time of the meeting do not exceed ten in number, the quorum shall be five; if they exceed ten, there shall be added to the above quorum one for every five additional members up to fifty, and one for every ten additional members after fifty, with this limitation that no quorum shall in any case exceed twenty.

(38) If, within one hour from the time appointed for the meeting, a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved. In any other case, it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, at the same time and place; and if, at such adjourned meeting, a quorum is not present, it shall be adjourned sine die.

(39) The chairman (if any) of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the Company.

(40) If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman.

(41) The chairman may, with the consent of the meeting, adjourn any meeting from time to time and from place to place but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place.

(42) At any general meeting, unless a poll is demanded by at least five members, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has been carried, and an entry to that effect in the book of proceedings of the Company,. shall be sufficient evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of or against such resolution.

(43) If a poll is demanded by five or more members, it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of such poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the Company in general meeting. In the case of an equality of votes at any general meeting, the chairman shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

Votes of Members.

(44) Every member shall have one vote for every share up to ten. He shall have an additional vote for every five shares beyond the first ten shares up to one hundred, and an additional vote for every ten shares beyond the first hundred shares.

(45) If any member is a lunatic or idiot, he may vote by his committee or other legal curator; and, if any member is a minor, he may vote by his guardian or any one of his guardians if more than one.

(46) If one or more persons are jointly entitled to a share or shares, the member whose name stands first in the register of members as one of the holders of such share or shares, and no other, shall be entitled to vote in respect of the same.

(47) No member shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls due from him have been paid, and no member shall be entitled to vote in respect of any share that he has acquired by transfer, at any meeting held after the expiration of three months from the registration of the Company, unless he has been possessed of the share in respect of which he claims to vote for at least three months previously to the time of holding the meeting at which he proposes to vote.

(49) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing, under the hand of the appointor, or, if such appointor is a corporation, under their common seal, and shall be attested by one or more witnesses. No person shall be appointed a proxy who is not a member of the Company.

(50) The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deposited at the registered office of the Company not less than seventy-two hours before the time for holding the meeting at which the person named in such instrument proposes to vote; but no instrument appointing a proxy shall be valid after the expiration of twelve months from the date of its execution.

(54) The future remuneration of the directors, and their remuneration for services performed previously to the first general meeting, shall be determined by the Company in general meeting.

Powers of Directors.

(55) The business of the Company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the Company and may exercise all such powers of the Company as are not by the foregoing Act, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the Company in general meeting, subject nevertheless to any regulations of these articles, to the provisions of the foregoing Act and to such regulations, being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations, or provisions, as may be prescribed by the Company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the Company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if such regulation had not been made.

(56) The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body.

Disqualification of Directors.

(57) The office of directors shall be vacated—

If he, or any partner of his, or the firm of which he is a member, holds any other office or place of profit under the company;
if he becomes bankrupt or insolvent;
if he is punished under any of the penal provisions of the foregoing Act;
if he is concerned in or participates in the profits of any contract with the Company.

But the above rules shall be subject to the following exceptions :—that no director shall vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any Company which has entered into contracts with, or done any work for, the Company of which he is director; nevertheless, he shall not vote in respect of such contract or work, and, if he does so vote, his vote shall not be counted.

Rotation of Directors.

(58) At the first ordinary meeting after the registration of the Company the whole of the directors shall retire from office; and at the first ordinary meeting in every subsequent year one-third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not a multiple of three, then the number nearest to one-third, shall retire from office.

(59) The one-third or other nearest number to retire during the first and second years ensuing the first ordinary meeting of the Company shall, unless the directors agree among themselves, be determined by ballot. In every subsequent year, the one-third or other nearest number who have been longest in office shall retire.

(60) A retiring director shall be re-eligible.

(61) The Company at the general meeting at which any directors retire in manner aforesaid shall fill up the vacated offices by electing a like number of persons.

(62) If at any meeting at which an election of directors ought to take place the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the meeting shall stand adjourned till the same day in the next week, at the same time and place; and if at such adjourned meeting the places of the vacating directors are not filled up, the vacating directors, or such of them as have not had their places filled up, shall continue in office until the ordinary meeting in the next year, and so on, from time to time until their places are filled up.

(63) The Company may, from time to time, in general meeting, increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation such increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

(64) Any casual vacancy occurring in the board of directors may be filled up by the directors, but any person so chosen shall retain his office so long only as the vacating director would have retained the same if no vacancy had occurred.

(65) The Company in general meeting may by a special resolution remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead. The person so appointed shall hold office during such time only as the director in whose place he is appointed would have held the same if he had not been removed.

Proceedings of Directors.

(66) The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn and otherwise regulate their meetings as they think fit, and determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may at any time summon a meeting of the directors.

(67) The directors may elect a chairman of their meetings, and determine the period for which he is to hold office; but, if no such chairman is elected or if at any meeting the chairman is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(68) The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit. Any committe so formed shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on it by the directors.

(69) A committe may elect a chairman of its meetings. If no such chairman is elected, or if he is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

(70) A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present; and, in case of an equality of votes, the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(71) All acts done by any meeting of the directors, or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Dividends.

(72) The directors may, with the sanction of the Company in general meeting, declare a dividend to be paid to the members in proportion to their shares.

(73) No dividend shall be payable except out of the profits arising from the business of the Company.

(74) The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the Company such sum as they think proper as a reserve fund to meet contingencies, or for equalizing dividends, or for repairing or maintaining the works connected with the business of the Company or any part thereof; and the directors may invest the sum so set apart as a reserved fund upon such securities as they may select.

(75) The directors may deduct from the dividends payable to any member all such sums of money as may be due from him to the Company on account of calls or otherwise.

(76) Notice of any dividend that may have been declared shall be given to each member in manner hereinafter mentioned; and all dividends unclaimed for three years after having been declared may be forfeited by the directors for the benefit of the Company.

(77) No dividend shall bear interest as against the Company.

Accounts.

(78) The directors shall cause true accounts to be kept—

of the stock in trade of the Company; of the sums of money received and expended by the Company, and the matters in respect of which such receipt and expenditure take place; and of the credits and liabilities of the Company.

The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the Company, and, subject to any reasonable restrictions as to the time and manner of inspecting the same that may be imposed by the Company in general meetings, shall be open to the inspection of the members during the hours of business.

(79) Once at the least in every year the directors shall lay before the Company in general meeting a statement of the income and expenditure for the past year made up to a date not more than three months before such meeting.

(80) The statement so made shall show, arranged under the most convenient heads, the amount of gross income, distinguishing the several sources from which it has been derived, and the amount of gross expenditure, distinguishing the expenses of the establishment, salaries and other like matters. Every item of expenditure fairly chargeable against the year's income shall be brought into account, so that a just balance of profit and loss may be laid before the meeting, and, in cases where any item of expenditure which may in fairness be distributed over several years has been incurred in any one year, the whole amount of such item shall be stated, with the addition of the reasons why only a portion of such expenditure is charged against the income of the year.

(81) A balance-sheet shall be made out in every year and laid before the Company in general meeting, and such balance-sheet shall contain a summary of the property and liabilities of the Company arranged under the heads appearing in the form annexed to this table, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

(82) A printed copy of such balance-sheet shall, seven days previously to such meeting, be served on every member in the manner in which notices are hereinafter directed to be served.

Audit.

(83) Once at the least in every year the accounts of the Company shall be examined, and the correctness of the balance-sheet ascertained by one or more auditor or auditors.

(84) The first auditors shall be appointed by the directors; subsequent auditors shall be appointed by the Company in general meeting.

(85) If one auditor only is appointed, all the provisions herein contained relating to auditors shall apply to him.

(86) The auditors may be members of the Company, but no person is eligible as an auditor who is interested otherwise than as a member in any transactions of the Company, and no director or other officer of the Company is eligible during his continuance in office.

(87) The election of auditors shall be made by the Company at their ordinary meeting in each year.

(88) The remuneration of the first auditors shall be fixed by the directors; that of subsequent auditors shall be fixed by the Company in general meeting.

(89) Any auditor shall be re-eligible on his quitting office.

(90) If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of any auditor appointed by the Company, the directors shall forthwith call an extraordinary general meeting for the purpose of supplying the same.

(91) If no election of auditors is made in manner aforesaid the Local Government may, on the application of not less than five members of the Company, appoint an auditor for the current year and fix the remuneration to be paid to him by the Company for his services.

(92) Every auditor shall be supplied with a copy of the balance-sheet, and it shall be his duty to examine the same with the accounts and vouchers relating thereto.

(93) Every auditor shall have a list delivered to him of all books kept by the Company, and shall at all reasonable times have access to the books and accounts of the Company. He may, at the expense of the Company, employ accountants or other persons to assist him in investigating such accounts, and he may, in relation to such accounts, examine the directors or any other officer of the Company.

(94) The auditors shall make a report to the members upon the balance-sheet and accounts, and in every such report they shall state whether, in their opinion, the balance-sheet is a full and fair balance-sheet, containing the particulars required by these regulations and properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Company's affairs and, in case they have called for explanations or information from the directors, whether such explanations or information have or has been given by the directors, and whether they or it have or has been satisfactory. Such report shall be read, together with the report of the directors, at the ordinary meeting.

Notices.

(95) A notice may be served by the Company upon any member either personally or by sending it through the post in a letter addressed to such member at his registered place of abode.

(96) All notices directed to be given to the members shall, with respect to any share to which persons are jointly entitled, be given to whichever of such persons is named first in the register of members; and notice so given shall be sufficient notice to all the holders of such share.

(97) Any notice, if served by post, shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post; and, in proving such service, it shall be sufficient to prove that the letter containing the notice was properly addressed and put into the post office.

2. The Company may from time to time make such calls upon the shareholders, in respect of all moneys unpaid on their shares, as they think fit, provided that twenty-one days' notice at least is given of each call; and each shareholder shall be liable to pay the amount of calls so made to the persons and at the times and places appointed by the Company.

3. A call shall be deemed to have been made at the time when the resolution authorizing such call was passed.

4. If, before or on the day appointed for payment, any shareholder does not pay the amount of any call to which he is liable, then such shareholder shall be liable to pay interest for the same at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment.

5. The Company may, if they think fit, receive, from any of the shareholders willing to advance the same, all or any part of the moneys due upon their respective shares beyond the sums actually called for, and upon the moneys so paid in advance, or so much thereof as from time to time exceeds the amount of the calls then made upon the shares in respect of which such advance has been made, the Company may pay interest at such rate as the shareholder paying such sum in advance and the Company agree upon.

6. If several persons are registered as joint holders of any share, any one of such persons may give effectual receipts for any dividend payable in respect of such share.

7. The Company may decline to register any transfer of shares made by a shareholder who is indebted to them.

8. Every shareholder shall, on payment of such sum not exceeding eight annas as the Company may prescribe, be entitled to a certificate, under the common seal of the Company, specifying the share or shares held by him, and the amount paid up thereon.

9. If such certificate is worn out or lost, it may be renewed on payment of such sum, not exceeding eight annas, as the Company may prescribe.

13. Any person who has become entitled to a share in any way other than by transfer may, instead of being registered himself, elect to have some person to be named by him registered as a holder of such share.

14. The person so becoming entitled shall testify such election by executing to his nominee a transfer of such share.

15. The instrument of transfer shall be presented to the Company accompanied with such evidence as they may require to prove the title of the transferor, and thereupon the Company shall register the transferee as a shareholder.

17. The notice shall name a further date, and a place or places, being a place or places at which calls of the Company are usually made payable, on and at which such call is to be paid; it shall also state that, in the event of non-payment at the time and place appointed, the shares in respect of which such call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

18. If the requisitions of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which such notice has been given may be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect.

19. Any shares so forfeited shall be deemed to be the property of the Company, and may be disposed of in such manner as the Company thinks fit.

20. Any shareholder whose shares have been forfeited shall notwithstanding be liable to pay to the Company all calls owing upon such shares at the time of the forfeiture.

21. The Company may, with the sanction of the Company previously given in general meeting, increase its capital.

22. Any capital raised by the creation of new shares shall be considered as part of the original capital, and shall be subject to the same provisions in all respects, whether with reference to the payment of calls, or the forfeiture of shares on non-payment of calls or otherwise, as if it had been part of the original capital.

23. The first general meeting shall be held at such time, not being more than twelve months after the incorporation of the Company, and at such place as the directors may determine.

FORM No. 46 (Rule 149).

Petition for leave to make a call.

(Title.)

The humble petition of Official Liquidator of the abovenamed company, sheweth as follows :—

1. The abovenamed company was by an order of this Court, dated the day of 19 , ordered to be wound up by this Court (or under the supervision of this Court).

2. By an order of this Court, dated the day of 19 , I was appointed Official Liquidator.

3. On the day of 19 , the list of contributories of the said company was settled by the Honourable Mr. Justice (or Esq., District Judge of).

4. The amount of the debts proved and admitted against the said company and the estimated amount of the costs charged and expenses of the winding up aggregate the sum of Rs. or thereabouts.

5. Of the assets set forth in the statement of assets I have realised the sum of Rs. of which I still have in hand the sum of Rs. I estimate that the assets still remaining to be collected will realise approximately Rs. There are no other assets belonging to the said company except the amounts due from contributories.

6. In the settled list of contributories of the said company appear the names of persons in respect of shares.

7. For the purpose of satisfying the debts and liabilities of the company and of paying the costs, charges and expenses of the winding up I believe the sum of Rs. will be required in addition to the amount I now have in hand and the amount still to be collected by realisation of the outstanding assets.

8. In order to provide the said sum of Rs. it is necessary to make a call upon the several persons who have been settled on the list of contributories and to provide for the contingency of some of such contributories partly or wholly failing to pay the amount of such call I believe that for the purpose of realising the said amount required it is necessary that a call of Rs. per share be made.

Your petitioner therefore humbly prays as follows :—

(a) Or as the case may be.

(1) That leave be given to your petitioner to make a call of Rs. per share on all the contributories of the said company (a) and to fix the date for the payment of such call.

(2) That the costs of and incidental to this petition and the order to be made thereunder and the costs of and incidental to making and enforcing such call be paid out of the call money to be collected (or out of the assets coming to the hands of your petitioner).

(3) Or that such other order may be made in the premises as may be fit and proper.

Verification.

I, , the Official Liquidator of the abovenamed company, make oath (or solemnly affirm) that the statements contained in the foregoing petition are true to the best of my knowledge, information and belief.

For the purposes of this subsection a sum shall be deemed to have been paid to and received by the company if a cheque for that sum has been received in good faith by the company and the directors of the company have no reason for suspecting that the cheque will not be paid.

(2) The amount so stated in the prospectus shall be reckoned exclusively of any amount payable otherwise than in cash and is in this Act referred to as "the minimum subscription."

(3) The amount payable on application on each share shall not be less than five per cent. of the nominal amount of the share.

(4) If the conditions aforesaid have not been complied with on the expiration of forty days after the first issue of the prospectus, all money received from applicants for shares shall be forthwith repaid to them without interest, and, if any such money is not so repaid within forty-eight days after the issue of the prospectus, the directors of the company shall be jointly and severally liable to repay that money with interest at the rate of five per centum per annum from the expiration of the forty-eighth day:

Special resolution for reduction of share capital.

55.—(1) Subject to confirmation by the court, a company limited by shares or a company limited by guarantee and having a share capital may, if so authorised by its articles, by special resolution reduce its share capital in any way, and in particular, without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, may—

(a) extinguish or reduce the liability on any of its shares in respect of share capital not paid up; or

(b) either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, cancel any paid-up share capital which is lost or unrepresented by available assets; or

(c) either with or without extinguishing or reducing liability on any of its shares, pay off any paid-up share capital which is in excess of the wants of the company, and may, if and so far as is necessary, alter its memorandum by reducing the amount of its share capital and of its shares accordingly.

(2) A special resolution under this section is in this Act referred to as "a resolution for reducing share capital."

56.—(1) Where a company has passed a resolution for reducing share capital it may apply by petition to the court for an order confirming the reduction.

Application to court for confirming order, objections by creditors, and settlement of list of objecting creditors.

(2) Where the proposed reduction of share capital involves either diminution of liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up share capital, and in any other case if the court so directs, the following provisions shall have effect, subject nevertheless to the next following subsection :—

(a) Every creditor of the company who at the date fixed by the court is entitled to any debt or claim which, if that date were the commencement of the winding up of the company, would be admissible in proof against the company, shall be entitled to object to the reduction:

(b) The court shall settle a list of creditors so entitled to object, and for that purpose shall ascertain, as far as possible without requiring an application from any creditor, the names of those creditors and the nature and amount of their debts or claims, and may publish notices fixing a day or days within which creditors not entered on the list are to claim to be so entered or are to be excluded from the right of objecting to the reduction :

(c) Where a creditor entered on the list whose debt or claim is not discharged or has not determined does not consent to the reduction, the court may, if it thinks fit, dispense with the consent of that creditor, on the company securing payment of his debt or claim by appropriating, as the court may direct, the following amount :—

(i) If the company admits the full amount of the debt or claim, or, though not admitting it, is willing to provide for it, then the full amount of the debt or claim ;

(ii) If the company does not admit and is not willing to provide for the full amount of the debt or claim, or if the amount is contingent or not ascertained, then an amount fixed by the court after the like inquiry and adjudication as if the company were being wound up by the court.

(3) Where a proposed reduction of share capital involves either the diminution of any liability in respect of unpaid share capital or the payment to any shareholder of any paid-up share capital, the court may, if having regard to any special circumstances of the case it thinks proper so to do, direct that subsection (2) of this section shall not apply as regards any class or any classes of creditors.

Order confirming reduction and powers of court on making such order.

57.—(1) The court, if satisfied, with respect to every creditor of the company who under the last foregoing section is entitled to object to the reduction, that either his consent to the reduction has been obtained or his debt or claim has been discharged or has determined, or has been secured, may make an order confirming the reduction on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit.

(2) Where the court makes any such order, it may—

(a) if for any special reason it thinks proper so to do, make an order directing that the company shall, during such period, commencing on or at any time after the date of the order, as is specified in the order, add to its name as the last words thereof the words "and reduced" ; and

(b) make an order requiring the company to publish as the court directs the reasons for reduction or such other information in regard thereto as the court may think expedient with a view to giving proper information to the public, and, if the court thinks fit, the causes which led to the reduction.

(3) Where a company is ordered to add to its name the words "and reduced," those words shall, until the expiration of the period specified in the order, be deemed to be part of the name of the company.

Registration of order and minute of reduction.

58.—(1) The registrar of companies, on production to him of an order of the court confirming the reduction of the share capital of a company, and the delivery to him of a copy of the order and of a minute approved by the court, showing with respect to the share capital of the company, as altered by the order, the amount of the share capital, the number of shares into which it is to be divided, and the amount of each share, and the amount, if any, at the date of the registration deemed to be paid up on each share, shall register the order and minute.

(2) On the registration of the order and minute, and not before, the resolution for reducing share capital as confirmed by the order so registered shall take effect.

(3) Notice of the registration shall be published in such manner as the court may direct.

(4) The registrar shall certify under his hand the registration of the order and minute, and his certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act with respect to reduction of share capital have been complied with, and that the share capital of the company is such as is stated in the minute.

(5) The minute when registered shall be deemed to be substituted for the corresponding part of the memorandum, and shall be valid and alterable as if it had been originally contained therein.

(6) The substitution of any such minute as aforesaid for part of the memorandum of the company shall be deemed to be an alteration of the memorandum within the meaning of section twenty-four of this Act.

Liability of members in respect of reduced shares.

59.—(1) In the case of a reduction of share capital a member of the company, past or present, shall not be liable in respect of any share to any call or contribution exceeding in amount the difference, if any, between the amount of the share as fixed by the minute and the amount paid, or the reduced amount, if any, which is to be deemed to have been paid, on the share, as the case may be:

Provided that if any creditor, entitled in respect of any debt or claim to object to the reduction of share capital, is, by reason of his ignorance of the proceedings for reduction, or of their nature and effect with respect to his claim, not entered on the list of creditors, and, after the reduction the company is unable, within the meaning of the provisions of this Act with respect to winding up by the court, to pay the amount of his debt or claim, then—

(a) every person who was a member of the company at the date of the registration of the order for reduction and minute, shall be liable to contribute for the payment of that debt or claim an amount not exceeding the amount which he would have been liable to contribute if the company had commenced to be wound up on the day before the said date; and

(b) if the company is wound up, the court, on the application of any such creditor and proof of his ignorance as aforesaid, may, if it thinks fit, settle accordingly a list of persons so liable to contribute, and make and enforce calls and orders on the contributories settled on the list, as if they were ordinary contributories in a winding up.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of the contributories among themselves.

Penalty on concealment of name of creditor.

60. If any director, manager, secretary or other officer of the company—

(1) wilfully conceals the name of any creditor entitled to object to the reduction; or

(2) wilfully misrepresents the nature or amount of the debt or claim of any creditor; or

(3) aids, abets or is privy to any such concealment or misrepresentation as aforesaid, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

Variation of Shareholders' Rights.

Rights of holders of special classes of shares.

61.—(1) If in the case of a company, the share capital of which is divided into different classes of shares, provision is made by the memorandum or articles for authorising the variation of the rights attached to any class of shares in the company, subject to the consent of any specified proportion of the holders of the issued shares of that class or the sanction of a resolution passed at a separate meeting of the holders of those shares, and in pursuance of the said provision the rights attached to any such class of shares are at any time varied, the holders of not less in the aggregate than fifteen per cent. of the issued shares of that class, being persons who did not consent to or vote in favour of the resolution for the variation, may apply to the court to have the variation cancelled, and, where any such application is made, the variation shall not have effect unless and until it is confirmed by the court.

(2) An application under this section must be made within seven days after the date on which the consent was given or the resolution was passed, as the case may be, and may be made on behalf of the shareholders entitled to make the application by such one or more of their number as they may appoint in writing for the purpose.

(3) On any such application the court, after hearing the applicant and any other persons who apply to the court to be heard and appear to the court to be interested in the application, may, if it is satisfied, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that the variation would unfairly prejudice the shareholders of the class represented by the applicant, disallow the variation and shall, if not so satisfied, confirm the variation.

(4) The decision of the court on any such application shall be final.

(5) The company shall within fifteen days after the making of an order by the court on any such application forward a copy of the order to the registrar of companies, and, if default is made in complying with this provision, the company and every officer of the company who is in default shall be liable to a default fine.

63. Notwithstanding anything in the articles of a company, it shall not be lawful for the company to register a transfer of shares in or debentures of the company unless a proper instrument of transfer has been delivered to the company:

Provided that nothing in this section shall prejudice any power of the company to register as shareholder or debenture holder any person to whom the right to any shares in or debentures of the company has been transmitted by operation of law.

Transfer by personal representative.

64. A transfer of the share or other interest of a deceased member of a company made by his personal representative shall, although the personal representative is not himself a member of the company, be as valid as if he had been such a member at the time of the execution of the instrument of transfer.

Registration of transfer at request of transferor.

65. On the application of the transferor of any share or interest in a company, the company shall enter in its register of members the name of the transferee in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application for the entry were made by the transferee.

(2) If default is made in complying with this section, the company and every director, manager, secretary or other officer of the company who is knowingly a party to the default shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five pounds for every day during which the default continues.

(3) If any company on whom a notice has been served requiring the company to make good any default in complying with the provisions of subsection (1) of this section fails to make good the default within ten days after the service of the notice, the court may, on the application of the person entitled to have the certificates or the debentures delivered to him, make an order directing the company and any officer of the company to make good the default within such time as may be specified in the order, and any such order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application shall be borne by the company or by any officer of the company responsible for the default.

Certificate to be evidence of title.

68. A certificate, under the common seal of the company, specifying any shares held by any member shall be primâ facie evidence of the title of the member to the shares.

Perpetual debentures.

74. A condition contained in any debentures or in any deed for securing any debentures, whether issued or executed before or after the commencement of this Act, shall not be invalid by reason only that the debentures are thereby made irredeemable or redeemable only on the happening of a contingency, however remote, or on the expiration of a period, however long, any rule of equity to the contrary notwithstanding.

Provided that any person lending money on the security of a debenture re-issued under this section which appears to be duly stamped may give the debenture in evidence in any proceedings for enforcing his security without payment of the stamp duty or any penalty in respect thereof, unless he had notice or, but for his negligence, might have discovered, that the debenture was not duly stamped, but in any such case the company shall be liable to pay the proper stamp duty and penalty.

(6) Where any debentures which have been redeemed before the date of the commencement of this Act are re-issued subsequently to that date, the re-issue of the debentures shall not prejudice any right or priority which any person would have had under or by virtue of any mortgage or charge created before the date of the commencement of this Act, if section one hundred and four of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, as originally enacted, had been enacted in this Act instead of this section.

(8) The Board of Trade, with the consent of the Treasury, may direct that the whole or any part of any costs and expenses properly incurred by the liquidator in proceedings duly brought by him under this section shall be defrayed as expenses incurred by the Board under this Act in relation to the winding up of companies in England and subsection (3) of section thirteen of the Economy (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1926, shall apply accordingly.

Regulations for Management of a Company Limited by Shares.

Preliminary.

*[1] 1. In these regulations:—

"The Act" means the Companies Act, 1929.

When any provision of the Act is referred to, the reference is to that provision as modified by any statute for the time being in force.

Unless the context otherwise requires, expressions defined in the Act or any statutory modification thereof in force at the date at which these regulations become binding on the company, shall have the meanings so defined.

Shares.

[3] 2. Subject to the provisions, if any, in that behalf of the memorandum of association, and without prejudice to any special rights previously conferred on the holders of existing shares, any share may be issued with such preferred, deferred, or other special rights, or such restrictions whether in regard to dividend, voting, return of share capital, or otherwise, as the company may from time to time by special resolution determine, and any preference share may, with the sanction of a special resolution, be issued on the terms that it is, or at the option of the company is, liable to be redeemed.

[4] 3. If at any time the share capital is divided into different classes of shares, the rights attached to any class (unless otherwise provided by the terms of issue of the shares of that class) may be varied with the consent in writing of the holder of three-fourths of the issued shares of that class, or with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution passed at a separate general meeting of the holders of the shares of the class. To every such separate general meeting the provisions of these regulations relating to general meetings shall mutatis mutandis apply, but so that the necessary quorum shall be two persons at least holding or representing by proxy one-third of the issued shares of the class and that any holder of shares of the class present in person or by proxy may demand a poll.

[6] 4. Every person whose name is entered as a member in the register of members shall, without payment, be entitled to a certificate under the seal of the company specifying the share or shares held by him and the amount paid up thereon, provided that in respect of a share or shares held jointly by several persons the company shall not be bound to issue more than one certificate, and delivery of a certificate for a share to one of several joint holders shall be sufficient delivery to all.

[7] 5. If a share certificate is defaced, lost, or destroyed, it may be renewed on payment of such fee, if any, not exceeding one shilling, and on such terms, if any, as to evidence and indemnity as the directors think fit.

[8] 6. No part of the funds of the company shall directly or indirectly be employed in the purchase of, or in loans upon the security of, the company's shares, but nothing in this regulation shall prohibit transactions mentioned in the proviso to section 45 (1) of the Act.

Lien.

[9] 7. The company shall have a lien on every share (not being a fully-paid share) for all money (whether presently payable or not) called or payable at a fixed time in respect of that share, and the company shall also have a lien on all shares (other than fully-paid shares) standing registered in the name of a single person for all moneys presently payable by him or his estate to the company; but the directors may at any time declare any share to be wholly or in part exempt from the provisions of this regulation. The company's lien, if any, on a share shall extend to all dividends payable thereon.

---

[10] 8. The company may sell, in such manner as the directors think fit, any shares on which the company has a lien, but no sale shall be made unless some sum in respect of which the lien exists is presently payable, nor until the expiration of fourteen days after a notice in writing stating and demanding payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, has been given to the registered holder for the time being of the share, or the person entitled thereto by reason of his death or bankruptcy.

9. For giving effect to any such sale the directors may authorise some person to transfer the share sold to the purchaser thereof. The purchaser shall be registered as the holder of the shares comprised in any such transfer and he shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase money, nor thall his title to the shares be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the sale.

[11] 10. The proceeds of the sale shall be received by the company and applied in payment of such part of the amount in respect of which the lien exists as is presently payable, and the residue shall (subject to a like lien for sums not presently payable, as existed upon the shares prior to the sale) be paid to the person entitled to the shares at the date of the sale.

Call on Shares.

[12] 11. The directors may from time to time make calls upon the members in respect of any moneys unpaid on their shares provided that no call shall exceed one-fourth of the nominal amount of the share, or be payable at less than one month from the last call; and each member shall (subject to receiving at least fourteen days notice specifying the time or times of payment) pay to the company at the time or times so specified the amount called on his shares.

[13] 12. The joint holders of a share shall be jointly and severally liable to pay all calls in respect thereof.

[14] 13. If a sum called in a respect of a share is not paid before or on the day appointed for payment thereof the person from whom the sum is due shall pay interest upon the sum at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum from the day-appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment, but the directors shall be at liberty to waive payment of that interest wholly or in part.

[15] 14. The provision of these regulations as to the liability of joint holders and as to payment of interest shall apply in the case of non-payment of any sum which, by the terms of issue of a share, becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share, or by way of premium, as if the same had become payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified.

[16] 15. The directors may make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the holders in the amount of calls to be paid and in the times of payment.

[17] 16. The directors may, if they think fit, receive from any member willing to advance the same all or any part of the moneys uncalled and unpaid upon any shares held by him; and upon all or any of the moneys so advanced may (until the same would, but for such advance, become presently payable) pay interest at such rate (not exceeding, without the sanction of the company in general meeting, six per sent.) as may be agreed upon between the member paying the sum in advance and the directors.

Transfer and Transmission of Shares.

[18] 17. The instrument of transfer of any share shall be executed by or on behalf of the transferor and transferee, and the transferor shall be deemed to remain a holder of the share until the name of the transferee is entered in the register of members in respect thereof.

[19] 18. Shares shall be transferred in the following form, or in any usual or common form which the directors shall approve :

> I, A. B., of——, in consideration of the sum of £——paid to me by C. D. of——(herein-after called "the said transferee") do hereby transfer to the said transferee the share [or shares] numbered——in the undertaking called the——Company, Limited, to hold unto the said transferee, subject to the several conditions on which I hold the same ; and I, the said transferee, do hereby agree to take the said share [or shares] subject to the conditions aforesaid. As witness our hands the——day of——.
> Witness to the signatures of, &c.

[20] 19. The directors may decline to register any transfer of shares, not being fully paid shares, to a person of whom they do not approve, and may also decline to register any transfer of shares on which the company has a lien. The directors may also suspend the registration of transfers during the fourteen days immediately preceeding the ordinary general meeting in each year. The directors may decline to recognise any instrument of transfer unless—

(a) a fee not exceeding two shillings and sixpence is paid to the company in respect thereof, and

(b) the instrument of transfer is accompanied by the certificate of the shares to which it relates, and such other evidence as the directors may reasonably require to show the right of the transferor to make the transfer.

If the directors refuse to register a transfer of any shares, they shall within two months after the date on which the transfer was lodged with the company send to the transferee notice of the refusal.

[21] 20. The legal personal representatives of a deceased sole holder of a share shall be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the share. In the case of a share registered in the names of two or more holders, the survivors or survivor, or the legal personal representatives of the deceased survivor, shall be the only persons recognised by the company as having any title to the share.

[22] 21. Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death or bankruptcy of a member shall. upon such evidence being produced as may from time to time be properly required by the directors, have the right, either to be registered as a member in respect of the share, or, instead of being registered himself, to make such transfer of the share, as the deceased or bankrupt person could have made ; but the director shall, in either case, have the same right to decline or suspend registration as they would have hade in the case of a transfer of the share by the deceased or bankrupt person before the death or bankruptcy.

[23] 22. A person becoming entitled to a share by reason of the death or bankruptcy of the holder shall be entitled to the same dividends and other advantages to which he would be entitled if he were the registered holder of the share, except that he shall not, before being registered as a member in respect of the share, be entitled in respect of it to exercise any right conferred by membership in relation to meetings of the company.

Forfeiture of Shares.

[24] 23. If a member fails to pay any call or instalment of a call on the day appointed for payment thereof, the directors may, at any time thereafter during such time as any part of such call or instalment remains unpaid, serve a notice on him requiring payment of so much of the call or instalment as is unpaid, together with any interest which may have accrued.

[25] 24. The notice shall name a further day (not earlier than the expiration of fourteen days from the date of the notice) on or before which the payment required by the notice is to be made, and shall state that in the event of non-payment at or before the time appointed the shares in respect of which the call was made will be liable to be forfeited.

[26] 25. If the requirements of any such notice as aforesaid are not complied with, any share in respect of which notice has been given may at any time thereafter, before the payment required by the notice has been made, be forfeited by a resolution of the directors to that effect.

[27] 26. A forfeited share may be sold or otherwise disposed of on such terms and in such manner as the directors think fit, and at any time before a sale or disposition the forfeiture may be cancelled on such terms as the directors think fit.

[28] 27. A person whose shares have been forfeited shall cease to be a member in respect of the forfeited shares, but shall, notwithstanding, remain liable to pay to the company all moneys which, at the date of forfeiture, were presently payable by him to the company in respect of the shares, but his liability shall cease if and when the company receive payment in full of the nominal amount of the shares.

[29] 28. A statutory declaration in writing that the declarant is a director of the company, and that a share in the company has been duly forfeited on a date stated in the declaration, shall be conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated as against all persons claiming to be entitled to the share. The company may receive the consideration, if any, given for the share on any sale or disposition thereof and may execute a transfer of the share in favour of the person to whom the share is sold or disposed of and he shall thereupon be registered as the holder of the share, and shall not be bound to see to the application of the purchase money, if any, nor shall his title to the share be affected by any irregularity or invalidity in the proceedings in reference to the forfeiture, sale or disposal of the share.

[30] 29. The provisions of these regulations as to forfeiture shall apply in the case of non-payment of any sum which, by the terms of issue of a share, becomes payable at a fixed time, whether on account of the amount of the share, or by way of premium, as if the same had been payable by virtue of a call duly made and notified.

[31] 30. The company may by ordinary resolution convert any paid-up shares into stock, and reconvert any stock into paid-up shares of any denomination.

[32] 31. The holders of stock may transfer the same, or any part thereof, in the same manner, and subject to the same regulations, as, and subject to which, the shares from which the stock arose might previously to conversion have been transferred, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; but the directors may from time to time fix the minimum amount of stock transferable, and restrict or forbid the transfer of fractions of that minimum, but the minimum shall not exceed the nominal amount of the shares from which the stock arose.

[33] 32. The holders of stock shall, according to the amount of the stock held by them, have the same rights, privileges, and advantages as regards dividends, voting at meetings of the company, and other matters as if they held the shares from which the stock arose, but no such privilege or advantage (except participation in the dividends and profits of the company) shall be conferred by any such aliquot part of stock as would not, if existing in shares, have conferred that privilege or advantage.

[34] 33. Such of the regulations of the company as are applicable to paid-up shares shall apply to stock, and the words "share" and "shareholder" therein shall include "stock" and "stockholder."

Alteration of Capital.

[41] 34. The company may from time to time by ordinary resolution increase the share capital by such sum, to be divided into shares of such amount, as the resolution shall prescribe.

[42] 35. Subject to any direction to the contrary that may be given by the company in general meeting all new shares shall, before issue, be offered to such persons as at the date of the offer are entitled to receive notices from the company of general meetings in proportion, as nearly as the circumstances admit, to the amount of the existing shares to which they are entitled. The offer shall be made by notice specifying the number of shares offered, and limiting a time within which the offer, if not accepted, will be deemed, to be declined, and after the expiration of that time, or on the receipt of an intimation from the person to whom the offer is made that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of those shares in such manner as they think most beneficial to the company. The directors may likewise so dispose of any new shares which (by reason of the ratio which the new shares bear to shares held by persons entitled to an offer of new shares) cannot, in the opinion of the directors, be conveniently offered under this article.

[43] 36. The new shares shall be subject to the same provisions with reference to the payment of calls, lien, transfer, transmission, forfeiture, and otherwise as the shares in the original share capital.

[44] 37. The company may by ordinary resolution—

(a) Consolidate and divide all or any of its share capital into shares of larger amount than its existing shares;

(b) Sub-divide its existing shares, or any of them, into shares of smaller amount than is fixed by the memorandum of association subject, nevertheless, to the provisions of section 50 (1) (d) of the Act;

(c) Cancel any shares which, at the date of the passing of the resolution, have not been taken or agreed to be taken by any person.

38. The company may by special resolution reduce its share capital and any capital redemption reserve fund in any manner and with, and subject to, any incident authorised, and consent required, by law.

General Meetings.

[46] 39. A general meeting shall be held once in every calendar year at such time (not being more than fifteen months after the holding of the last preceding general meeting) and place as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, or, in default, at such time in the third month following that in which the anniversary of the company's incorporation occurs, and at such place, as the directors shall appoint. In default of a general meeting being so held, a general meeting shall be held in the month next following, and may be convened by any two members in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings are to be convened by the directors.

[47] 40. The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary general meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary general meetings.

[48] 41. The directors may, whenever they think fit, convene an extraordinary general meeting, and extraordinary general meetings shall also be convened on such requisition, or, in default, may be convened by such requisitionists, as provided by section 114 of the Act. If at any time there are not within the United Kingdom sufficient directors capable of acting to form a quorum, any director or any two members of the company may convene an extraordinary general meeting in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings may be convened by the directors.

Notice of General Meetings.

[49] 42. Subject to the provisions of section 117 (2) of the Act relating to special resolutions, seven days' notice at the least (exclusive of the day on which the notice is served or deemed to be served, but inclusive of the day for which notice is given) specifying the place, the day, and the hour of meeting and, in case of special business, the general nature of that business shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, to such persons as are, under the regulations of the company, entitled to receive such notices from the company; but with the consent of all the members entitled to receive notice of some particular meeting, that meeting may be convened by such shorter notice and in such manner as those members may think fit.

[49] 43. The accidental omission to give notice of a meeting to, or the non-receipt of notice of a meeting by, any member shall not invalidate the proceedings at any meeting.

Proceedings at General Meetings.

[50] 44. All business shall be deemed special that is transacted at an extraordinary meeting, and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting, with the exception of sanctioning a dividend, the consideration of the accounts, balance sheets, and the ordinary report of the directors and auditors, the election of directors and other officers in the place of those retiring by rotation, and the fixing of the remuneration of the auditors.

[51] 45. No business shall be transacted at any general meeting unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business; save as herein otherwise provided, three members personally present shall be a quorum.

[52] 46. If within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved; in any other case it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, at the same time and place, and, if at the adjourned meeting a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting the members present shall be a quorum.

[53] 47. The chairman, if any, of the board of directors shall preside as chairman at every general meeting of the company.

[54] 48. If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting or is unwilling to act as chairman, the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman.

[55] 49. The chairman may, with the consent of any meeting at which a quorum is present (and shall if so directed by the meeting), adjourn the meeting from time to time and from place to place, but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place. When a meeting is adjourned for ten days or more, notice of the adjourned meeting shall be given as in the case of an original meeting. Save as aforesaid it shall not be necessary to give any notice of an adjournment or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting.

[56] 50. At any general meeting a resolution put to the vote of the meeting shall be decided on a show of hands unless a poll is (before or on the declaration of the result of the show of the hands) demanded by at least three members present in person or by proxy entitled to vote or by one member or two members so present and entitled, if that member or those two members together hold not less than 15 per cent. of the paid-up capital of the company, and, unless a poll is so demanded, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has, on a show of hands, been carried, or carried unanimously, or by a particular majority, or lost, and an entry to that effect in the book of the proceedings of the company, shall be conclusive evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of, or against, that resolution.

[57] 51. If a poll is duly demanded it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of the poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the meeting at which the poll was demanded.

[58] 52. In the case of an equality of votes, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, the chairman of the meeting at which the show of hands takes place or at which the poll is demanded, shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

[59] 53. A poll demanded on the election of a chairman, or on a question of adjournment, shall be taken forthwith. A poll demanded on any other question shall be taken at such time as the chairman of the meeting directs.

Votes of members.

[60] 54. On a show of hands every member present in person shall have one vote. On a poll every member shall have one vote for each share of which he is the holder.

[61] 55. In the case of joint holders the vote of the senior who tenders a vote, whether in person or by proxy, shall be accepted to the exclusion of the votes of the other joint holders; and for this purpose seniority shall be determined by the order in which the names stand in the register of members.

[62] 56. A member of unsound mind, or in respect of whom an order has been made by any Court having jurisdiction in lunacy, may vote, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, by his committee, curator bonis, or other person in the nature of a committee or curator bonis appointed by that Court, and any such committee, curator bonis, or other person may, on a poll, vote by proxy.

[63] 57. No member shall be entitled to vote at any general meeting unless all calls or other sums presently payable by him in respect of shares in the company have been paid.

[64] 58. On a poll votes may be given either personally or by proxy.

[65] 59. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the appointor or of his attorney duly authorised in writing, or, if the appointor is a corporation, either under seal, or under the hand of an officer or attorney duly authorised. A proxy need not be a member of the company.

[66] 60. The instrument appointing a proxy and the power of attorney or other authority, if any, under which it is signed or a notarially certified copy of that power or authority shall be deposited at the registered office of the company not less than forty-eight hours before the time for holding the meeting or adjourned meeting, at which the person named in the instrument proposes to vote, and in default the instrument of proxy shall not be treated as valid.

[67] 61. An instrument appointing a proxy may be in the following form, or any other form which the directors shall approve :—

——Company, Limited.

'I,——, of——, in the county of——, being a member of the——Company, Limited, hereby appoint——, of——, as my proxy, to vote for me and on my behalf at the [ordinary or extraordinary, as the case may be] general meeting of the company to be held on the ——day of——, and at any adjournment thereof."

Signed this——day of——.

62. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deemed to confer authority to demand or join in demanding a poll.

Corporations acting by Representatives at Meetings.

63. Any corporation which is a member of the company may by resolution of its directors or other governing body authorise such person as it thinks fit to act as its representative at any meeting of the company or of any class of members of the company, and the person so authorised shall be entitled to exercise the same powers on behalf of the corporation which he represents as that corporation could exercise if it were an individual member of the company.

Directors.

[68] 64. The number of the directors and the names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by a majority of the subscribers of the memorandum of association.

[69] 65. The remuneration of the directors shall from time to time be determined by the company in general meeting.

[70] 66. The qualification of a director shall be the holding of at least one share in the company.

Powers and Duties of Directors.

[71] 67. The business of the company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the company, and may exercise all such powers of the company, as are not, by the Act, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the company in general meeting, subject, nevertheless, to any regulation of these articles, to the provisions of the Act, and to such regulations, being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations or provisions, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if that regulation had not been made.

[72] 68. The directors may from time to time appoint one or more of their body to the office of managing director or manager for such term and at such remuneration (whether by way of salary, or commission, or participation in profits, or partly in one way and partly in another) as they may think fit, and a director so appointed shall not, while holding that office, be subject to retirement by rotation, or taken into account in determining the rotation or retirement of directors; but his appointment shall be subject to determination ipso facto if he ceases from any cause to be a director, or if the company in general meeting resolve that his tenure of the office of managing director or manager be determined.

[73] 69. The amount for the time being remaining undischarged of moneys borrowed or raised by the directors for the purposes of the company (otherwise than by the issue of share capital) shall not at any time exceed the issued share capital of the company without the sanction of the company in general meeting.

[75] 70. The directors shall cause minutes to be made in books provided for the purpose—

(a) Of all appointments of officers made by the directors;

(b) Of the names of the directors present at each meeting of the directors and of any committee of the directors;

(c) Of all resolutions and proceedings at all meetings of the company, and of the directors, and of committees of directors; and every director present at any meeting of directors or committee of directors shall sign his name in a book to be kept for that purpose.

The Seal.

[76] 71. The seal of the company shall not be affixed to any instrument except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors, and in the presence of a director and of the secretary or such other person as the directors may appoint for the purpose; and that director and the secretary or other person as aforesaid shall sign every instrument to which the seal of the company is so affixed in their presence.

Disqualification of Directors.

[77] 72. The office of director shall be vacated, if the director—

(a) ceases to be a director by virtue of section 141 of the Act; or

(b) without the consent of the company in general meeting holds any other office of profit under the company except that of managing director or manager; or

(c) becomes bankrupt; or

(d) becomes prohibited from being a director by reason of any order made under section 217 or 275 of the Act; or

(e) is found lunatic or becomes of unsound mind; or

(f) resigns his office by notice in writing to the company; or

(g) is directly or indirectly interested in any contract with the company or participates in the profits of any contract with the company.

Provided, however, that a director shall not vacate his office by reason of his being a member of any corporation which has entered into contracts with or done any work for the company if he shall have declared the nature of his interest in manner required by section 149 of the Act, but the director shall not vote in respect of any such contract or work or any matter arising thereout, and if he does so vote his vote shall not be counted.

Rotation of Directors.

[78] 73. At the first ordinary general meeting of the company the whole of the directors shall retire from office, and at the ordinary general meeting in every subsequent year one-third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not three or a multiple of three, then the number nearest one-third, shall retire from office.

[79] 74. The directors to retire in every year shall be those who have been longest in office since their last election, but as between persons who became directors on the same day those to retire shall (unless they otherwise agree among themselves) be determined by lot.

[80] 75. A retiring director shall be eligible for re-election.

[81]&[82] 76. The company at the general meeting at which a director retires in manner aforesaid may fill up the vacated office by electing a person thereto and in default the retiring director shall be deemed to have been re-elected unless at such meeting it is resolved not to fill up such vacated office.

[83] 77. The company may from time to time in general meeting increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation the increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

[84] 78. Any casual vacancy occurring in the board of directors may be filled up by the directors, but the person so chosen shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

[85] 79. The directors shall have power at any time, and from time to time, to appoint a person as an additional director who shall retire from office at the next following ordinary general meeting, but shall be eligible for election by the company at that meeting as an additional director.

[86] 80. The company may by extraordinary resolution remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead; the person so appointed shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

Proceedings of Directors.

[87] 81. The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn, and otherwise regulate their meetings, as they think fit. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may, and the secretary on the requisition of a director shall, at any time summon a meeting of the directors.

[88] 82. The quorum necessary for the transaction of the business of the directors may be fixed by the directors, and unless so fixed shall when the number of directors exceeds three be three, and when the number of directors does not exceed three, be two.

[89] 83. The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body, but, if and so long as their number is reduced below the number fixed by or pursuant to the regulations of the company as the necessary quorum of directors, the continuing directors may act for the purpose of increasing the number of directors to that number, or of summoning a general meeting of the company, but for no other purpose.

[90] 84. The directors may elect a chairman of their meetings and determine the period for which he is to hold office; but if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting.

[91] 85. The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit; any committee so formed shall in the exercise of the powers so delegated conform to any regulations that may be imposed on it by the directors.

[92] 86. A committee may elect a chairman of its meetings; if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the members present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting.

[93] 87. A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present, and in case of an equaility of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

[94] 88. All acts done by any meeting of the directors or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such director or person acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Dividends and Reserve.

[95] 89. The company in general meeting may declare dividends, but no dividend shall exceed the amount recommended by the directors.

[96] 90. The directors may from time to time pay to the members such interim dividends as appear to the directors to be justified by the profits of the company.

[97] 91. No dividend shall be paid otherwise then out of profits.

[98] 92. Subject to the rights of persons, if any, entitled to shares with special rights as to dividends, all dividends shall be declared and paid according to the amounts paid on the shares, but if and so long as nothing is paid up on any of the shares in the company dividends may be declared and paid according to the amounts of the shares. No amount paid on a share in advance of calls shall, while carrying interest, be treated for the purposes of this article as paid on the share.

[99] 93. The directors may, before recommending any dividend, set aside out of the profits of the company such sums as they think proper as a reserve or reserves which shall, at the discretion of the directors, be applicable for meeting contingencies, or for equalizing dividends, or for any other purpose to which the profits of the company may be properly applied, and pending such application may, at the like discretion, either be employed in the business of the company or be invested in such investments (other than shares of the company) as the directors may from time to time think fit.

[100] 94. If several persons are registered as joint holders of any share any one of them may give effectual receipts for any dividend or other moneys payable on or in respect of the share.

[101] 95. Any dividend may be paid by cheque or warrant sent through the post to the registered address of the member or person entitled thereto or in the case of joint holders to any one of such joint holders at his registered address or to such person and such address as the member or person entitled or such joint holders as the case may be may direct. Every such cheque or warrant shall be made payable to the order of the person to whom it is sent or to the order of such other person as the member or person entitled or such joint holders as the case may be may direct.

[102] 96. No dividend shall bear interest against the company.

Accounts.

[103] 97. The directors shall cause proper books of account to be kept with respect to—

All sums of money received and expended by the company and the matters in respect of which the receipt and expenditure takes place;

All sales and purchases of goods by the company; and

The assets and liabilities of the company.

[104] 98. The books of account shall be kept at the registered office of the company, or at such other place or places as the directors think fit, and shall always be open to the inspection of the directors.

[105] 99. The directors shall from time to time determine whether and to what extent and at what times and places and under what conditions or regulations the accounts and books of the company or any of them shall be open to the inspection of members not being directors, and no member (not being a director) shall have any right of inspecting any account or book or document of the company except as conferred by statute or authorised by the directors or by the company in general meeting.

[106] 100. The directors shall from time to time in accordance with section 123 of the Act, cause to be prepared and to be laid before the company in general meeting such profit and loss accounts, balance sheets and reports as are referred to in that section.

[108] 101. A copy of every balance sheet (including every document required by law to be annexed thereto) which is to be laid before the company in general meeting together with a copy of the Auditors' report shall not less than seven days before the date of the meeting be sent to all persons entitled to receive notices of general meetings of the company.

Audit.

[109] 102. Auditors shall be appointed and their duties regulated in accordance with sections 132, 133 and 134 of the Act.

Notices.

[110] 103. A notice may be given by the company to any member either personally or by sending it by post to him to his registered address, or (if he has no registered address within the United Kingdom) to the address, if any, within the United Kingdom supplied by him to the company for the giving of notices to him.

Where a notice is sent by post, service of the notice shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing, prepaying, and posting a letter containing the notice and to have been effected in the case of a notice of a meeting at the expiration of 24 hours after the letter containing the same is posted, and in any other case at the time at which the letter would be delivered in the ordinary course of post.

[111] 104. If a member has no registered address within United Kingdom and has not supplied to the company an address within the United Kingdom for the giving of notice to him, a notice addressed to him and advertised in a newspaper circulating in the neighbourhood of the registered office of the company, shall be deemed to be duly given to him at noon on the day on which the advertisement appears.

[112] 105. A notice may be given by the company to the joint holders of a share by giving the notice to the joint holder named first in the register of members in respect of the share.

[113] 106. A notice may be given by the company to the persons entitled to a share in consequence of the death or bankruptcy of a member by sending if through the post in a prepaid letter addressed to them by name, or by the title of representatives of the deceased, or trustee of the bankrupt, or by any like description, at the address, if any, within the United Kingdom supplied for the purpose by the persons claiming to be so entitled, or (until such an address has been so supplied) by giving the notice in any manner in which the same might have been given if the death or bankruptcy had not occurred.

[114] 107. Notice of every general meeting shall be given in some manner hereinbefore authorised to (a) every member except those members who (having no registered address within the United Kingdom) have not supplied to the company an address within the United Kingdom for the giving of notice to them, and also to (b) every person entitled to a share in consequence of the death or bankruptcy of a member, who, but for his death or bankruptcy, would be entitled to receive notice of the meeting. When any provision of the Act is referred to the reference is to such provision as modified by any statute for the time being in force.

Unless the context otherwise requires, expressions defined in the Act or any statutory modification thereof in force at the date at which these regulations become binding on the company, shall have the meanings so defined.

Members.

2. The number of members with which the company proposes to be registered is 500, but the directors may from time to time register an increase of members.

3. The subscribers to the memorandum of association and such other persons as the directors shall admit to membership shall be members of the company.

General Meetings.

4. The first general meeting shall be held at such time, not being less than one month nor more than three months after the incorporation of the company, and at such place, as the directors may determine.

5. A general meeting shall be held once in every calendar year at such time (not being more than fifteen months after the holding of the last preceding general meeting) and place as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, or, in default, at such time in the third month following that in which the anniversary of the company's incorporation occurs, and at such place as the directors shall appoint. In default of a general meeting being so held, a general meeting shall be held in the month next following, and may be convened by any two members in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings are to be convened by the directors.

6. The above-mentioned general meetings shall be called ordinary general meetings; all other general meetings shall be called extraordinary general meetings.

7. The directors may, whenever they think fit, convene an extraordinary general meeting, and extraordinary general meetings shall also be convened on such requisition, or, in default, may be convened by such requisitionists, as provided by section 114 of the Act. If at any time there are not within the United Kingdom sufficient directors capable of acting to form a quorum, any director or any two members of the company may convene an extraordinary general meeting in the same manner as nearly as possible as that in which meetings may be convened by the directors.

Notice of General Meetings.

8. Subject to the provisions of section 117 (2) of the Act relating to special resolutions, seven days' notice at the least (exclusive of the day on which the notice is served or deemed to be served, but inclusive of the day for which notice is given) specifying the place, the day, and the hour of meeting and, in case of special business, the general nature of that business shall be given in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such other manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting, to such persons as are, under the regulations of the company, entitled to receive such notices from the company; but with the consent of all the members entitled to receive notice of some particular meeting, that meeting may be convened by such shorter notice and in such manner as those members may think fit.

9. The accidental omission to give notice of a meeting to, or the non-receipt of notice of a meeting by, any member shall not invalidate the proceeding at any meeting.

Proceedings at General Meetings.

10. All business shall be deemed special that is transacted at an extraordinary meeting and all that is transacted at an ordinary meeting, with the exception of the consideration of the accounts, balance sheets, and the ordinary report of the directors and auditors, the election of directors and other officers in the place of those retiring by rotation, and the fixing of the remuneration of the auditors.

11. No business shall be transacted at any general meeting unless a quorum of members is present at the time when the meeting proceeds to business; save as herein otherwise provided, three members personally present shall be a quorum.

12. If within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum is not present, the meeting, if convened upon the requisition of members, shall be dissolved; in any other case it shall stand adjourned to the same day in the next week, at the same time and place, and if at the adjourned meeting a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting the members present shall be a quorum.

14. If there is no such chairman, or if at any meeting he is not present within fifteen minutes after the time appointed for holding the meeting or is unwilling to act as chairman, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman.

15. The chairman may, with the consent of any meeting at which a quorum is present (and shall if so directed by the meeting), adjourn the meeting from time to time and from place to place, but no business shall be transacted at any adjourned meeting other than the business left unfinished at the meeting from which the adjournment took place. When a meeting is adjourned for ten days or more, notice of the adjourned meeting shall be given as in the case of an original meeting. Save as aforesaid it shall not be necessary to give any notice of an adjournment or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting.

16. At any general meeting a resolution put to the vote of the meeting shall be decided on a show of hands, unless a poll is (before or on the declaration of the result of the show of hands) demanded by at least two members present in person or by proxy entitled to vote and unless a poll is so demanded, a declaration by the chairman that a resolution has, on a show of hands, been carried, or carried unanimously, or by a particular majority, or lost, and an entry to that effect in the book of the proceedings of the company, shall be conclusive evidence of the fact, without proof of the number or proportion of the votes recorded in favour of, or against, that resolution.

17. If a poll is duly demanded it shall be taken in such manner as the chairman directs, and the result of the poll shall be deemed to be the resolution of the meeting at which the poll was demanded.

18. In the case of an equality of votes, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, the chairman of the meeting at which the show of hands takes place or at which the poll is demanded, shall be entitled to a second or casting vote.

19. A poll demanded on the election of a chairman, or on a question of adjournment, shall be taken forthwith. A poll demanded on any other question shall be taken at such time as the chairman of the meeting directs.

Votes of Members.

20. Every member shall have one vote.

21. A member of unsound mind, or in respect of whom an order has been made, any court having jurisdiction in lunacy, may vote, whether on a show of hands or on a poll, by his committee, curator bonis, or other person in the nature of a committee or curator bonis appointed by that court, and any such committee, curator bonis, or other person may, on a poll, vote by proxy.

23. On a poll votes may be given either personally or by proxy.

24. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the appointor or of his attorney duly authorised in writing, or, if the appointor is a corporation, either under the seal, or under the hand of an officer or attorney so authorised. 26. An instrument appointing a proxy may be in the following form, or any other form which the directors shall approve:—

——Company, Limited.

"I——, of——, in the county of——, being a member of the——Company, Limited, hereby appoint——, of——, as my proxy, to vote for me and on my behalf at the [ordinary or extraordinary, as the case may be] general meeting of the company, to be held on the——day of——, and at any adjournment thereof."

Signed this——day of——.

27. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be deemed to confer authority to demand or join in demanding a poll.

Corporations acting by Representatives at Meetings.

28. Any corporation which is a member of the company may by resolution of its directors or other governing body authorise such person as it thinks fit to act as its representative at any meeting of the company and the person so authorised shall be entitled to exercise the same powers on behalf of the corporation which he represents as that corporation could exercise if it were an individual member of the company.

Directors.

29. The number of directors and the names of the first directors shall be determined in writing by a majority of the subscribers to the memorandum.

30. The remuneration of the directors shall from time to time be determined by the company in general meeting.

Powers and Duties of Directors.

The business of the company shall be managed by the directors, who may pay all expenses incurred in getting up and registering the company, and may exercise all such powers of the company as are not, by the Act, or by these articles, required to be exercised by the company in general meeting, subject nevertheless to any regulation of these articles, to the provisions of the Act, and to such regulations, being not inconsistent with the aforesaid regulations or provisions, as may be prescribed by the company in general meeting; but no regulation made by the company in general meeting shall invalidate any prior act of the directors which would have been valid if that regulation had not been made.

32. The directors shall cause minutes to be made in books provided for the purpose—

(a) of all appointments of officers made by the directors;

(b) of the names of the directors present at each meeting of the directors and of any committee of the directors; and every director present at any meeting of directors or committee of directors shall sign his name in a book to be kept for that purpose.

The Seal.

33. The seal of the company shall not be affixed to any instrument except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors, and in the presence of a director and of the secretary or such other person as the directors may appoint for the purpose; and that director and the secretary or other person as aforesaid shall sign every instrument to which the seal of the company is so affixed in their presence.

Disqualification of Directors.

34. The office of director shall be vacated, if the director—

(a) without the consent of the company in general meeting holds any other office of profit under the company ; or

(d) is found lunatic or becomes of unsound mind ; or

(e) resigns his office by notice in writing to the company ;

(f) is directly or indirectly interested in any contract with the company and fails to declare the nature of his interest in manner required by section 149 of the Act.

A director shall not vote in respect of any contract in which he is interested or any matter arising thereout, and if he does so vote his vote shall not be counted.

Rotation of Directors.

35. At the first ordinary general meeting of the company the whole of the directors shall retire from office, and at the ordinary general meeting in every subsequent year one-third of the directors for the time being, or, if their number is not three or a multiple of three, then the number nearest one-third, shall retire from office,

36. The directors to retire in every year shall be those who have been longest in office since their last election but as between persons who became directors on the same day those to retire shall (unless they otherwise agree among themselves) be determined by lot.

37. A retiring director shall be eligible for re-election.

38. The company at the general meeting at which a director retire in manner aforesaid may fill up the vacated office by electing a person thereto and in default the retiring director shall be deemed to have been re-elected unless at such meeting it is resolved not to fill up such vacated office.

39. The company may from time to time in general meeting increase or reduce the number of directors, and may also determine in what rotation the increased or reduced number is to go out of office.

40. Any casual vacancy occurring in the board of directors may be filled up by the directors but the person so chosen shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

41. The directors shall have power at any time, and from time to time, to appoint a person as an additional director who shall retire from office at the next following ordinary general meeting, but shall be eligible for election by the company at the meeting as an additional director.

42. The company may by extraordinary resolution remove any director before the expiration of his period of office, and may by an ordinary resolution appoint another person in his stead. The person so appointed shall be subject to retirement at the same time as if he had become a director on the day on which the director in whose place he is appointed was last elected a director.

Proceedings of Directors.

43. The directors may meet together for the despatch of business, adjourn, and otherwise regulate their meeting, as they think fit. Questions arising at any meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes. In case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote. A director may, and the secretary on the requisition of a director shall, at any time summon a meeting of the directors.

44. The quorum necessary for the transaction of the business of the directors may be fixed by the directors, and unless so fixed shall, when the number of directors exceed three, be three and shall, when the number of directors does not exceed three, be two.

45. The continuing directors may act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body, but, if and so long as their number is reduced below the number fixed by or pursuant to the regulations of the company as the necessary quorum of directors, the continuing directors may act for the purpose of increasing the number of directors to that number, or of summoning a general meeting of the company, but for no other purpose.

46. The directors may elect a chairman of their meetings and determine the period for which he is to hold office; but, if no such chairman is elected, or if at any meeting the chairman is not present within five minutes after the time appointed for holding the same, the directors present may choose one of their number to be chairman of the meeting.

47. The directors may delegate any of their powers to committees consisting of such member or members of their body as they think fit; any committee so formed shall, in the exercise of the powers so delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed on them by the directors.

49. A committee may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions arising at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present, and in case of an equality of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

50. All acts done by any meeting of the directors or of a committee of directors, or by any person acting as a director, shall, notwithstanding that it be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such directors or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a director.

Accounts.

51. The directors shall cause proper books of account to be kept with respect to—
